RIDDLE OF ANGELA DAVIS

Ex-Intimates Recall Traits

By JACK V. FOX
United Press International
(Fourth of Five Articles)

When Angela Davis came back to the United States in 1967 after two years in Germany to study again under Prof. Herbert Marcuse at the University of California in San Diego, she lived for almost a year with another graduate student, his wife and their infant son.

The young man was Barry Shapiro, who also was working under Marcuse toward a PhD in philosophy. Shapiro had rented an old house at Cardiff-by-the-Sea north of the campus and he subleased a big downstairs room with an ocean view to Angela.

Miss Davis, now so much in the public eye, still remains pretty much a two dimensional figure —brilliant intellectual, fiery black militant. Of all the dozens of people UPI correspondents talked with in tracing her life. Shapiro was one of the few able — or willing — to talk about her as a woman behind the ultra serious front of intellectualism and political advocacy.

Shapiro found her warm, easy to be around, quick to become involved with the joys and problems of other people.

"I remember her teaching our baby, Aaron, how to walk and talk when he was only six or eight months old," Shapiro recalls.

"My wife, Evelyn, and I would get in fights, I guess like all young people, some pretty bitter, arguments. Angela would listen and then she would stop us and say: Do you know you argued just the opposite the other day and now you have switched completely around? You sound pretty silly. And we would calm down."

Angela would often have the evening meal with the Shapiros,

Residents Terrified Of Killer

GRASS VALLEY (UPI)— "Terrified" residents of the wild Sierra Nevada foothills armed themselves Wednesday as a maniacal killer who hacked two persons to death remained at large.

Sheriff Wayne Brown said his small office at Nevada City was deluged with calls from residents of the Mother Lode gold country seeking information about gun permits and providing "leads" to the killer.

The powerfully built middleaged man with thinning gray hair, "laughing, grumbling and growling like an animal," roamed through a campground on the Bear River Monday night with a sickle and machete, killing a man and woman and wounding three others.

"People up here are just terrified," said District Attorney Harold Berliner. "This is the kind of country where people are used to leaving their doors open and letting their children sleep in the back yard."

Instead, worried housewives in the area near the murder site were telephoning deputies asking if they could buy and keep a gun. They were told they could if they kept the gun visible at all times. Deputies also urged them to keep their doors and windows locked at night.

"These people are frightened —and I mean frightened," said Deputy Ronald Parscali.

The sheriff's office was checking out "thousands" of leads from citizens, searching for physical clues at the blood-spattered Dog Bar campground and questioning miners and hermits living in the remote foothills. Brown called off a ground search for the killer, saying a manhunt in the thick woods and wilderness was "hopeless."

Among the leads checked out by the deputies was a report by a California Division of Forestry employe that he saw a man fitting the slayer's description Tuesday night near Rollins Lake, about five miles from the murder scene. The worker said the man was "just walking around."

Undersheriff Frank Gallino said his men "haven't pinned anything down on this. We're turning over every rock, believe me, but we have nothing firm at all."

Sheriff Brown went to Auburn to question Kenneth Garbe, 20, who was slashed in his tent before the killer attacked his two victims at their nearby tents. Killed were Mrs. Donna Fitzhugh, 28, Ontario, Calif., and John Simmons, 29, Weimar, Calif.

Mrs. Martha Marie Parker, 25, Walnut, Calif., who was nearly decapitated and reported near death Tuesday, remained in critical condition today but doctors said she was showing slight improvement.

FIRE DESTROYS HOUSE, TIMBER

Forest Knolls Blaze Spreads Up Steep Ravine; Aid Called To Combat Flames

Fire of undetermined origin yesterday destroyed a small house in Forest Knolls, then spread up a steep ravine devouring five acres of timber and brush.

Damage to the house was estimated by firemen at $5,000 and $4,000 to the contents. No estimate was made of the value of the timber destroyed.

The fire was first noticed at 1:54 p.m. by Leonard Epstein on Mount Barnabe lookout.

Dennison said that he was alone in the swimming pool on the far side of the larger house, and could not hear anything because of the pool filter running. "When I heard the fire and went up to the house, the windows had all blown out and flames were coming out of them," he said.

The fire had already started up the ravine and burned the first big pine tree, he said.

He ran back to the other house to turn in the alarm, but the first fire truck arrived at that time.

Before the fire was brought under control at 4:45 p.m., the Marin County Fire Department had 10 of its trucks, and two bulldozers on the fire. They were aided by a Civil Defense truck from Kentfield, a Nicasio volunteer fire department truck, four borate tanker planes and one spotter plane from the state Division of Forestry.

In addition, approximately 50 to 60 volunteers helped the 40 firemen stretch hoses and battle the blaze with shovels.

"When I saw the way the fire was spreading up the hillside, I called for help from the bombers to stop it before it went down the other side to Tamal Road," said Fire Chief Richard D. Pedroli.

He estimated that the fire could have endangered 20 to 30 houses and a private campground occupied by about 125 boys and girls and staff members.

One of the firemen said that the fire came within 100 yards of the first house off Tamal Road.

The Marin County Fire Department had 10 men on the fire all night and mopping up operations was to continue today, the chief said.

Dennison said that he was a music student and the larger house was rented by two other musicians, Robert Watson and Robert Johnson. They used the living room of the smaller house for a studio.

"We lost at least $2,000 worth of musical instruments, but probably closer to $4,000 worth," Dennison said. In addition, he lost all of his personal belongings.

Connally: Economic Comeback

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Treasury secretary John B. Connally, newly designated as President Nixon's chief economic spokesman, said today the economy is making a strong comeback from last year's recession although some soft spots may remain.

"You can't come to any conclusion but what we are engaged in is an expansion of considerable proportions," said Connally. "It is broad in its sweep and deep in its track."

But Connally conceded that during the next few months, there would be some bad news mixed with the good:

"If people just want to be pessimistic; if they want to look at things they can be downhearted about, I think they will be able to do it."

At his first general news conference since he became the only Democrat in Nixon's Cabinet last February, Connally declined to be overly specific on the economic situation.

On unemployment, Connally said the administration had not changed its prediction that the jobless rate could be cut from almost 6 per cent of the labor force to 4.5 per cent by the middle of next year. But in the next breath he said, "I'm not prepared to say that we are going to meet the goal."

On inflation, Connally said the rate of price increases "should stabilize" this year. Asked if he expected it to stabilize at the 7.2 per cent annual rate recorded in May, he replied that the present rate "is closer to 3 per cent." But he declined to predict inflation at that rate either.

Connally also reiterated that the administration had ruled out wage-price controls to combat inflation and a tax cut or a massive increase in spending to spur the economy and cut unemployment.

Connally said earlier it was a myth to talk of unemployment at the full-employment rate of 4 per cent. He said that rate had never been achieved except in wartime.

"I did not say that was my view," he said. "I was reporting historical facts. We're going to work to get it to 4 per cent. Then we're going to work to get it lower than that."

Can it be cut to 4 per cent or less?

"Sure, I think so."

When?

"I don't know. It depends upon many factors. I think we can achieve anything we set our mind on."

U.S. Offers Bid To Thaw Peace Talks; Reds Balk

Ambassador Bruce Proposes Cease-Fire In All Of Indochina

PARIS (UPI) — The United States offered what it called a new approach today aimed at unfreezing the Vietnam peace conference including a cease-fire throughout Indochina. It said the Communists failed to respond constructively.

David K.E.Bruce, the chief American negotiator at the Paris talks, suggested at today's weekly meeting of the conference a cease-fire while the July 1 Communist peace proposals are discussed.

He again urged a restricted, nonpublic meeting to discuss the Communist plan. But he emerged from today's four-hour session and told newsmen, "I sought to elicit some clarification of their proposals, past and present, but without any response.

"Nor did I get any answer to the questions I put to them. They pursued their usual false propaganda and reasserted their usual preconditions."

Among other things, the Communist plan calls for releasing the approximately 450 American prisoners of war and withdrawing all U.S troops in Vietnam before the end of this year.

The United States has called in the past for cease-fires, notably last Oct. 7, when President Nixon called for a "cease-fire in place" during an expanded peace conference.

The new Communist peace plan calls only for a cease-fire between the Vietnamese Communists and U.S. forces. Bruce, in effect, was widening that to include a cease-fire by all forces, allied and Communist, throughout all of Indochina—Laos and Cambodia as well as Vietnam.

The Communists in recent interviews have insisted that to enlarge their cease-fire proposal would simply be a delaying tactic.

On the same grounds, that the United States is stalling, the Communists last week refused to hold a restricted meeting.

Today, the Communists said the Nixon Administration's chief reaction so far to their proposals has been to step up the fighting and reassert sup-

Ellsberg Asks Court To Bar Extradition

BOSTON (UPI)—A federal magistrate took under advisement today a motion by lawyers for Dr. Daniel Ellsberg to dismiss a government request that Ellsberg be ordered to California to stand trial for leaking secret Pentagon papers to the press.

Magistrate Peter W. Princi said he would "obviously need more time" to inspect Ellsberg's contention that the government's case against him was obtained through allegedly illegal electronic eavesdropping.

Princi continued the hearing to July 23 to give Ellsberg's attorneys time to prepare a rebuttal to arguments by Assistant U.S. Attorney Lawrence Cohen that Ellsberg's arguments about why the removal order should be not granted are invalid.

Lawyers for Ellsberg, a former Pentagon and State Department aide who is now a senior research associate at the Center for International Studies at Massachusetts Institute of Technology, filed the motion Tuesday that was the basis of arguments at today's hearing.

Ellsberg's chief attorney, Leonard B. Boudin, argued the evidence of wiretapping should be brought out at the removal hearing in Boston rather than at a trial in Los Angeles.

Cohen argued that the U.S. District Court here does not have jurisdiction over the wiretapping charge. He said the defendant would have full opportunity to present evidence of eavesdropping in the Central District for California.

Asked for his reaction to today's court proceedings, Ellsberg said, "It's new to me. I'm just learning all the time."

About 50 reporters and spectators watched the proceedings. Identities were checked at the door and all handbags were searched and men's coats were frisked as persons entered the courtroom.

Transit Union May Add To Nation's Labor Woes

By U.P.INTERNATIONAL

Faced with threats of mass firings and pay cuts, the 180,000-member United Transportation Union today made plans to add to the nation's labor woes by striking at least two railroads Friday over a work rule dispute.

Half a million telephone workers remained off their jobs today in the second day of a strike against the American Telephone and Telegraph Co. (AT&T). No negotiations were scheduled.

A spokesman for the strikers' union said however that union bargaining committees would be meeting with representatives of individual Bell System companies today and that some such sessions were held Wednesday.

Strikes also continued in the copper, shipping, telegraph and farm equipment industries, and complicating the labor scene were contract talks involving 350,000 steel workers and 650,000 postal workers in Washington.

Union Pacific and the Southern Railway are the targets of the UTU's walkout, but the union also wants to strike the Chicago & North Western Railway. Whether they will be able to strike the C&NW depends on a court hearing today in Chicago on an injunction issued by a federal judge preventing the strike until July 23.

As a result of the threatened strike, the railroads announced Wednesday they would impose the new work rules on all railroads not hit by the strike, would fire thousands of UTU members and cut paychecks of others.

The mass walkout by 500,000 Communications Workers of America Wednesday morning had little effect on normal telephone service, except for delays when calling information or in operator assisted calls.

In a cross-country chek, UPI bureaus reported waiting up to 2 1-2 minutes to reach an information operator, with lesser delays for operator-assisted credit card or person-to-person long distance calls.

Bagley Bill For Angela Trial Relief To Floor

I-J Special Report

SACRAMENTO — Legislation requiring the state to pay part of the costs for the Davis-Magee trial went to the Assembly floor yesterday after clearing the ways and means committee in a split voice vote.

Sstate officials variously estimated the potential cost to the state from $350,000 to $1 million under the bill (AB 644) by Assemblyman William T. Bagley, R-San Rafael.

The measure adds conspiracy to escape from prison to those offenses for which the state must reimburse trial costs. Angela Davis and Ruchell Magee are charged with murder, kidnapping and conspiracy in connection with the shoot-out last Aug. 7 at the Civic Center in which Judge Harold J. Haley and three others died.

None of these charges, however, qualified the trial for state reimbursement, the attorney general ruled last month.

The state reimburses counties for the costs of investigation and preparation of a trial as well as for hearings and the trial itself.

But the issue of whether security costs are included has remained unclear, thus Marin probably would get only partial reimbursement even if Bagley's

North Italy Hit By Quake: 2 Die

The earthquake rolled across the Italian peninsula from sea to sea, jarring Genoa, Venice, Milan, Padua, Bologna, Parma, Florence and other cities within a 25,000-square mile area.

Police said many persons were injured during wild scrambles into open fields. One man died of a heart attack and another was killed in the city of Reggio Emilia. The quake registered between 2 and 4 on the 12-point Mercalli scale.

WIRE NEWS BRIEFS From Everywhere

Sleeping Sickness

BROWNSVILLE, Tex. (UPI) —A rare sleeping sickness that has killed thousands of horses in a sweep from South America across Mexico and into Texas, has begun afflicting humans.

Thirty-four persons were hospitalized in Texas' lower Rio Grande Valley with symptoms of the disease. Doctors said three of them were confirmed cases of Venezuelan equine encephomyelitis. The others were awaiting laboratory confirmation.

The disease is not as dangerous to humans as it to horses, health authorities said.

Scores of stricken horses fell dead in South Texas. Local authorities ordered ranchers to bury the animals where they lay.

Rodeos, horse races and county fairs were canceled.

The U.S. Department of Agriculture placed a quarantine on Texas, restricting the movement of horses from the state to those vaccinated 14 days before.

Congo Is Next

NAIROBI, Kenya (UPI)— Vice President Spiro T. Agnew ended a leisurely visit to Kenya today and set off for the Congo, the third African nation on his round-the-world diplomatic mission for President Nixon.

As he did in Ethiopia and Kenya, Agnew will meet with leaders in the Congolese capital of Kinshasa. They are strong allies of the United States and no important problems need to be resolved.

However, the discussions with President Joseph Mobutu — unlike the talks with President Jomo Kenyatta of Kenya which were informal and devoid of substantive issues —likely will be more significant, Agnew aides said.

Mobutu, who has ruled the Congo for six years, can be expected to renew his plea for more American investment in the Congo, Africa's second largest nation, they said.

Strike Halted

MOSCOW (UPI) —Police broke up a public hunger strike by 44 Soviet Jews today and held about 30 of them in custody, possibly for forcible return to their native Soviet Georgian republic, Jewish sources said.

They said 50 to 100 policemen entered the central telegraph building, where the Jews had been fasting since Monday, at about 4 a.m. and led the protesters out without a struggle.

The Jews were demonstrating for the right to go to Israel.

The police took the entire group to a nearby sobering-up station — there are common in Moscow. There, 10 Muscovite Jews were freed about noon after receiving warnings of "serious punishment or further Zionist demonstrations," the sources said.

Factory Output

WASHINGTON (UPI)—The output of the nation's factories, mines and utilities increased in June for the fourth straight month but the pace of the advance indicated that recovery from last year's recession continues to be gradual.

The Federal Reserve Board said its industrial production index rose to 167.9 per cent of the 1957-59 average in June, up 0.4 per cent from May.

But the June index remained 3.8 per cent below the all time peak recorded in July, 1969 and was 0.5 per cent below the figure for August, the final full month before last fall's twomonth auto strike.

Rabat Roundup

RABAT (UPI)—King Hassan II said Wednesday night all the conspirators in Saturday's attempt to overthrow him have been rounded up in a countrywide manhunt by police and soldiers.

Moroccan sources said more than 1,000 civilians have been arrested, besides the mutinous soldiers that tried to assassinate the king and seize control of the government.

They said 260 rebel and loyalist troops and civilians died in the fighting that broke out when rebel soldiers invaded Hassan's summer palace during his 42nd birthday celebration firing machineguns and rockets.

Ten high-ranking officers, among them four generals, were executed by firing squad Tuesday, and more appeared likely.

The Libyan ambassador, Col. Yousef El-Shibani, was under house arrest because of Libya's declaration of support for the rebels, and severance of relations with Morocco. Diplomatic sources in Rabat said, however, Hassan did not plan to mirror Tripoli's move, in the interest of preserving Arab unity as much as possible.

Removing Gas

NAHA, Okinawa (UPI)—The U.S. Army today began moving nearly 13,000 tons of poison gas from Okinawa to Johnston Island in mid-Pacific.

A convoy of seven flatbed trucks carrying artillery shells and mortar rounds filled with mustard gas traveled without incident over and eight-mile route to a Navy pier where the gas was loaded aboard a Navy vessel.

The convoy was the first to transport the gas off Okinawa since January when U.S. authorities moved 150 tons of gas to Johnston Island, a 700-acre island in the middle of the Pacific.

Murder Figure 'Candy' Mossler Marries Again

HOUSTON (UPI) —Candace "Candy" Mossler, 51, who was found innocent five years ago of the murder of her millionaire husband Jacques, was married Wednesday to Barnett Garrison, 32, her third husband.

Garrison is a self-employed electrical contractor.

The former Mrs. Mossler was tried with her nephew Melvin Lane Powers with conspiring to kill Mossler, 69, who was stabbed to death in 1964 in his Miami apartment.

The two defendants were acquitted in 1966.

Mossler left his fortune to his wife and she now manages several investment corporations.

Ford, VW Buses Hit For Crash Protection

WASHINGTON (UPI) —Consumers Union said today its tests of bus-type station wagons turned up safety shortcomings including "grossly inadequate" crash protection in Volkswagen and Ford models.

The report, released to newsmen in advance of its scheduled publication in the August issue of Consumer Reports magazine, said Dodge and Chevrolet bus wagons provide "marginal" protection of passengers in a front end crash.

"Don't buy one unless you absolutely need all the load capacity they offer," the article said of bus wagons.

"CU (Consumers Union) has grave doubts about the safety of such vehicles," the article said. "The ability of the Chevrolet and Dodge to protect occupants adequately in a frontend crash is marginal, in CU's view.

"Protection in the Ford and the VW is so grossly inadequate that we rated these two buses not acceptable. Further, the Ford's brakes were so poor that we judged that vehicle not acceptable on those grounds, too. And the VW has so much difficulty keeping up with highway traffic as to present a hazard not only to its occupants but to occupants of vehicles that share the road with it.

"We also judged that under some conditions lethal exhaust fumes could seep into the passenger compartments of the Dodge, the Ford and the VW buses."

CU said adequate crash protection requires at least two feet of "frontal collapse distance" —the structure between the driver and the vehicle's front.

Volkswagen disputed the finding. "Our engineers, using test data compiled from scores of barrier crash tests, conducted in accordance with federal standards, have designed into our vehicle's structure energy absorbing elements to protect occupants in frontal collisions," Volkswagen said in a statement.

"Thus the VW bus complies with all federal barrier crash standards required for passenger cars even though under the law all such bus type vehicles are exempt from compliance," the firm added.

SAFETY QUESTIONED — In a story released yesterday by Consumers Union, with headquarters in Washington, said tests of bus-type station wagons turned up safety shortcomings including "grossly inadequate" crash protection in Volkswagen (top) and Ford (below) models. Called "marginal" were Dodge and Chevrolet bus wagons. (UPI Telephoto)

Cambodia Asks Death Penalty In Trial Of Sihanouk's Sons

PHNOM PENH (UPI)—The Cambodian government Wednesday asked for the death penalty for two sons of deposed Prince Norodom Sihanouk. They are charged with political murder and collaboration with the enemy.

The royal children sat passively in a packed military courtroom when charges against them and 11 other Cambodians were read, and the death penalty demanded.

Most of the session was taken up by legal manuevring and defense motions to dismiss the cases against the 13.

Prosecution and defense lawyers agreed the trial would last at least three days.

One of Sihanouk's sons facing trial Wednesday, Nordom Naradipm, 25, was convicted last April 6 of high treason, and is serving a five-year jail sentence.

The second royal child, Norodom Ranarith, 27, a former university of Phnom Penh law student, has been under house arrest since last Dec. 21 for his alleged terrorist activities.

Prosecution sources said that Naradipo was in charge of fiances for the terrorists organization and that he delivered $1,000 from a Chinese businessman in the Cambodian capital to his accomplices.

Ranarith was accused of supplying grenades and explosives to the other terrorists the sources said.

One of six defense lawyers, Prem Nogin, said the Chinese financier, Yi Bun Hak, had been tortured to death by Cambodian military police during interrogation.

She said the defendants had told judges of the alleged beating during a preliminary hearing, but that the judges had not made a record of the hearing.

Many Sihanouk relatives, including a former wife of the prince, crowded into the courtroom with newsmen and the curious to watch the trial.

Sihanouk himself is in Peking, heading a government in exile. He has been sentenced to death in absentia for high treason.

A Breakthrough In Cancer Work

STANFORD (UPI) —A discovery made by scientists at Stanford University about living cells and how they repair themselves may make X-ray treatment of cancer more effective.

They found the mutant was deficient in a repair mechanism of its DNA molecule —the molecule which gives living cells their hereditary "instructions."

DNA repair systems "seem to be the major factor controlling cell sensitivity to radiation," the scientists said.

The discovery indicates the possibility of combining radiation and drugs "to selectively inhibit the repair of damage" to cancer cells.

Fighting Is Continuing In Jordan

U. P. INTERNATIONAL

Fresh fighting broke out between Arab guerrillas and Jordanian army forces in Jordan today, the third straight day of clashes. A Cairo newspaper said Egypt was ready to intervene politically to prevent a bloodbath. Israeli troops caught up with a six-man Arab guerrilla squad believed responsible for the July 7 rocket attack that killed four persons in a Tel Aviv suburb. The military command said the Israelis "wiped out" the guerrillas.

The command said the Israeli forces caught the guerrillas about midnight Tuesday in the Jordan valley. "In the exchange of fire the six terrorists were killed."

A guerrilla spokesman in Beirut said the Jordanian army "has been waging a concentrated attack against our bases in Jerash and Ajloun areas after an all-night, non-stop shelling." It was the third day of fighting in the area 28 miles north of the Jordanian napital of Amman.

The semiofficial Cairo newspaper Al Ahram said "the situation in Jordan has reached a point which the national and human conscience can no longer bear."

It said Egypt "is ready to intervene morally, politically and financially to prevent the bloodbath to which the Palestinian masses are being subjected."

Israel celebrated its 23rd Air Force Day today, coupling the public demonstrationhof its air strength with an appeal to the United States for additional Phantom jet fighters.

Dance Tomorrow

A dance featuring music by the Bronze Hog will be held at 8:30 p.m. tomorrow at the Rohnert Park Junior High School multi-use room. The event is sponsored by the Rohnert Park Recreation Department.

Creation Of Life Beyond The Earth?

WASHINGTON (UPI)—The National Science Foundation has reported for the first time that the elements for creation of life as known on earth may exist in other parts of the universe.

A 34-year-old radioastronomer, Dr. Leonid N. Weliachew, made the discovery of a molecule identified as OH, or hydroxyl, outside the Milky Way galaxy, the foundation announced Wednesday.

Interstellar hydroxyl was first discovered eight years ago in the extremely rarefied dust clouds of the milky way galaxy of 100 billion stars. Since then more than a dozen complex pre-life chemicals have been detected in the milky way, which includes earth and the sun.

Weliachew, a French scientist who is a visiting research fellow at the California Institute of Technology, made the discovery while observing an exploding galaxy and another star family about 60 billion miles from earth.

The OH molecule revealed its presence to Weliachew because of the unique way in which it absorbs radio waves, the foundation said. The molecule discovered by Weliachew outside the Milky Way and other molecules known previously to exist within the milky way are precursors of amino acids, which are the building blocks of living things on earth.

New Twist To Lockheed Issue

WASHINGTON (UPI) —Rep. Wright Patman, D-Tex., chairman of the house banking committee, has evidence that at least one large bank would loan money to ailing Lockheed Aircraft Corp. without a government guaranteed loan.

Patman said the bank, a Lockheed creditor he otherwise would not identify, told him it preferred the guarantee to accompany the loan but could help Lockheed without such backing.

Patman called 24 bank spokesmen to his committee today to discuss the pending Lockheed request for a $250 million loan guarantee which the aerospace giant says it needs to avoid bankruptcy. Those banks already have loaned Lockheed $400 million.

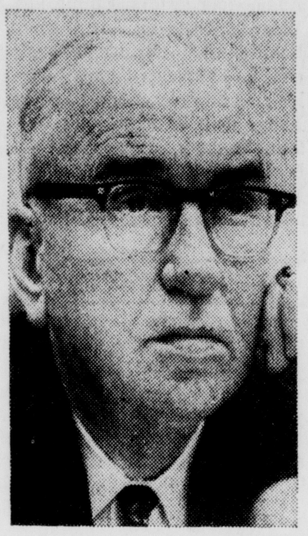
Patman says that he wants Lockheed to exhaust all its efforts to get private financing without government aid before his committee approves a bill.

But at a National Press Club news conference Wednesday night, Patman said it was too late to send Lockheed back to private investors because there is too much sentiment in the House to provide some form of aid to Lockheed. Patman predicted that the House would pass an aid bill to Lockheed before Congress takes a month-long recess in August.

In the Senate, Democratic Leader Mike Mansfield, DMont., cast doubt on Senate action on a $2 billion loan bill for Lockheed and any other financially- troubled corporations before September.

Patman told the Press Club that "Lockheed had no business coming to the Congress before it had exhausted all of its resources and had fully determined whether or not it could obtain credit in the private markets."

The 24 banks will not advance further funds without the government guaranteeing losses in case of default, Lockheed Board Chairman Daniel J. Haughton told Patman Wednesday.



REP. WRIGHT PATMAN
Calls in Lockheed bankers

"Every single welfare recipient in this nation is required to reveal his finances," Patman said, "to use all of his own resources and to make every attempt on his own before the government steps in with assistance."

He said he is "not willing to require more of a poor family on welfare than I am for a giant corporation like Lockheed."

But Patman conceded that many House members feel Lockheed's collapse could cause serious economic problems. Some, Patman said, fear a depression could result from the failure of the company.

Hub Petition Asks Raises For Police

The Irate Taxpayers of Marin submitted a petition with 24 signatures to the City of San Anselmo yesterday urging it grant salary increases to police officers and firemen.

According to Susan Tennler, an officer in the taxpayers' group, more than 400 persons have signed such a petition but their signatures were withheld to save residents from "being harassed by the city council which has happened in the past."

They will be submitted, along with any additional signatures collected, at a city council meeting requested in the petition to reconsider the salary issue.

Mrs. Tennler said that during her morning meeting with City Administrator Alfred C. Kaeppel, however, no assurance was given that the petition would be taken up by the council.

Kaeppel yesterday reiterated the city's position in the salary dispute saying San Anselmo cannot afford pay raises this year.

Any public meeting on the dispute, he said, is up to the councilmen.

Air Strikes, Battle Flare Up In Vietnam

SAIGON (UPI)—The U.S. Command today reported a renewal of heavy air strikes over South Vietnam's northern quarter and the first sizeable ground fighting involving American troops in a week.

Military spokesmen also said 29 Americans were killed in Vietnam last week, a surprisingly high figure considering the lack of ground fighting the past seven days.

Thirteen of the deaths were men who died of wounds and GIs previously listed as missing.

Field reports said meanwhile that South Vietnamese engineers had finished rebuilding Fire Base Fuller, a mountaintop outpost overrun June 23 by the North Vietnamese. American advisers were sent back to the renovated base along with a South Vietnamese infantry company.

Despite the rebuilding of Fuller, South Vietnamese Gen. Vu Van Giai said he was not sure large installations were a good idea and that he might abandon them once the last Americans leave.

Giai is in command of Operation Lam Son 720 aimed at blocking North Vietnamese infiltration across the DMZ. He said he prefers to keep his men moving to prevent the North Vietnamese from pounding such outposts with artillery and rockets.

On the war fronts, U.S. Air Force and Navy fighterbombers flew 4 missions in South Vietnam's northern quarter Wednesday, more than four times the number Monday and Tuesday when a tropical storm curtailed such missions. B52 bombers flew two raids both in the northwest corner of the country around the abandoned Khe Sanh base.

American GIs returned to ground fighting for the first time in a week in two battles in which they killed a total of 14 North Vietnamese and Viet Cong. One American died.

'Flag Duty' For Jailed Prankster

ALEXANDRIA, La. (UPI)— Dennis G. Hohm, 19, an airman who admitted he stole an American flag from a residence as a prank on July 4th, was sentenced Wednesday to flag duty and jail for 20 days.

Judge Field V. Gremillion first set the sentence at 30 days in jail, but reduced it by 10 days if Hohm agreed to help lower and raise the courthouse flag while he was serving his time. Hohm agreed.

Supreme Court Busier Writing More Opinions

WASHINGTON (UPI) —The justices of the Supreme Court talked a lot more in the term ended June 30 than they did the previous term. They wrote 291 opinions in 126 cases.

Official statistics show 151 cases were argued from October to June. Twenty-two were decided by brief, unsigned opinions. Three will be reargued next term. In the 1969-70 term the court heard 144 cases and handled them in only 227 opinions.

Justice William O. Douglas, always a prolific opinion writer, wrote 52 in the term just ended. The fact that 28 were dissents— up from 23 last term—indicated the new conservative trend of the court.

Douglas wrote 14 opinions for the court, 8 concurring opinions and two "separate" opinions, which merely gave his views with no official label.

Chief Justice Warren E. Burger, who has heavy administrative duties both inside and outside the court, wrote the fewest—20.

Marinwood CSD Budget Is Adopted

The Marinwood Community Services District Board has adopted a $241,761 budget for the current fiscal year, up $39,296 from last year's budget of $202,465.

A 5 per cent increase in salaries and the addition of one fireman, are mainly responsible for the increase, according to Secretary Genevieve T. Bolding. Salaries increased from $119,827 last year to $145,245, she said.

The tax rate was decreased from $1.23 last year to $1.20 per $100 assessed valuation this year, she said. However, the smaller tax rate will bring in more money because of the increase in assessed valuation, she said.

Department budgets for fiscal 1971-72 with 1970-71 figures in parentheses are: fire department, $100,253 ($85,330); parks and recreation department, $127,883 ($105,205), and street lighting and auditing of elections, $13,625 ($11,930).

Other items included in the budget are $5,500 for remodeling the community service building and $4,500 for a new tennis court, according to Mrs. Bolding.

Hope Fades For Pact In Mill Valley Strike

Mill Valley's city employee strike turned two weeks old today with the hope of a settlement fading after yesterday's negotiating session was cancelled abruptly.

A spokesman for the 38 striking employees said city negotiator Earl Leslie called off the meeting, explaining that he had to stay all day in the San Francisco office of his employer, Industrial Employers and Distributors Association. The spokesman added, however, that repeated telephone calls to that office went unanswered.

Neither Leslie nor City Mgr. William H. Cunningham could be reached today for an explanation as to why the meeting was cancelled.

City workers have been on strike since July 1 over what they say is a failure by the city to negotiate in good faith for wage and fringe benefit requests. Police and firemen are not involved.

The employees, members of the Mill Valley Employees Association, American Federation of State, County and Municipal Employees, said they do not know when another negotiating session will be held.

Employees had said they expected progress at yesterday's canceled meeting and rumors had circulated that a settlement in Marin's first municipal employees strike might be in the offing.

Meanwhile, a spokesman for Mill Valley police said his department has been promised by the city a wage increase equal to or greater than any finally negotiated with striking employees.

The spokesman, Sgt. Robert J. Dyche, said police representatives have met twice with the city negotiator but further meetings have been postponed until the strike is settled.

Dyche said the raises granted striking employees will serve as a base for contract discussions between police and the city, with the possibility of an even greater salary boost.

Police and firemen elected to conduct their own negotiations this year although striking employees say members of those two departments are sympathetic to the union.

COSTS

Bagley was not expected to face any difficulty in getting Assembly approval for his bill.

Getting it out of the committee yesterday, however, took a strong plea by the assemblyman. Complete silence met the first few calls by committee chairman Willie L. Brown, D-San Francisco, for a motion to approve it. Bagley, a member of the committee, finally had to make the motion himself.

Both the departments of finance and corrections opposed the bill, citing the liability to the state. The department of Finance estimated the cost to the state at between $800,000 and $1 million, while the legislative analyst's office set the cost at between $350,000 and $800,000.

Meanwhile, Miss Davis met today in the Marin County Jail with the Soledad Brothers who were brought over from San Quentin along with Magee.

She had met earlier with one of them, George Jackson, but this was the first conference with the other two, Fleeta Drumgo and John Cluchette.

Miss Davis is accused of conspiring to kidnap the judge and others in order to gain freedom for the three men, who are charged with killing a guard at Soledad Prison.

Her attorneys had declared that it was necessary for her defense that such meetings be held.

In San Francisco yesterday, Miss Davis contended in a writ to the State District Court of Appeals that her confinement is unlawful and unconstitutional.

She asked the appellate court to hold a hearing and then order Judge Richard E. Arnason to set bail. Arnason, a Contra Costa County jurist, is currently presiding over pretrial proceedings in Marin Superior Court.

He ruled last month that the former instructor is ineligible for bail and also said there is enough evidence to hold her for trial. The later ruling has also been appealed.

Proceedings in the oft-delayed case are set to resume Monday.

Vote On Pay Is Not Unanimous

The Independent-Journal erred yesterday in reporting that a three year contract giving 7.5 per cent, 5 per cent and 5 per cent pay raises for Marin County employees for the next three years was unanimously approved by the Marin County Board of Supervisors Tuesday.

Chairman Louis H. Baar cast the lone dissenting vote, explaining he thinks 7.5 per cent raise for this year is too much because the cost-of-living rise was about 4 per cent at most.

All bargaining units came to terms with the county with three year contracts similar to the one approved by the Marin County employees association. The only exception was the Deputy Sheriff's Association, which settled for a 6.25 per cent raise for this year only, with further negotiations for next year.

should not be removed to California because it would work an undue hardship upon him. However, Boudin dropped the argument in the court appearance and relied solely upon the eavesdropping motion to combat extradition.

The motion asked that the government be required to disclose to defense counsel whether any oral or written communications between Ellsberg and his attorneys or any other person have been "seized, recorded, transcribed, intercepted, photographed or overheard by means of personal eavesdropping, telephonic wiretapping, electronic or mechanical device of any kind."

Defense counsel asked the magistrate to hold a hearing to determine whether any such communications were seized "in violation of the defendant's rights to privacy," and whether the arrest warrant and indictment against Ellsberg are "in any way the fruits or products of such unlawful conduct by the government."

LABOR

lence and vandalism occurred.

Fire late Wednesday destroyed an Illinois Bell Telphone Co. garage at Elgin, Ill., but fire officials would not speculate on the cause of the blaze.

Service was hampered Wednesday when supervisory personnel reported they were unable to get through picket lines at Bradford and Charleroi, Pa. Service to 230 customers in West Miami, Fla., was knocked out when someone stuffed a junction box with rags and set them on fire. At Broward County, Fla., 20 persons were arrested on charges of blocking access to a telephone building.

AT&T officials said they believed they had been very close to reaching an agreement before the strike began, but union president Joseph A. Beirne said any settlement now would take at least two weeks to be approved by the union.

The third week of a nationwide copper strike began today with federally-sponsored negotiations underway between unions and three major firms and stalled with a fourth.

Talks continued between the United Steel Workers, representing 25 other unions, and Anaconda Copper at Helena, Mont., and American Smelting and Refining at San Francisco. Kennecott Copper at Salt Lake City continued negotiations on local issues. In Washington, talks with Phelps-Dodge were recessed until the near future.

The copper strike has idled 39,000 workers.

A strike by the International Longshoremen's and Warehousemen's Union at 25 West Coast ports entered its 15th day with hundreds of ships idle and no negotiations in sight.

Federal mediators were cotinuing to stand by as bargainers for Western Union and the 17,000-member United Telegraph Workers sought to reach an agreement in Washington.

Concern Over Corn Blight In 29 States

WASHINGTON (UPI) —The corn blight, now reported in parts of 29 states, continues to be classified as only a light infestation, according to the latest government reports.

But the Agriculture Department's weekly bulletin on the situation said there are increasing reports of pockets of moderate to severe infection and further evidence that the potentially destructive disease has started to spread from field to field.

The chief North Vietnamese negotiator, Xuan Thuy, today called the Thieu administration "the greatest obstacle to the progress of the Paris conference."

Bruce said today the United States is willing to study the communists' seven-point plan. But he suggested the Communists give similar attention to standing allied peace offers.

"There is no more pressing military question than the need to stop the killing throughout Indochina," Bruce said.

Bruce, 73, came out of retirement to head the Paris talks. According to Washington reports, he will retire again shortly and be replaced by William J. Porter, the American ambassador to South Korea.

Bruce asked the Communists, "Are you willing to consider a cease-fire separately and join us in a real effort to end the fighting first?"

Bruce urged a real dialogue at the conference to discuss the peace proposals of both sides, rather than the current exchange of formal statements.

The Communists also have asked for informal give-and-take discussions. But so far neither side has agreed on how to start them.

Bruce reiterated the American request for "much more explanation from you as to what your various points actually mean."

He said, "The fixing of a withdrawal date must be the result of a genuine negotiating process, not a price we must first pay just for negotiations to begin, or a unilateral action we must take because you so dictate."

He also asked, "How many prisoners from our side do you plan to release and who are they? Do you also intend to provide whatever information you have on our men missing in action in Southeast Asia?"

Madame Nguyen Thi Binh, chief delegate of the Viet Cong, presented the Communist plan at the session two weeks ago.

Today, South Vietnamese delegate Pham Dang Lam said the Communists insisted on using the conference as a "propaganda forum."

At today's meeting, Thuy asked, "How can one seriously negotiate while pursuing the Vietnamization of the war?" Vietnamization means replacing U.S. troops with Vietnamese.

Thuy said that "since early July the United States has continuously launched barbarous B52 bombing raids in South Vietnam and supported Saigon troops in many sweep operations.

"At the same time it (the United States) pursued air attacks against many populous regions of North Vietnam, particularly those near the 7th parallel, thus violating its engagement to cease all encroachments" on North Vietnamese sovereignty.

Thuy said Washington wanted to "minimize the important significance of the seven-point peace plan, which is very correct, logical and reasonable.

"It is now up to the Nixon Administration to choose the path of peace or to continue the war, to let American servicemen promptly and safely return home or to prolong the list of American casualties and prisoners."

South Vietnam's Pham Dang Lam said, "Since the present conflict is an aggression by North Vietnam against South Vietnam, the war will not be ended by the simple withdrawal of the allied forces but it will be ended only when this aggression ceases."

Madam Binh, foreign minister of the South Vietnamese National Liberation Front's "Provisional Revolutionary Government," said her seven-point plan was "flexible."

She told today's session of the conference, the 121st in 2 1-2 years, that Washington should make a prompt reply.

Madame Binh also accused President Nixon of continuing to support President Nguyen Van Thieu in Saigon, the man whom the Communists want eliminated from power.

San Rafael Man Shot At Market

A San Rafael man was wounded today in a pre-dawn shooting at Mayfair Market 340 Third Street in San Rafael.

James Chalmers Ropp, 22, of 4176 Redwood Highway, underwent surgery this morning at Marin General Hospital, for the gunshot wound he received, according to police, in an argument with John William Bodeen, day manager of Mayfair.

Police said Ropp and four other persons entered the market about 2:54 a.m. and began engaging in horseplay to which Bodeen objected. Police also said that Bodeen reported seeing Ropp attempt to stuff a bottle of wine in his pockets.

Bodeen told police he challenged Ropp and Ropp approached as if to attack him. According to police, Bodeen said he pulled a gun on Ropp and Ropp took a hunting knife from his boot.

Bodeen told police that Ropp laughed at him and he shot.

The other members of Ropp's party were Patrick Bernard McCough, 24, of 95 Medway, No. 8, San Rafael; Micheal Arthur McCough, 23, also of the Medway address; JoAnn Bass, 19, of 95 Medway Road, Apt. 8, and Diane Frances Ropp, 21, Ropp's wife.

Police said the incident is still under investigation and no arrest has been made yet.

Owner Of Beach Upset By Nudity

A resident of the Muir Beach area has become so outraged about nudity on his private beach that he is trying to give up some of his property rights in exchange for getting it policed.

Ernest Emig, who lives at Bello Beach, has taken the whole matter to the Marin County Counsel's office, according to Deputy County Counsel George J. Silvestri Jr.

Silvestri said, however, that Emig's proposal is not a simple one to deal with for several reasons. First Emig's property is landlocked and even if his neighbor, whose land adjoins the state park at Muir Beach will agree to a similar arrangement, access is limited.

Silvestri said that Emig told him that the nude sunbathers get to his beach by climbing over rocks between there and the state-owned beach.

The county lawyer also said that Emig had proposed limiting public use of his beach and that he doubted if this was possible under recent court decisions. Emig had also suggested allowing sheriff's deputies to enter the beach through his property but not allowing others.

Silvestri has turned the whole matter over to the district attorney's office, saying that he has serious doubts, anyway, about the constitutionality of Marin's antinudity ordinance.

Fatal Shooting Is Ruled Justifiable

By C. P. McCARTHY

The fatal shooting of a 27-year-old San Rafael man Monday was found to be justifiable homicide yesterday by a Marin County Coroner's inquest jury.

The man's estranged wife, Cynthia Lorraine Ruben, 18, was released from Marin County Jail where she had been held since the shooting on suspicion of murder.

Her husband, Samuel Ruben of 720 B Street, was shot in her apartment at 19 Taylor Street, San Rafael, about 1:30 a.m. Monday.

The jury yesterday deliberated 30 minutes after two and one half hours of testimony by Mrs. Ruben, neighbors of Mrs. Ruben, San Rafael police officers and a former girlfriend of Ruben's.

Testimony at the inquest — the first coroner's inquest in Marin in more than two years — revealed that Ruben had an "extremely violent temper," that he had beaten his wife about 40 times during their one-year marriage, and that he was under three separate San Francisco Superior Court restraining orders not to bother his estranged wife and, specifically, not to threaten to kill her.

Mrs. Ruben broke down several times yesterday, crying and sobbing as she told of the shooting Monday.

She said she refused to open the door to her apartment when her husband rang the doorbell about 1:30 a.m. She had already dialed the San Rafael police telephone number, she said, when she heard glass breaking.

She ran down the stairs from her bedroom to find Ruben had broken a glass pane on her front door, reached in and unlocked the door.

As he entered the apartment, she said, she grabbed a rifle from a closet.

"Go ahead and pull the trigger, bitch. You know you can't do it," she quoted Ruben as saying.

"I was standing with the gun and I did pull the trigger," she told the jury yesterday.

Ruben kept coming at her, holding up a hand covered with blood, she said.

"His face was angry and ugly," she said, saying she feared he was going to take the gun and turn it on her.

"So I shot him again," she said.

Ruben's former girlfriend, Margarite Roberts of San Francisco, testified that in 1968 and 1969 her relationship with Ruben was "a constant beating all the time."

She eventually bought a gun, she said, and "I was going to kill him because I couldn't get any help from the police."

Gang Violence In Reggio Calabria

REGGIO CALABRIA, Italy (UPI)—Gangs of youths burned and smashed cars and shops in street fighting Wednesday night. One youth was injured by a pistol shot.

The fighting flared following a ceremony honoring railway worker Bruno Labate, killed in the first Reggio riots a year ago. Crowds of youths roamed the streets setting fires, overturning cars and some firing pistols.

Giuseppe Lavilla, 15, was hit in the leg by a pistol shot and taken to a hospital in satisfactory condition.

Marin Artist Wins Top Prize

Orene Neal, wife of San Rafael physician William S. Neal, has won the $100 H. S. Crocker Award as first prize winner in the fine arts division of the 37th Annual San Mateo County Fair and Floral Fiesta.

Mrs. Neal's acrylic and ink painting was among 500 entries judged for the show. It was named "Peanut Butter for Godot" by her husband. The painting also received the San Mateo County Art Commission medallion award.

Howard Foote of Fairfax, teacher of one of the classes sponsored by the Peninsula Art Association, also is represented in the invitational exhibits at the fair.

The first Ferris wheel was built for the 1853 Chicago World's Fair.

November College Bond Election Will Be Asked

The Marin Community College District board will be asked tonight to set Nov. 2 as the election date for construction bonds for the north campus at Novato.

According to college officials, the measure will seek approval for the sale of $16.7 million in bonds.

The ballot measure is an alternative to levying override taxes for four years. Such overrides do not need voter approval.

The board will meet at 8 p.m. at the College of Marin's new science building located behind administrative offices. Room 101 of the new building will be used.

The board also is expected to approve a publication budget for fiscal 1971-72, authorize bids for construction of a new library and chemistry-business building at the College of Marin and appoint members to its citizens' advisory panel.

Teachers Group Hits Reagan Cut

BURLINGAME (UPI) —The California Teachers Association says Gov. Ronald Reagan's $78 million veto of state teacher retirement funds threatened a cutoff of monthly checks for 43,000 persons in about five months.

An association spokesman accused the governor Wednesday of conducting a raid on the funds "to help balance the budget."

CTA President L. Gordon Bittle said the legislature appropriated $98 million for the system and Reagan cut the amount to $20 million.

Optical Company Adds To Chain

By ROGER E. SPEAR

Q. Over two years ago we bought 100 shares of Terminal-Hudson Electronics. It has been going up recently and we wonder if we should sell. We bought for the long term as we retire in eight years. — A.M.

A. In March of 1970, an optical company, wholly-owned by T.B. Schanbaum, gained control of Terminal-Hudson through acquisition of 26.1 per cent of its outstanding common stock. Thereupon this electronic parts wholesale distributor embarked on a diversification program, acquiring several retail optical stores. In order to reflect this new image, shareholders voted in April, 1971 to drop Electronics from the corporate title. In May, a $3 million cash purchase was completed adding 50 new optical offices to those already owned.

A more recent and somewhat complex proposal, if completed, would add 208 more outlets to the growing chain. As proposed Terminal would acquire from its chairman, T.B. Schanbaum, all stock outstanding in the 13 concerns that operate these 208 outlets. In return he would receive 1,589,960 Terminal-Hudson shares, boosting his direct and indirect ownership from 26.1 percent to 67 percent. In 1970, the companies to be acquired had unaudited sales of $15.9 million. At recent quotes these shares have a market value of about $26 millionm After a five-month, 20-point run-up, shares have consolidated eight points below the high. I would suggest you take the profit now available to you.

Q. I purchased National Fuel Gas 8 5/8 Debentures due 1975 assuming these were bonds, not promissory notes. I cannot afford a loss. Are these high risk? — W.K.

A. These A-rated debentures have not traded below par since initial offering in 1970, a good indication of investor confidence. Earlier this year the issue moved to 109, a good indication of investor confidence. Earlier this year the issue moved to 109, but is currently quoted at 103½. In 1970, interest charges were earned 2.09 times, a sufficient margin of safety. National Fuel Gas is conservatively capitalized with long term debt/equity ratio 51/49.

YOU GET WHAT YOU PAY FOR

Mercedes-Benz unveiled its latest model, the $13,500 350SL, last week and said it was equipped with the world's "most advanced braking system." The car is shown during braking from a 125 mile per hour run on a wet track at the Indianapolis Speedway. A tiny computer is in the heart of an electronic braking system which prevents any of the wheels from locking up under severe braking. Thus the driver can retain control and brake hard, even on turns.

Ecologist, Oil Man Argue Over Firm's Planned Communities

STANFORD (BW) — Successful attempts by Standard Oil of California to convert oil fields, refineries and tank farms into profitable planned communities was derided and defended by opposing speakers Tuesday at Stanford's School Planning Conference.

"This is typical of California," Claire Dedrick of the Sierra Club Board of Directors commented. "Developers destroy the land and then build on it. They scrape off mountain tops and fill in the marshes."

Edward A. Hartsook, vice president and general manager of the Standard Oil subsidiary, Chevron Land & Development Co., and Mrs. Dedrick were featured speakers at the second day of the conference.

Hartsook, explained how his organization has made the small Southern California oil town of Huntginton Beach into a handsome, well-financed planned community with a lucrative shopping center.

Chevron Land & Development has similar projects either planned or built at seven other sites in California and one near the Boeing plant in Seattle, Hartsook said.

Hartsook pointed out that each development stresses green-belting, proper drainage and sewage, features "closed system" prevention of fume leakage and air pollution, provides local jobs for its residents, keeps a percentage of commuters off the freeways and makes a major contribution to the tax base of the community.

The tax base was the take-off point for Mrs. Dedrick's talk.

Local control of land development, she said, plus the community's power to tax results in a conflict of interest.

In a vicious circle, cities have to tax to stay alive, therefore land must be developed into taxpaying property which in turn means overdevelopment and exploitation, the noted local conservationist said.

The Sierra Club is not against proper development, she stressed, "because we have to have jobs and an economic base." All the club wants to do is get existing conservation laws enforced to prevent ruthless timber cutting, filling of the tidelands and conversions of farm areas into suburban sprawl.

"There is a lag between what the people want and the legislature's actions," she told the gathering. "We must change the cultural attitude of the U.S. Many other countries of the industrialized West have already seen the need for controlled growth and are pushing ahead."

Diaper Plant

Neenah, Wis. (UPI)—Kimberly Clark Corp. announced it will build a disposable diaper converting plant here to be in operation early next year. The company presently makes disposable diapers at its Memphis plant.

Stocks Firm As Improved Tone Noted

Economic news was mixed and analysts generally regarded the market's improved tone as a technical rally coming on the heels of a sharp price decline early in the week.

Treasury Secretary John B. Connally said the economy is on its way back to health. He said the administration had not changed its prediction that the jobless rate could be cut from almost 6 per cent of the labor force to 4.5 per cent by the middle of next year, but he added, "I'm not prepared to say that we are going to meet the goal."

Connally also said the rate of price increases "should stabilize" this year.

Other economic news was less constructive. Early-July car sales dropped sharply from the year ago period; industrial output increased economic recovery was still gradual; and in Paris the organization for economic cooperation and development forecast continued sluggishness for the U.S. economy over the next year.

Prices climbed in moderate turnover on the American Stock Exchange. Gainers topped losers, 472 to 191.

On the Big Board, stocks on the most active list included Texaco up 1-4, Gillette 2 1-2 lower, Ling-Temco up 1-8, and Burroughs 5-8 higher.

United Magnavox Outlet Will Hold Grand Opening Saturday

Murray

Nelson

Newly opened at Second Street and Lincoln Avenue, San Rafael is United Magnavox taking over the store formerly occupied by Butler's TV and Appliance.

United Magnavox, owned by Al Braunberger, is headquartered in San Francisco and now has five outlets from Daly City to Marin County. The San Rafael store will carry the complete Magnavox home entertainment line and also the Kelvinator white goods line. There will be a service department with carry-in or in-home service.

Store manager in San Rafael is Gale Lakers, who was formerly service manager of all United Magnavox branches.

Grand opening celebration will be held Saturday.

AFTER 20 YEARS operating the Tamalpais Market at Second and D Streets, San Rafael, Lester and Lloyd Mason will close — probably by the end of next month, although their lease does not expire until Sept. 10.

They will be taking a vacation — but no further plans have yet been announced. And at this point I understand no new tenant has been lined up to replace them in the building. Rufer Realty in San Rafael is agent for the property.

This is a ceramics school with classes Mondays, Wednesdays and Fridays from 9 a.m. to 5:30 p.m. for both children and adults. Night courses are also held from 6 p.m. to 9 p.m. on the same days.

Laufenberg was previously with Burt Manufacturing Co., manufacturer of kilns. Instructor at the school is Daniel Fuller of Woodacre, who is also an instructor at College of Marin.

Lease was negotiated through William W. Hoey and Co.

BRUCE A. GIEDT of San Rafael has been appointed resident manager for the Crown Zellerbach paper mill in Carthage, N.Y. Recently serving as marketing manager for the distributor sales division in San Francisco, he joined the company in 1965 as administrative assistant to the vice president for marketing and has subsequently held a number of sales and marketing positons.

RUSSELL B. MURRAY of Greenbrae has been named area officer in Wells Fargo Bank's international division. Formerly credit officer in the San Rafael office, he has been with the bank since 1968.

ROBERT NELSON of San Rafael, manager of the San Rafael Chamber of Commerce, will attend the 1971 Institute for Organization Management of the Chamber of Commerce of the United States at the University of Santa Clara next week

REAL ESTATE: Robert J. Petersen, manager of Kay Noah, Realtor, has received his broker's license and has also completed a real estate management course of the National Institute of Real Estate Brokers held recently in Nevada. With a showing of 75 per cent, Marin County multiple listing cooperative sales for May were the highest of any district in the state.

REDWOOD BANK in San Rafael is now exhibiting the art of Flo Spanier of San Anselmo during the month of July. She is a member of the Marin Society of Artists and the Terra Linda Art Society.

MARINITES LIKE HAWAII: During 1970, 7,790 of them visited the islands — 11.5 per cent of all Marin households. An average of over two persons per household went somewhere by air last year through the San Francisco Airport — a total of 138,658 persons.

Nickel Delay

New York (UPI)—A spokesman for International Nickel Co. denied Wednesday that Inco is delaying a $480 million nickel mining project on the French island of New Caledonia in the Pacific, in which INCOhas a 40 per cent stake. The spokesman said the cause of the delay is the difficulty the French holding firm, Samipac, is having in lining up additional French partners in the venture.

Angela In Private: 'Warm, Sympathetic'

help with the dishes and then go to her room to study.

"She would read until she fell asleep with the book in her lap," Shaprio said. "I was studying hard, too, but I would finally give up and go to bed. But many mornings I came downstairs to find the lights still on and her asleep in the chair. She seemed to feel that she just didn't have time for things like sleep.

"She rarely watched television. I am a kind of nut about the boob tube, particularly the evening news. I want to know everything that is going on in the world. Sometimes she would sit down and watch for a few minutes. And sometimes I would have on some old movie and I would call her and say, 'you ought to see this, it's really far out.' She would come and look for a little while and then go back to her books.

"She drank tea all the time. She had a little hot plate and she would keep it going. She would sweeten the tea with honey. She never drank liquor as far as I know. Sometimes we had wine with our meals."

One of Angela's students later at UCLA said she had a revulsion for marijuana and drugs.

"One day she talked to us about the Manson Family and their life style," the student, Jim Jordan, recalls. "She said their protest against society had taken a completely worthless turn—dropping out, numbing themselves with drugs, sex, complete withdrawal."

Shapiro says his wife is a great proponent of Women's Lib and that Angela not only was, too, but was a prime example of putting it in practice.

"Evelyn looked on her as a truly liberated woman," he says.

The two young women spent many hours talking together and going shopping.

"Angela was a chain smoker and she was trying every way to cut down," Shapiro recalls. She bought one of these little machines to roll your own cigarettes and she became very adept at taking the paper, shaking tobacco from a pouch and rolling this machine with one hand, getting a scraggly looking little cigarette.

"One day she and Evelyn were in one of those posh department stores in La Jolla and Angela was rolling these cigarettes. Here they were, a white girl and a black girl, making what I guess maybe the matrons thought were marijuana joints and the women just gasped."

Shapiro says he never heard Angela talk about getting married. Except for a brief infatuation with a white west German student, men as such did not seem very important to her at this stage.

Shapiro said she had three boyfriends, all black, while she was living with his family and that she had a number of dates.

"Oh, they went to the movies, walked on the beach, I don't know," he says. "But all of them were involved like her with black student affairs on the campus and they spent most of the time talking about that."

One of the reasons Angela had come to Southern California was to study again under Marcuse but another was to be near the big Negro population center of Los Angeles where she could put her political and social theories into practice among her race.

During the last months she was living with the Shapiros, she rented a small one-story wooden apartment in back of a house in south central Los Angeles, not far from Watts, scene of the first big city black riot in 1965.

She commuted regularly the 120 miles between La Jolla and Los Angeles, driving a 1959 station wagon Rambler. Shapiro said one of the things he envied most was her "mobility," her independence that permitted her to be away for days.

She began to become involved with black militant groups in Los Angeles. One was an organization known as US, a black nationalist extreme cult headed by Ron Karenga which, along with the Black Panthers, had emerged as the two best known militant factions among young blacks.

Miss Davis was attracted by US but felt it had two weaknesses. First, it rejected association with the white community in bringing about social upheaval and she felt that was unrealistic. Second, it treated women as "servants" to the men and that Angela Davis would not tolerate.

She became closer to the Black Panthers. There is no evidence that she ever joined the Panther party but she did become involved in their activities and was in later speeches to hail Bobby Seale, Huey Newton and other Panther leaders in jail as martyrs to the black struggle.

Instead, she turned to the U.S. Communist Party and became a member sometime in 1968.

The American Communist Party might have seemed pretty dull and old hat for such an impatient budding revolutionary but Angela Davis had her own ideas about that. She became close to Dorothy Healey, then Southern California district chairman of the U.S. Communist Party.

The young woman and Mrs. Healey, a warm and gracious woman around 60 who later was to be demoted for her opposition to Soviet intervention in Czechoslovakia, talked for many hours, sometimes at Angela's apartment and sometimes at Mrs. Healey's place a few blocks away.

"She was rather shy but extremely warm," says Mrs. Healey. "She was very methodical, not impulsive. She gave a great deal of thought to whether she wanted to join the party.

"I was struck by her intellectualism, her analytical mind. But at the same time she had a tremendous desire not to be isolated from the poor and the street cats. She didn't want to rise above her people. She wanted to rise with them. That's how she got so involved with the Soledad brothers."

Miss Davis joined the Che Lumumba Club, a black adjunct of the party whose role was to work closely with young Negroes in the area and recruit them for the party.

The Communist Party in the United States has been in sad shape for decades, slumping in membership and seldom catching a headline since the days of Alger Hiss and Sen. Joseph McCarthy.

Angela Davis was a godsend and national general secretary Gus Hall made that plain in his report to the party's national committee on Nov. 21, 1970.

While Miss Davis was active in Los Angeles, she was also to become an outstanding figure at the University of California in San Diego (UCSD), one of the newest and most beautiful of the nine universities in the system.

UCSD had been planned for tremendous expansion beyond its 7,000 member student body, a program apparently destined for severe curtailment under the crisis in education funds. It had two colleges, Revelle and Muir, and at the time Miss Davis came in 1967 the university was proceeding toward a third college along much the same lines under the aegis of Chancellor William McGill.

She and other black-Chicano militants demanded that the administration change the entire format so that it be devoted almost entirely to Negro and Mexican-American students with minority instructors and a curriculum to be chosen largely by the students.

It became a flaming issue on campus and McGill offered a compromise under which it would be a two year experimental college pending determination whether academic standards would be lowered otherwise.

"I remember there was a meeting of the Academic Senate (faculty) and the militants presented a list of non-negotiable demands," recalls Dr. Avrum Stroll, now head of the philosophy department at Revelle College.

"A number of blacks moved into the hall and took over the platform and warned that we were in trouble if we didn't approve the demands."

In short, Angela Davis and the militants won. There is now a "Third College" at USCS. It has 167 students, almost all black or Chicano, with 12 to 14 faculty members. The classes are conducted in old marine huts. The curriculum is weighted heavily toward minority studies, sociology, political theory, anthropology. Its future is uncertain but it bears the stamp of Angela Davis.

The young woman, still reading and studying assiduously, was by then well into her treatise for a doctorate in philosophy, the theme—suggested by Marcuse—Kant's analysis of the role of violence in German idealism.

Marcuse says he had urged the girl, like all his students, to put her philosophical theories to the test of practical problems. But he rejects any idea he prodded her into campus activism.

"I have occupied myself very little with black politics," Marcuse says. "I would hope not to assume such a patronizing position. The blacks have reached the point where they can do their own thing."

Shapiro, the graduate student classmate, recalls that about that time Angela came home from Los Angeles one night after a shooting in the cafeteria at UCLA between US and Panther factions in which two persons were killed. She had an M1 rifle with her for protection, he says.

"Seeing that gun frightened the hell out of us," he says. "Two people she knew had just been killed and we asked her why she didn't just split, that nothing was worth her life.

"But she said that if they thought they (Shapiro didn't specify who) thought they were going to shut her up they were wrong. She said she felt she might be shot to death but it wasn't going to stop her. She wasn't like us. She had no problem in understanding the role of violence in a revolutionary situation."

Miss Davis was still living with the Shapiros when she was approached by Dr. Donald Kalish, head of the philosophy department at UCLA, about coming there as an assistant professor. She was more intent on getting her PhD but Kalish assured her she would have sufficient spare time to complete her thesis.

Fire Chief To Ask For Abatements

Marin County Fire Chief Richard D. Pedroli announced yesterday he will ask for abatement action against five parcels of weed-covered property because the dry weeds are a fire hazard and a public nuisance.

Three of the properties are in the Los Ranchitos Area of San Rafael. One is at the corner of Las Gallinas Avenue and Merrydale Road, owned by William A. Timmer; the second is at Tamalpais and Willow Avenues, owned by Sol A. Abrams of Ross; and the third is on Ranchitos Road, owned by Laurent R. Broussal of San Francisco.

The other two parcels are at 311 San Francisco Boulevard, San Anselmo, owned by Vincent O'Kelly of Corte Madera; and on Arroyo Road in Lagunitas, owned by Catherine Dowdall of Sausalito.

The request for abatement action will go to the Marin County Board of Supervisors next Tuesday.

Plan For Seashore Reported Compatible With Marin Vision

Preliminary plans for the future of Point Reyes National Seashore are in keeping with Marin's desire to keep the area as natural as possible, members of the Marin County Parks and Recreation Commission declared yesterday.

Copies of the preliminary plan drafted by the National Park Service have been circulating among county officials, and a public hearing is set for sometime in December.

Parks and Recreation commissioners said they are "impressed" with the emphasis on preserving the natural environment, the trend away from cars and toward hiking and camping, and the setting aside of natural preserves and a wilderness area.

On a suggestion by Polly Smith, the commissioners asked Parks and Recreation Director Pierre W. Joske to arrange for a field tour of the Point Reyes Seashore on July 21 or 26.

The Marin County Parks and Recreation Commission also:

APPOINTMENT — Asked the Marin County Board of Supervisors to appoint a youth to succeed Commissioner Raymond Bresnan, Novato teen-ager, who resigned after three years on the commission. Young Bresnan is leaving for an extended trip abroad.

NEIGHBORHOOD PARKS — Recommended that the county planning commission and staff investigate more effective ways of getting subdivision developers to dedicate space (or in-lieu fee) for neighborhood parks. Commissioner Merritt A. Robinson complained that under present ordinances, subdividers can pay fees that are far too low for acquisition of subdivided land.

YOUTH COMMISSION — Named Robinson as a delegate to the Marin County Youth Commission. Robinson succeeds Albert J. Boro, who quit the youth commission because he has too many other activities.

Marin City Mothers To Realize Dominican Goals

Two College of Marin students — who three months ago wondered how they were going to raise $1,000 each to continue their educations — are almost to their goals.

Thanks to a $500 contribution, one of the students, Georgia M. Payton, 32, has the $1,500 needed for tuition at Dominican College in San Rafael and will enter the school in the fall, although she still lacks about $100 for books.

The other student, 24-year-old Ruby A. Myles, is $200 short, half of that for tuition and half for books, but said she intends to enroll at Dominican anyway.

The women — each married and the mother of five children — learned in March they were to receive $600 each from the Ford Foundation to enable them to transfer from College of Marin to a four-year institution of their choice.

The grants were useless, however, without $1,000 more to meet Dominican's $1,500 tuition and pay for books, so the two set out to make up the difference.

Interviews with the financial aid office at Dominican led to $400 honor grants for each, and then Mrs. Payton was told the Sausalito Artists and Merchants and the Sausalito Policemen's associations wished to contribute $500.

Mrs. Myles, meanwhile, received a $400 gift from a private donor, leaving her only $200 short of her goal.

The women, both of whom live in Marin City and worked until June as educational aides in the Sausalito School District, received the Ford grants under a $2.1 million program designed to aid members of minority groups to transfer from two to four-year colleges.

It was a French chemist, Mege-Mouries, who patented the process of making oleomargarine because France needed a butter substitute just prior to the Franco-Prussian war.

Bolinas Lagoon Boating Outlined

Small motorboats would be allowed inside Bolinas Lagoon under preliminary plans drawn up by the Marin County Parks and Recreation staff.

Park Planner Donald Rolph gave a general outline of the preliminary plan yesterday to the Marin County Parks and Recreation Commissioners.

Commissioner Polly Smith and Frances Stewart, chairman of the Bolinas-Stinson Beach unit of Marin Conservation League, wanted all motorboats banned from the lagoon.

Rolph, however, argued that Edward C. Letter retains a small boat repair shop on the northwest shore of the lagoon, and motorboats have been historically a part of the lagoon. He assured commissioners that since only hand-launching of boats would be allowed, very few power boats will use the lagoon, and the motors would be too small to disturb the ecology.

Rolph and Pierre W. Joske, director of parks and recreation, said they hope to have final plans approved by the end of this year.

Rolph gave this picture of what is in store for Bolinas Lagoon:

The entire lagoon inside the mean higher high water mark would be designated an ecological preserve, with strict limitations on any development.

Public use of the lagoon would be largely limited to observation, research, and educational use. The Bolinas Marine Station, Point Reyes Bird Observatory and Audubon Canyon Ranch are already in those categories.

Three or four observation points, with small parking areas and a few picnic tables will be dispersed around the lagoon. About three boat launching ramps (for hand launching only) are planned. One will be at the existing Letter boat repair, another at the old town of Bolinas where boats are tied up, and a third at Seadrift.

Among picnic areas planned for future acquisition is a grove of alder trees owned by George P. Leonard on the east side of Bolinas Lagoon near Stinson Beach.

Dr. Malcolm Finley, who owns property on the east side of the lagoon, between the Leonard property and the Audubon Canyon Ranch, asked for some dredging inside the lagoon to provide flushing action. He warned that in a few years, the lagoon will become a meadow because of siltation.

Joske said further research, including monitoring of siltation, will be needed before any major dredging can be hazarded.

South Vietnam Joins Islands Ownership Feud

SAIGON (UPI)—South Vietnam has jumped into the dispute over possession of the Spratly and Paracel islands, where geologists believe there may be offshore oil deposits.

The islands are a cluster of more than 50 coral reefs, cays and shoals in the South China Sea between the Chinese mainland and Indochinese peninsula and the Philippine Islands.

Until Nationalist China and the Philippines recently laid claim to them because of the potential oil wealth they had been of little interest to anyone, other than the birds and turtles that lay their eggs on the islands' beaches.

The foreign ministry in Saigon today issued a statement claiming ownership and traced the islands' history back to 1802.

VIET CAMPAIGN

Drug Detection Results Unclear

By KENNETH BRADDICK

LONG BINH, Vietnam (UPI) —Some GIs hand in a bottle of apple juice when it comes time for a urinalysis and others pay $100 to a buddy to take their place in line. It is all part of a sort of desperate game between the U.S. military and soldiers undergoing tests for drug addiction before leaving Vietnam.

Doctors say they are not at all sure who is winning.

Capt. John A. Soyak, 30, of Detroit runs the first stop for GIs being processed to leave Vietnam. His command post is a small wooden shack with a newly painted sign, "Peehouse of the August Moon."

Every soldier from a four star general on down has to provide a urine sample which is tested for heroin, morphine or opium.

The dragnet already has turned up two offices — a major and a captain — as suspected heroin users, a military spokesman said today.

"Let's face it," Soyak said. "Some of these men are desperate and use desperate methods." The room Soyak operates is equipped with big mirrors to alert medics watching for any sleight-of-hand the GIs might try.

Identify checks are tightened when GIs who were not addicts were found collecting up to $100 to substitute for addict soldiers.

Soldiers also sometimes send the electronic testing machine haywire by handing in bottles of apple juice instead of urine. Others have fooled the test by delaying withdrawal symptoms with barbiturates or the synthetic heroin substitute called methadone long enough to clear opiates from their bodies.

"I haven't seen any guys coming through the line going through withdrawal symptoms," said Spec. 4 Robert Burne, 21, a medic from Marion, Ind. He has been assigned to the addiction spotting center since it opened June 18.

"After a while, though, you can kind of tell those who might be on smack (heroin). They're uptight. They want to talk a lot and ask a lot of questions about the way the machine works."

The machine is called "FRAT," an acronym for Free Radical Analysis Technique, which electronically determines whether a person is on heroin.

The U.S. command declines to give any indication of how many soldiers have been found to have taken heroin in the 24 to 48 hours before the urinalysis, the period in which it can be detected.

But officers involved with the program say between 2 and 5 per cent of the estimated 1,000 GIs a day leaving Vietnam show as "positives," meaning they have taken such drugs.

That would be below Congressional estimates ofmore than 10 per cent of GIs in Vietnam as users of heroin.

At first there were numerous myths on how to beat the drug detector.

After the testing began, post exchanges had a run on orange and grapefruit juice and many GIs quit taking their anti-malaria pills.

Word spread that orange and grapefruit juices would guarantee a negative reading on the machine and malaria tablets supposedly showed "positive."

In fact, neither had any effect on the tests.

As soon as the army saw what was happening it began using, in addition to FRAT a technique known as gas liquid cromotography, a method of detecting chemicals in urine by color.

The FRAT machine costs $26,000 and each test costs the government about $1. Such machines will more than likely be used not only for those leaving Vietnam but for GIs going on Rest and Recuperation (R & R) leave, temporary duty and for new arrivals.

Some new arrivals were tested recently as part of a program to give the military a comparison of how many GIs are already drug users when they arrive in Vietnam. The figures never have been released.

The drug program specifies that a drug user go to a detoxification center until his system is free of heroin then he is sent home in a medical plane for a rehabilitation program if necessary. No punishment is involved and the soldier found "positive" goes to the detoxification center on his own.

Dr. Jerome H. Jaffe, President Nixon's special adviser on drug abuse, said the detection and treatment program looks impressive and he would recommend it be expanded.

"Not all the problems have been solved," Jaffe said at the end of a three-day trip to Vietnam, "But I didn't expect them to be within three weeks."

DRUG SMOKING — UPI Photographer Jeff Taylor, working on a series about GI drug abuse in Vietnam, was allowed to photograph a soldier smoking drugs in exchange for a promise of anonymity, hence the blackout of the soldier's eyes. The GI was using a homemake 'hookah' waterpipe made from a wine bottle and a .45-caliber shell in his living quarters somewhere in Vietnam. A campaign currently is underway to detect heroin users among GIs in Vietnam so they can be "detoxified" before returning home. (UPI Telephoto)

Art, Hobby Show Slated To Begin At PG&E Site

The seventh annual art and hobby show by employees of Pacific Gas and Electric Co. will open at 1 p.m. Sunday in the company's demonstration room at Third and Brooks Streets, San Rafael.

Included in the exhibit will be paintings in all media, photography, creative arts, crewel work and rugs. It will feature a rock collection by Joseph Meagor, former College of Marin lapidary instructor.

The show, which is open to the public without charge, will be open from 1 to 5 p.m. every day and also 7 to 10 p.m. on Monday through Friday. It will close on July 25.

Judges for the show will be Bernice Brown of the Art Center, San Rafael; William Torrance of the Torrance Gallery in San Anselmo and Robert Guertz, art instructor for Kentfield School District.

Festival Mounts Solicitations For Season Members

The Marin Shakespeare Festival board has started a phone campaign to solicit season members for the festival's six plays.

Gordon Parr, board president, explained the festival needs season members, who purchase six tickets at a discount, to have capital for the first performances.

The festival will have a preview performance tomorrow at 8 p.m. of "Once Upon a Mattress," directed by Daniel Caldwell, at the Forest Meadows Theatre at Dominican College.

The drama will be repeated Saturday at 8 p.m. following a Feast to Goodwill beginning at 5 p.m. also at Forest Meadows.

The board adjourned to Aug. 2.

Group Circulates Petition For Prison Reform

The San Rafael-based Committee for Prisoner Humanity and Justice has launched a drive to collect petition signatures in support of state legislation to improve the lot of inmates in state correctional institutions.

The committee is backing AB 1181 by Assemblyman Frank Murphy Jr., R-Santa Cruz. His bill would create a joint legislative committee on corrections administration and an Office of Ombudsman for Corrections. The ombudsman would be empowered to seek court action upon complaints by prisoners.

The committee's office is in Room 37, 1029 Fourth Street.

AN EXHIBITION FOR JOE

Heavyweight champion Joe Frazier (left) and Cleveland Williams were head to head in this exchange yesterday during an exhibition two-round bout in Houston. Red Sox Apologies End Feud

BOSTON (UPI)—The running verbal dispute among the three regular outfielders for the Boston Red Sox appeared to end in a series of statements, apologies and handshakes Wednesday but the ball club was still to be heard from on possible fines and disciplinary action.

Veteran Carl Yastrzemski and young Billy Conigliaro appeared at a special news conference in the office of their mutual attorney and the third player, Reggie Smith, later agreed to end the week-long battle.

But the Red Sox scheduled a closed door team meeting for tonight, just before a scheduled game with the Minnesota Twins, and said it would have no statement on the dispute until after the meeting.

The feud was triggered, strangely, by Tony Conigliaro's sudden retirement from the California Angels a week ago. Billy reacted to Tony's retirement by charging that Yastrzemski was responsible for trading Tony to California last October.

Smith rose to Yastrzemski's defense, charging Billy with being a "quitter" who should be disciplined. Red Sox General Manager Dick O'Connell's only comment on the controversy was that he wished the players involved were batting as well as they were talking while the Red Sox dropped three straight games to the New York Yankees.

In a carefully worded two-page statement, Yastrzemski told a jammed news conference Wednesday that he held both Tony and Billy in the highest regard. Yaz said a "misunderstanding and lack of communication" were responsible for the charges and counter charges.

Billy and Tony, who were present, agreed with Yastrzemski that everything should be forgotten. Smith later concurred in the statement after conferring with both manager Eddie Kasko and club owner Tom Yawkey.

"This misunderstanding is completely behind us and as far as Billy and I are concerned the only thing on our minds is to work together with our teammates and win a pennant this year for the Red Sox fans," Yastrzemski said.

Neither Kasko nor Yawkey would speculate on whether the club will take action against any or all of the trio and said no statement would be made until after the team meeting.

49ers Trade Lakes To New York Giants

For High Future Draft Pick

NEW YORK (UPI)—Roland Lakes, starting defensive tackle for the San Francisco Forty Niners for eight years, was traded to the New York Giants Thursday in exchange for a high future draft choice.

Lakes, 31, is supposed to report on Monday with the Giants' veteran players and hopefully provide the muscle coach Alex Webster has been seeking on the defensive line. Defensive tackle Jerry Shay broke his leg in seven places in the Giants' final game of the season last year against the Los Angeles Rams.

Lakes, 6-4 and 268 pounds, is in his 11th year of pro football. He was with San Francisco for all 10 previous seasons.

The trade is the second made by the Giants in the early days of training. They acquired Mike Gaechter, a defensive back, from the Dallas Cowboys for another draft choice.

49er Official To Meet With Tim And Agent

DAYTON, Ohio (UPI)—Jack White, General Manager of the San Francisco 49ers, will fly here today to handle contract talks with the team's No. 1 draft choice, Tim Anderson of Ohio State, Anderson's agent reported today.

Tony Razzano, who represents five Ohio State football players and is president of United Pro Athletes Inc. said he and Anderson would meet with White at his office here tonight.

"Having Mr. White come here himself has to be progress of a sort," said Razzano. "The 49ers have tried to drive a wedge between me and my clients but it hasn't worked as they thought it would."

Razzano said Anderson did not want to sit in on the negotiating session.

"He did not want to be here but I urged him to come," said Razzano. "As a pro athlete he's in business and he'll benefit from seeing what this is all about."

JIM GILMARTIN

Golly, I thought this was baseball season. You know, the All-Star game the other night and the Giants in Cincy and the Athletics hosting Detroit tonight.

But, lo and behold, pigskins are beginning to fly. The Oakland Raiders are about to embark on their training routines in Santa Rosa and the San Francisco 49er rookies are already doing their grunting and groaning near Santa Barbara. (Wouldn't it be something for a Giants-A's World Series and 49ers-Raiders Super Bowl? Just thinking — wishfully.)

Anyway, with football season rapidly approaching I had a long chat yesterday with George McFadden and Dick Berg, the demon public relations men for the 49ers, who fed me the following notes on their team:

There could be a good local angle when the Niners meet the Dallas Cowboys in a controlled scrimmage July 28 at Thousand Oaks. Two of the men on the field will be Elmer Collett, guard for the 49ers, and Honor Jackson, rookie receiver for Dallas, both graduates of Tamalpais High School. Tamalpais, Tamalpais, we love you . . . Tamalpais, Tamalpais, down by the slough . . . (I'm a San Rafael alumnus, you see.)

Berg reminded me that Doug Berry, the 6-foot-2, 195-pound wide receiver from Southern Utah who is with the rookies in camp, comes to the team with fine credentials. He is the son of Rex Berry, a former 49er halfback from 1951 to 1956. Doesn't that make us all feel a little older?

"Hey," interjected McFadden, "speaking of family affairs, don't forget we have a brother act in camp. Tight end Bob Windsor's 'little' brother, Tom, will be trying out at defensive back as a free agent. Tom played at the University of Kentucky just like his brother."

"Want more family ties?" asked Berg, trying to top his partner. "Well, our No. 1 draft pick Tim Anderson is a cousin of our veteran running back Bill Tucker and Jimmy Thomas (running back) has a brother named Earl who was drafted by the Chicago Bears."

For those of you who just can't wait for the fur and pigskins to fly, the 49ers will be televised Aug. 13 against the Miami Dolphins at the Orange Bowl, 5:30 p.m. That's the night your wife will begin developing her annual Fall-Winter video-syncrasy. TV or not TV — that is the question.

Thoughts then changed to the 49ers' new home at Candlestick and Berg whipped out his newsy team publication, "The Diggings," which tells that the old ball orchard will have 40,000 seats for games in August and September and hopefully will increase to 45,000 for October, November and December. Candlestick ultimately will have 60,000 pews, with anywhere from 45,000 to 60,000 in 1972.

"The Diggings" also notes that the football field will run from the first base line (south) toward left center field (north) and that the west side of the field will be the 49er side.

And for those of you who have had trouble over the years cramming your annie fays into Kezar's cramped seats, you will be delighted to know that Candlestick's seats are at least 19 inches wide with knee room of at least 30 inches. No more knees in the back.

Well, so much for the Niners. See you at the Super Bowl next January against the Raiders. That is after the Giants and A's settle the World Series, the playoff that will be described as the "Two-Bit Series" by all you Toll House Cookies. But we'll cross that Bay Bridge when we get to it.

Windward Double Victory?

HONOLULU (UPI) —Windward Passage, declared the official winner on elapsed time in the Transpacific Yacht Race, is also making a race of it on corrected time.

The 73-foot ketch flying the colors of Hawaii's Lahaina Yacht Club set an elapsed time record when she crossed the Diamond Head finish line Tuesday night in nine days nine hours six minutes.

Owner-skipper Robert Johnson was presented a certificate Wednesday officially designating Windward Passage the winner on elapsed time.

But a Transpac spokesman said Windward Passage may also end up the winner on corrected time. He said Moon Day, a 40-foot sloop out of the King Harbor Yacht Club, was in first place in corrected time with Windward Passage a close second.

The spokesman said Moon Day was not expected to cross the finish line until July 17, and, if the winds lighten, Windward Passage "has a good chance" of being corrected time victor as well.

If Windward Passage is declared the corrected time winner, she would be the third yacht in the history of the biennial race, which started in 1906, to win both honors.

Five yachts completed the 2,225-mile journey Wednesday and six more were expected today. Blackfin, the 73-foot ketch out of the St. Francis Yacht Club of San Francisco, which held the old elapsed time record for the 1969 race, crossed the finish line early Wednesday with a time of nine days 17 hours and 17 minutes.

Ondine, from the Larchmont Yacht Club of New York, was the third vessel to finish, Buccaneer, from the Royal New Zealand Yacht Club, was fourth and Kialoa II, out of the Newport Harbor Yacht Club, Calif., was fifth.

Windward Passage was first in Class A, Loco Viente II, a 50-foot sloop from the Balboa Yacht Club topped Class B, Moon Day headed Class C and L'Allegro, from the Richmond Yacht Club, led Class D.

The Canadian ketch Graybeard, which officials feared would have to be towed to Honolulu, was proceeding under her own power after the Coast Guard helped make repairs 450 miles out. The ketch out of the Royal Vancouver Yacht Club lost her rudder and began taking on water Sunday night.

Free Golf Clinic For Youngsters

A free golf clinic for boys and girls between the ages of 9 and 18 will be held July 23 at San Geronimo golf course, from 9 a.m. to 3 p.m.

The San Rafael Parks and Recreation Department will put on the clinic, along with the Professional Golf Association, which will supply instructors. The clinic will consist of instruction in driving, pitching and putting.

The PGA will also provide free lunch.

Leach Wins Trans-Miss Golf Opener

The All-American collegiate selection from Brigham Young University turned back Mark Lye of Napa, 2 and 1. Leach had qualified for the match play competition with a 36-hole total of 151 on rounds of 76-75, sixth best in the field.

Meanwhile, two favorites advanced but the medalist lost in yesterday's opening round.

Allen Miller, the defending champ from Pensacola, Fla., defeated Rocky Waitt of Wichita, Kan., 3 and 1 on the 6,795-yard Spyglass Hill course.

Tom Kite Jr., the 21-year-old University of Texas star, beat Bill Dougherty of Woodland, 5 and 3.

The losing qualifying round medalist was Bruce Robertson, of San Mateo, the 18-year-old Northern California junior champion. He lost on the 20th hole to Lee Cook, 22, of Scotts Valley, Calif. Cook chipped in from 25 feet for a birdie three to win the second hole of a sudden death playoff.

Two Rookies Leave 49ers' Training Camp

Running back John Bullock of Purdue and defensive tackle Ernie Sterling of Grambling, La., left on the second day of drills. Bullock was the team's 13th draft choice, Sterling was a free agent.

Those who have caught the eye of coach Dick Nolan are wide receiver Jimmy Thomas, a veteran who is being converted from a running back, and rookie running backs Vic Washington and Joe Orduna.

Washington, a graduate of Wyoming, who played Canadian football for the past three years, and Orduna, a former Nebraska star, have impressed the coaching staff with their speed.

IN OAKLAND

Athletics Take On The Tigers Tonight

OAKLAND (UPI) — The high-flying Oakland Athletics, enjoying a healthy 11 1-2 game lead in the American League West, open the second half of the season tonight by hosting the Detroit Tigers.

The homestand will be a short one for the A's, who will go with unbeaten Chuck Dobson in series opener against the Tigers. Dobson, who has an 8-0 record, will be opposed by left Mickey Lolich.

After a three-game set against Detroit, the A's will entertain Baltimore and Cleveland in two-game sets.

Three A's players who participated in Tuesday's All-Star Game were excused from a workout Wednesday at the Oakland Coliseum. They were pitcher Vida Blue, who was the game's winning pitcher, outfielder Reggie Jackson and catcher Dave Duncan.

Manager Dick Williams said his pitching ace, Blue, would not miss a turn because of his All-Star Game appearance.

"He'll go Friday night and Jim Hunter Saturday," Williams said. "The All-Star Game was Vida's regular work day so there shouldn't be any problem."

Giants In Cincinnati For Trio Of Games

CINCINNATI (UPI) —San Francisco's Juan Marichal, who threw in the All-Star game, will pitch against Don Gullett tonight when the Giants open a series against the Cincinnati Red Sox.

Marichal enters the game with a 10-5 record, while Gullett takes the mound with an impressive 9-3 record.

The Giants, leaders of the National League's Western Division, make the turn into the most important phase of their pennant quest when they launch a three-tilt set against the defending champions.

At this time last year the Reds were 10 games in front of the field and grinding toward a pennant they won and a World Series they lost.

Raiders Open Training Camp

SANTA ROSA (UPI)—Rookies, free agents and some veterans will be on hand as the Oakland Raiders begin two weeks of workouts today.

Coach John Madden said he was "rather excited this year about draft choices." He named defensive back and wide receiver Tom Maxwell from Baltimore, Bill Enyart, Eljah Nevett and Bob Brown.

JACK HANLEY

Baseball History: 30 Game Winners

For the benefit of those baseball fans who have been trying off-the-cuff indentification of former 30-game winners, here they are just in case Oakland's Vida Blue joins them this season:

Denny McLain was 31-6 in 1968 with Detroit. McLain, incidentally, won No. 30 that year in a 5-4 victory over Oakland despite two home runs by Reggie Jackson that left him on the short end of a 4-3 score as the Tigers came to bat in the ninth. The Tigers scored two in the ninth.

ONLY EIGHT other American League pitchers won 30 or more in one season. Cy Young was the first and he did it two years in a row. Young was 33-10 in 1901 and 32-10 in 1902 with Boston.

Walter Johnson also had two 30-victory years with Washington. Johnson was 32-12 in 1912, 36-7 the following year.

The other 30-game AL winners were John Chesboro (1904), New York, 41-12 Ed Walsh (1908), Chicago, 50-15; John Coombs (1910), Philadelphia, 31-9; Joe Wood (1912), Boston, 34-5; Jim Bagby (1920), Cleveland, 31-12; Bob (Lefty) Grove (1931), Philadelphia, 31-4. Grove was 31 when he won 31.

There were just four 30-game winners in the National League — Christy Mathewson, Joe McGinnity, Grover Cleveland Alexander and Dizzy Dean unless you want to go back prior to 1900 to make it five. Hoss Radbourne was credited with 60 wins for Providence in 1884. However, records prior to 1900 are not carefully documented.

MATHEWSON WAS a 30-game winner four times for the Giants, 30-13, 1903; 33-12, 1904; 31-9, 1905 and 37-11, 1908. McGinnity was his teammate and was 31-20, 1903; 35-8, 1904.

Alexander was a 30-game winner three times for the Phillies, 31-10, 1915; 33-12, 1916 and 30-13 in 1917. Alexander and Mathewson are the only pitchers ever to win 30 in three consecutive season.

Dean was 30-7 with the Cardinals in 1934 but under today's scoring rules he would have been credited with only 29 wins. The scorer was following the common practice of the time when he awarded Dean a win on June 27 (No. 12) as the starting pitcher who pitched most of the game. Dean was knocked out in the top of the ninth inning of that game with the score tied. He wasn't the pitcher of record when the Cardinals won it on a homer in their half of the ninth.

IN 1935 Dean came close to another 30-victory season but finished 28-12 that year. Robin Roberts, never a 30-game winner but a 20-game winner for the Phillies in six straight seasons (1950-55), came close in 1952 with his best record, 28-7.

Others who came close: Carl Hubbell, 26-6 in 1936, the screwball inventor's best in four consecutive 20-game seasons for the Giants (1934-37); Bucky Walters, 27-11 in 1939 for the Reds; Don Newcombe, 27-7 for the Dodgers in 1956; Sandy Koufax, 27-9 for the Dodgers in 1966; Don Drysdale, 25-9 for the Dodgers in 1962; Juan Marichal, 26-9 for the Giants in 1968.

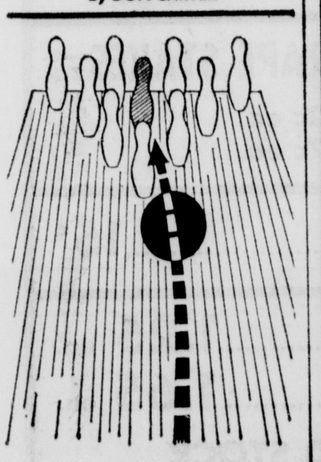
Mathewson and McGinnity are the only teammates ever to win 30 in the same season and they did it twice in 1903-04.

BOWLING TIPS

By DON CARTER



Is a big hook great? No way! Watch the star bowlers on television and notice how few boards their hooks cover. Unless the lane is abnormally dry, your ball should not curve over more than 10 boards as it moves toward the pins. If you are able to reduce your hook, you'll find spare shots easier as well.

Sooner Athletic Head

NORMAN, Okla. (UPI)— Wade H. Walker, the 48-yearold former Sooner All-America, was named athletic director at the University of Oklahoma Wednesday.

WESTERN OPEN

Trevino Heads The Field

CHICAGO (UPI) — The $150,000 Western Open began today on Olympia Fields' tough north course with leading money winner Lee Trevino the standout favorite in the field of 150.

Trevino, who has won the U.S., Canadian and British Opens in the last month, should get a strong challenge, however, from Billy Casper, a three time Western winner, as well as Miller Barber, Gene Littler, and Frank Beard.

Three other players, who would have been favorites, Jack Nicklaus, Arnold Palmer and Gary Player, did not enter the event, which for the first time in almost a decade will not be televised, either nationally or locally.

Trevino, who has won $195,869 this year, believed that 9 or 10 under par would be low enough to win the $30,000 top prize in the 72-hole event, thus guessing that 274 or 275 on the par 71 links will triumph. In 1968, the last time the Western was held at Olympia, Nicklaus won with 273.

Trevino declared the 6,749 yard course was "as tough as any we've played," and expected the weather for the four days of the event to be decisive.

"This is going to be a hell of a tournament," he said. "A lot depends on the wind. If it keeps blowing, there'll be some high scores, because the greens are so fast the wind will affect the putts.

"If it doesn't rain anymore, the fairways will be firmer and you'll get more roll. The rough won't grow any more and you'll be able to hold the greens.

"The greens are perfect. They're super speed, fast and true. The course is tight, but I think there'll be some low scores, if it dries out and we don't have wind."

Little League Tourney Time In Marin

The baseball season is barely half over for the professionals, but for Little Leaguers, it's tournament time already.

In Marin County, that means two tournaments, one for the county team championship starting next Tuesday, and then the local playoffs for the national all-star tournament that ends with the Little League World Series at Williamsport, Pa.

Each of Marin's 16 leagues will be represented by its championship team in the team tourney, which will run through next Saturday. The all-star tourney, July 27-31, will feature the 14 top 11 and 12-year-olds from each league, as chosen by the league's coaches.

Both tournaments will be single elimination affairs, starting with eight first-round games. For the team crown, the first games, all at 6 p.m., will include: San Rafael American League vs. Mill Valley National at Hamilton-Loma Verde; San Rafael National vs. Novato National at Novato-Pinheiro; San Geronimo vs. Mill Valley American at Mill Valley American; Hamilton-Loma Verde vs. Gallinas Valley at Gallinas Valley; Marinwood vs. Kentfield-Greenbrae at Marinwood; Novato American vs. Strawberry at Novato-Rancho; Fairfax vs. Twin Cities at Twin Cities; Tiburon vs. Sausalito at Strawberry.

The team tourney continues with 6 p.m. games next Wednesday and Friday, and finishes up with the final game for the championship on Saturday at Marinwood field, beginning at 1 p.m.

The all-star tourney follows the same progression, except that there will be two games on the final Saturday — the championship contest at 3 p.m., preceded by a game for third polace at 1. Both games will be played at Twin Cities field in Larkspur.

First round games include: Fairfax vs. Mill Valley American at Mill Valley American; Strawberry vs. San Rafael American at Strawberry; Hamilton-Loma Verde vs. Marinwood at Marinwood; Kentfield-Greenbrae vs. Mill Valley National at Gallinas Valley; Twin Cities vs. Sausalito at Twin Cities; Tiburon vs. San Rafael National at Hamilton-Loma Verde; San Geronimo vs Novato National at Novato-Rancho; Novato American vs. Gallinas Valley at Novato-Pinheiro.

The Marin County championship all-star team will go on to represent the county (California division two, section two, district three), in the Section Two tournament at Concord the first week of August.

FOOTBALL ROUNDUP

Another Olsen For The Rams

By U.P. INTERNATIONAL

Opponents of the Los Angeles Rams who felt they had trouble coping with one Olsen now have another to contend with.

The Rams, in a rebuilding process under new coach Tommy Prothro, Wednesday signed Phil Olsen, a former All America defensive lineman at Utah State, after he found a legal loophole in his contact with the New England Patriots and became a free agent.

Olsen had been the first draft pick of the then Boston Patriots last year but missed the entire season when he sustained a knee injury while training for the College All Star Game.

Olsen, a 6-foot-5, 265-pounder, will join brother Merlin, a veteran stalwart of the Rams' "Fearsome Foursome", after turning down offers from 19 other teams.

"I'm flattered by the number of teams which contacted my representative," said Olsen. "The two main reasons why we selected the Rams were, first, we looked over the immediate and long range futures of the teams and the offers, and, secondly, while there were some negatives, I felt this would be a fine opportunity to learn from my brother, who's had 10 years experience in the league.

"The negatives are the pressure of being the brother of such a great player and having people expect too much."

Three defensive line slots are taken —those held by Deacon Jones, Coy Bacon and Merlin Olsen, and the younger Olsen will battle Rick Cash, Dick Evey and Bill Nelson for the fourth slot.

Elsewhere in the pro football camps, veteran tight end Fred Arbanas of the Kansas City Chiefs announced his retirement because of a bad knee. Arbanas, a starter for 10 years, played much of his career without one eye, which he lost when he was assaulted on a Kansas City street by two men.

Kent McCloughan, the veteran cornerback traded from Oakland to Los Angeles, did not report to the Rams' camp and indicated he may retire.

Dennis Dummit, a standout as a collegian who was not drafted, completed five of eight passes for 114 yards as the Rams rookies outscored the San Diego rookies three touchdowns to two in a scrimmage. Creston Whitaker, a basketball player from North Texas State, caught four passes for 101 yards, including a 64-yard TD pass from Dummit.

The Detroit Lions dropped five draft choices after they failed to pass physicals. Included were Herman Franklin, the No. 6 pick from Southern California, and the No. 11, 12, 13 and 14 choices, Phil Webb of Colorado, David Abercrombie of Tulane, Bill Pilconis of Pittsburgh and Tom Lorenz of Iowa State.

The Dallas Cowboys cut 10 free agents from their rookie roster, including quarterback Ed Perry of Buffalo and the New York Jets dropped four rookies —Greg Flaska of Western Michigan, Jim Lough of Wichita, Andy Fusco of Syracuse and Phil Jones of Houston, after they failed physicals.

Richey, Ashe Upset

WASHINGTON (UPI)—After only two rounds of play, the $50,000 Washington Star International tennis tournament was assured today of a new 1971 champion. Both of last year's finalists were knocked out of competition Wednesday.

Defending champion Cliff Richey was upset by Spain's Andres Gimeno, 6-4, 7-6, in a match marked by a game-delaying temper flare-up by Richey during a climactic 12-point tie-breaker game in the second set.

Then, Pierre Barthes of France celebrated Bastille Day in rousing fashion by ousting fourth seeded Arthur Ashe, 7-6, 1-6, 6-1.

Still heading the field into the round of 16 however were Wimbledon champion John Newcombe of Australia, Wimbledon runner-up, Stan Smith, and pro tennis' biggest money winner, Rod Laver.

Newcombe was extended before beating Ray Moore of South Africa, 7-5, 5-7, 6-3, to advance into the third round and was matched today against England's giant-killer, Roger Taylor, who upset Clark Graebner, 6-2, 3-6, 7-5.

Laver, who easily dealt with Fred Stolle, 6-2, 6-3, faced another Australian, Ken Rosewall, winner over young John Alexander.

Richey bowed out to a heavy round of boos when he tripped over the line tape while losing a point in the decisive tie-breaker. Limping slightly, he jerked the service court tape loose from its moorings, necessitating a 22-minute time-out while the ground crew made the repairs.

Conigliaro Eye Injury Was Cause

BOSTON (UPI) — The near-fatal injury Tony Conigliaro suffered almost four years ago may have finally ended his stormy career as one of baseball's most promising young sluggers.

The 26-year-old Conigliaro revealed Wednesday that an examination of the left eye he almost lost on Aug. 18, 1967 showed a deterioration in his vision that would make hitting a pitched baseball "difficult if not impossible."

Only a second "miraculous recovery" would allow the California Angels' outfielder to continue as an active player according to a report filed by Dr. Charles D.J. Regan, the eye specialist who two years ago classified Tony's sight recovery as a miracle unprecedented in his medical experience.

The doctor's report, contained in a letter to Tony and made public by the player's attorney, served as an explanation for Conigliaro's sudden decision to quit the Angels last weekend.

Dr. Regan's latest examination, carried out on Tuesday, confirmed Tony's repeated contention that he was not seeing the ball as well as he had when he made his dramatic comeback with the Red Sox in 1969.

Tony narrowly escaped death when he was hit in the face by a Jack Hamilton pitch, then of the same California club, nearly four years earlier.

Idled for the rest of Boston's dramatic pennant run in 1967, Tony tried to make a comeback for the World Series and again the following spring but was forced to sit out the 1968 season.

He came back to hit 20 homers and bat .255 in 1969, and hit 36 home runs with a .266 batting average in 1970 before being traded to the Angels in a widely-unpopular six-player deal last October.

Insisting that he had known his vision was deteriorating, Tony said he had kept the matter a secret for several weeks but was not surprised by the medical finding.

He described the blind spot in the center of his left eye as increasing from "softball to basketball" size when he tried to look the approximate 60-foot distance from the plate to the pitching mound.

SPORTS SHORTS

Banshee Sailing Begins

NAPA (UPI) —Pete Schoonmaker of the St. Francis Yacht Club in San Francisco took the lead Wednesday in the opening races of the second annual National Banshee Sailing Championship at Lake Berryessa.

Schoonmaker, a Newport Beach resident, ended the day with 5 1-2 points after placing first in two races and fourth in a third event.

Two races will be held Thursday with the sixth and final one on Friday.

Tennis

HOUSTON (UPI)—Butch Krikorian, No. 5 seed in senior singles at the National Men's Senior Clay Court tennis championships, defaulted with stomach cramps Wednesday in the third round but recovered to win in doubles play.

Krikorian, of San Jose, Calif., lost 6-0 to Homer Richards Jr. of Charlottesville, Va., in the first set and then defaulted at 1-0.

Krikorian and Joe Woolfson, No. 2 seeds in doubles, won 6-4, 6-4 over Robert Arnold and Al Doyle as Krikorian recovered.

Basketball

CLEVELAND (UPI) —Austin Carr, the top draft pick of the Cleveland Cavaliers of the National Basketball Association, is in Cleveland today for the first time since he cracked a bone in his right foot two weeks ago while scrimmaging on a Harlem playground.

Softballers Win On A Two-Hitter

Marshall Grawson pitched a two-hitter and was given ample support as the Doves crushed Industrial Credit Co. 16-0 last night in one of three San Rafael Softball League games.

In the other games, The Bar outslugged The Bums 14-8 and The Wild Bunch did likewise to the 666th Radar Station 14-11.

GOLF NOTES

Three Aces Fired By Marinites

Bill Jacobsen, Larry Olson and Frank Quigley represent different generations, but they all had one thing in common this week. Each had a hole-in-one.

Jacobsen, of Mill Valley, the eldest of the three at 70, aced the 135-yard fourth hole at Indian Valley in Novato. He used an eight iron for the shot, which was witnessed by Fred Kraemer, Everett Sefton and Gene Quinn, all of Mill Valley.

Olson, 47, of Fairfax, got his ace on the 130-yard 10th hole at Peacock Gap in San Rafael, using a nine iron. Witnesses were Ray Scarlatte, Bill Cole and Sam Cresi.

Eighteen-year-old Quigley of Corte Madera fired a hole-in-one at Los Arroyos course in Sonoma. His masterpiece, for which he used a seven iron, came on the 100-yard sixth hole. Cecil Larcomb of Sonoma and Andy Plumbridge of Homewood, Calif., saw it.

NFL Giants Move To New Jersey?

NEW YORK (UPI)—New Jersey officials have reportedly drawn up the contract and are now hoping the New York football Giants will sign it, bringing big-league sports to New Jersey.

New Jersey officials Wednesday maintained an official silence in the face of persistent, but unconfirmed reports that an agreement to bring the Giants to the Garden State was imminent.

Informed sources revealed that the New Jersey Sports Authority has advanced to the point of drawing up a proposed contract. However, there was no confirmation if the authority and the Giants had indeed affixed their signatures to it yet.

The only blank in the contract, besides the place for signatures, sources said, was the date. The month, July, was printed on it.

There was the possibility that announcement of an agreement was being held up until New Jersey Gov. William T. Cahill returned to his desk.

The governor, one of the prime movers in the quest to bring the Giants to New Jersey, has been home all week recuperating from a virus.

State Treasurer Joseph M. McCrane Jr., a member of the Authority, was, according to the sources, supposed to attend a meeting in New York, presumably with the Giants representatives.

However, the source could not confirm that the treasurer had actually held the meeting. As state treasurer, McCrane is authorized to negotiate and sign the contract.

A spokesman for the Giants said club president Wellington Mara did not meet with the New Jersey delegation Wednesday, but added it was possible that club lawyers did.

"Our position is the same as it has been the past few weeks," the spokesman said. "Our lawyers are looking for the lease and we're waiting to hear from them."

If the contract was signed, it would mean that the Giants would move to New Jersey to play in the Hackensack meadowlands where a sports complex, estimated at $100-200 million, would be built.

Petraglia Retains His Money Lead

AKRON, Ohio (UPI)—Johnny Petraglia of Brooklyn, N.Y., ontinued this week as the leader in the official money standings of the Professional Bowlers Association.

Petraglia, who has competed in 21 tournaments, leads the top 20 PBA bowlers with earnings of $72,338.

Hope Expressed To Avoid Ban

Larkspur, Corte Madera and Ross Valley Sanitary District officials took a generally hopeful stand last night that the Bay Area Water Quality Control Board will not clamp a building ban on the Ross Valley.

The 14 officials present agreed to meet again at 9 a.m. Monday in the Corte Madera Town Hall. They will "rehearse" the presentation they will make at 2 p.m. Tuesday in the Mill Valley City Hall, to a hearing panel of the Bay Area water watchdog organization.

The Ross Valley spokesmen agreed they believed the water board should relent on its threatened building ban, in light of efforts already made to clean up sewage discharges into Corte Madera Creek, and future plans.

Ross Valley Sanitary District Board chairman Peter A. Ribar warned the two cities that "you along with us are co-conspirators . . . any sanctions will be applicable to you as well as to us." Both Corte Madera and Larkspur deliver sewage to the Ross Valley district treatment plant under treatment contracts.

"We . . . know the water quality control board's demands are onerous," Ribar declared. "We think we run a very, very good district . . . our tax rate has always been the lowest in California. Our treatment plant, we thought, has always been exemplary except for bypassing" when the wet-season flow of up to 20 million gallons per day from the sewers far exceeded the plant's 4.5 million gallon daily treatment capacity.

Ribar, Dist. Mgr. Ralph C. Noah and Larskpur and Corte Madera officials then recited a series of costly steps taken over the past five years to partly solve the problems, and plans for future expansion of the treatment plan and additional sewers as far up the valley as Fairfax.

Corte Madera Mayor Holmes S. Norville said, "my overall impression from talking to "the bay regional water board staff is that we're not in bad trouble," although the Ross Valley must in the near future decide whether to ship effluent south to Mill Valley or north to San Rafael in the near future.

"We are in trouble," said Corte Madera Vice Mayor Harold B. Wagstaff. "We're fighting a defensive action. Why isn't somebody asking them to explain their basis for this drastic action? I as an individual am not denying the conditions but they are arbitrarily saying 'clean up or ship out' . . we can't ship out."

Noah urged that the three public agencies should stress that their interim work will continue to offset any new treatment plant load resulting from new construction.

Corte Madera has more than 1,000 dwelling units on developers' drawing board; Larkspur has plans in the near future, and so do other areas in the sanitary district, the officials agreed. Should the regional board issue its order after hearings Tuesday and a second session in Oakland on July 22, the builders would be balked.

Councilmen present agreed that they would carry the load of the presentation Tuesday on behalf of the cities, stressing the "political" impact of the regional threat as suggested by Larkspur Mayor Earl J. O'Grady. The sanitary district plans will be presented by technical staff.

Tuesday's public hearing actually will be on claims that the sanitary district and the cities have violated orders issued April 30, 1968 setting standards for purity and volume of effluent.

Bullet Hits Man Who Stole Purse, Which Saves Him

MANILA (UPI) — A purse snatcher was saved Wednesday by the purse he stole.

Police said Renato Mendoza, 40, grabbed the purse of Mrs. Fratexta Go in a Manila textile market place.

Patrolman Dominador Barros, who answered Mrs. Go's shouts for help, fired his pistol at Mendoza when the purse snatcher lunged at him with a knife.

The bullet went through Mendoza's right hand and pierced his shirt. But it was stopped short of his heart by Mrs. Go's coin-filled purse.

Car Burglary Cited At Golf Course Lot

Two suitcases and a spare tire, valued at a total of $125, were stolen from the trunk of a car in the parking lot of San Geronimo National Golf Course last Thursday, Marin County Sheriff's Office reported yesterday.

Deputies said the car was owned by Frederick J. Gosinger of 137 Lakeside Drive, Corte Madera.

School Austerity In San Anselmo Seen

Officials of the San Anselmo School District yesterday predicted years of belt tightening for their schools as a result of voters' refusal Tuesday to allow a tax rate increase.

Supt. W. Kenneth Lowry and other officials attributed the overwhelming rejection to the "economic conditions" in which taxpayers have found themselves this year.

The ballot measure had requested an 80-cent increase to the district's general purpose tax rate of $2.25 per $100 assessed valuation. Voters rejected the measure 1,876 to 790.

Lowry said he viewed the outcome as a reaction to higher taxes throughout government such as the county's expected 40-cent jump and a mandatory increase in the assessed valuation rate.

Other considerations may have been expected bond elections running into tens of millions of dollars by the college, hospital, water district and city.

As a result of Tuesday's defeat, he said the district will go through "a period of critical planning" during the next year. And that may mean going to fewer but larger schools and reappraising transportation needs among other things.

His assessment of the financial situation and cutback on programs was echoed by trustees.

Junior League Opens Ross Style Series

CRUNCHING INTO salads, some 475 women and a few men yesterday opened the summer season of luncheons and fashion shows to be held weekly by the sponsoring Northgate Group at the Marin Art and Garden Center in Ross. Old friends and new acquaintances discussed their summer travels and plans at the 12:30 p.m. luncheon and were served by volunteer waitresses from the Northgate Group and co-sponsoring Junior League of San Francisco's Marin members.

EYES WERE ON Mrs. Calvin Ewing of the Northgate Group as she swept along the ramp under the trees during the afternoon show in a hostess gown of swirling pinks, blues and white. Seated at left are the Marin Art and Garden Center board members hosting the Ross Town Council, an opening tradition for the series. Other tables of Junior League members and Northgate Group members were surrounded by other Marinites and their guests. (Independent-Journal photos by Alfred Arn)

JUNIOR LEAGUER Mrs. John Caple of San Rafael drew comment from the crowd as she traveled the runway in black hot pants and flowing see-through black gown with silver trim. Ann Caple's shoes were the lace-up-to-the-knee sandals that are new for fall evening wear.

MRS. MERVYN F. Burke of the Northgate Group first appeared on the ramp in traveling outfit teaming the new blazer look with a matching skirt of green. The plaid blazer is among fashion's fall news. A cool straw hat and off-white bag and gloves accessorize her ensemble. The summer series will continue each Wednesday through the next five weeks at the center.

HELEN HELP US!

By HELEN BOTTEL

Men, Boys Expect The Girl To Apologize To End Lovers' Spat

DEAR HELEN:

I still love him though I deny it, even to myself.

How can you forget someone you planned your future with? We went steady for a year and were always true to each other, and then foolish pride ruined things. You see, I waited for him to call me when I was supposed to call him, except I wouldn't call because I thought he owed me an apology. So there we both sat, waiting, and getting madder all the time.

It's too late to do anything about it now because we don't even s p e a k. But Helen, he doesn't date anyone else and he even tells his family we're still going together. Why doesn't he just call up and say he's sorry? — HATES STUBBORNNESS

DEAR H.S.:

B e c a u s e boys (and men) usually aren't made that way. Here are two letters that (1) answer your question and (2) tell you how to solve your problem:

DEAR HELEN:

What is an Ex-Boy friend?

He's the one who always asks your best friend "Where's what's-her-name?"

—The one who calls and says he has the wrong number (rather than says the w o r d s that would get her back).

—The kid who "j u s t happens" to ride past your bus stop when he knows you're there. But w o u l d he stop or even wave? Heck no!

— T h e one who has your phone number scribbled all over his wall, just in case, you know, not for any special reason.

—The one who sends you a birthday card with no name signed, but addressed in his very distinctive handwriting with the g r e e n pen he stole from you.

—He's the kid you really hate to run into on the street, but most of all, face; and he gets that same sinking feeling when he sees you, because you both know that you love each other, but you're both too PROUD to admit it.

(But I did.)

Just sign me — LEARNED, AND NOW HE'S NO LONGER MY EX

DEAR HELEN:

He's back. He's back! That wonderful guy was only six w o r d s away all those many months.

"Honey, I'm sorry. Please forgive me." Those were the six magic words I said to him. Thirty minutes later he burst through my door and hugged me so hard I couldn't breathe. He even accepted part of the blame — then.

One word to your girl readers: By HIS c o d e, he never would have called. He expected me to apologize. So I bit my lip, buried my pride, and did. — JEN

DEAR HELEN:

I totally disagree with the mother who signed h e r s e l f "Down With Mother's Day!" I think our Mother's Day is the best day of the year, and I know MY mother wouldn't mind at all if all eight of us gathered at our house for dinner, even if she had to cook part of it.

After all, a family is the most important thing to a mother — isn't it what we women live for? — THERESA H.

DEAR THERESA:

"Not entirely," Liberationists will say, but thanks for your good letter anyway. — H.

P.S. "D.W.M.D." wasn't against motherhood, but only against the special day that sometimes only emphasizes the slights of other days. — H

(This column is dedicated to family living, so if you're having kid trouble or just plain trouble, let Helen help YOU. She will also welcome your own amusing experiences. Address Helen Bottel in care of the Independent-Journal.)

VOWS SAID IN SAN ANSELMO

NORMAN NORELL

A Pot-Pourri Is Dished Up

By GAY PAULEY

NEW YORK (UPI) —Designer Norman Norell has served up a pot-pourri of styles for fall and winter.

The new collections shown Tuesday night to press and buyers carried a little something for everybody, from blazer-jacketed suits and pantsuits to the height of opulent fabrics for evening including a whole group of d r e s s e s and coats made entirely of plumage.

Always a pretty independent creator, the dean of American high fashion designers (nearly 50 years in the field) did, however, go along with the rest of the Seventh Avenue gang in two things. He brought back the suit, two-piecers with coordinated blouses that had about the biggest pussycat bow ties at the t h r o a t we've seen for a while.

AND HE did stabilize the hemline at just skimming the knee, an about face from his spring and summer collection when he dropped hems to about 10 inches from the floor.

"I decided lengths don't matter anymore," Norell explained after the show. "We just cut them where they look best and send them on out."

A lot of the military crept in. Witness fitted tweed or solid-tone coats or tunics buttoned all the way up the throat to the chin-line. Shades of West Point cadets! Or, he turned to the navy with pantsuits done as almost pure copies of the sailor suit, c o m p l e t e with wide, squared collars on pullover tunic-length tops. He showed the sailor motif in navy with red collar and a more formal costume in white satin collar, the rest black.

GREATCOATS SWUNG with inverted pleats center back, belted in leather, and often again, military button closings, usually double-breasted. Some of them he trimmed lavishly with big fur c o l l a r s, with notched lapels, as in a group of black Persian lamb on greige (grayed beige). Cuffs, five or six inches deep, also were fur. The audience gave a big hand to his creamy wool greatcoat, belted, with a shoulder-covering trim in sable and to another in black with a collar so large it was almost a bolero.

Norell, who practically invented the pantsuit many sea-s o n s ago, does it anew with tailored, blazer jackets in glennplaids among other ways. For evening, there was his white sequined trousers, cut lean, topped with a black fingertip length jacket.

New Books Offered To Bridge The Gap

NEW YORK (U P I) —The term "generation gap" usually is used to define the communication chasm between parent and teen-ager but that isn't where the problem's at.

For real communications trouble, there's the gap between parent and toddler, as the two and three-year-old struggles with feelings he doesn't fully understand, trying to put them into a language he hasn't yet fully learned to command.

To try to help both big and little people, Golden Press in cooperation with the Menninger Foundation, has begun a new series of "Read Together Books for Parent and Children."

Drs. Robert E. Switzer and J. Cotter Hirschberg, director and associate director of the children's division of The Menninger Clinic, have written the s e r i e s with the help of children's author Jane Werner Watson.

The first books in the series are titled, "Sometimes I Get Angry," "My Friend The Babysitter," "Sometime I'm Afraid" and "Look At Me Now." The topics deal with problems the children may have, feelings that confuse them, situations that frighten them. The idea is to help define for the child just how he does feel, help the parents understand, and promote give-and-take on these subjects — and any o t h e r s that may arise from them.

Special Treats On Eastern Visit

By MOLLY MARIN

Mrs. Richard Schlobohm of Novato and her two daughters are back from a trip to the East Coast on which the girls, Mary Blair, 12, and Marcy, 8, had two special treats.

In New York City they were given a personally guided tour of the Metropolitan Museum of Art by Mrs. Schlobohm's cousin, Virginia Burton, who is a curator of Egyptology there. Then in Washington, D.C., they were thrilled to find Lynda Johnson Robb and her husband having dinner at the table next to them with the two Robb children.

The Schlobohms spent a week in New York visiting with Mr. Schlobohm, who is there to establish a business. The couple attended the Broadway plays "Applause" and "Company."

The family also drove to Charlottesville, Va., after three days sightseeing in Washington, and visited the University of Virginia and Monticello. Then they went on to Carter's Grove Plantation, now part of Williamsburg and which was once owned by Carter Burwell, an ancestor of Mrs. Schlobohm. The family spent July 4 at Sea Girt, N.J., and returned home by way of New York.

AFTER A month in Europe the Milton Stannards are back in their home in Tiburon. Their travels took them to Frankfort, Copenhagen and England, where they toured Bristol, Chester and Northern Wales with Mr. and Mrs. Norman Frahm of Corona del Mar.

OFFICERS WIVES Club members will have a coffee to honor Mrs. Lee A. Sarter July 22 at 12:30 p.m. at the Hamilton Air Force Base Officers Club. Mrs. Sarter is the wife of the base commander at Hamilton Air Force Base, and Colonel and Mrs. Sarter are leaving soon for Ent Air Force Base in Colorado Springs.

MRS. JAMES Sullivan and Mrs. Richard Warrington are co-hosting a luncheon at the Sullivan home in the Marin Country Club Estates in Novato on Friday for Mrs. Stanley Friese. Mrs. Friese and her husband are leaving Marin to move to Alaska, where he has accepted a school district job.

MARC BRADLEY Baer, son of Mr. and Mrs. Benjamin F. Baer of Mendota Heights, Minn., and formerly of Marin, married Patricia Ann Smith in Cedar Rapids, Iowa, on Saturday. The couple will live in London for the next year.

The bride just received a degree from the University of Iowa, where she was president of Kappa Kappa Gamma sorority, and Marc has been completing work on a doctorate in history. He was a member of Sigma Alpha Epsilon fraternity there.

From High School To Army In Israel

By THOMAS CHEATHAM

TEL AVIV (UPI)—Their American counterparts prepare this summer for college or marriage or the labor market. Not so Israeli girls just out of high school. For them it's army basic training.

Israel is the only nation in the world where at 18 girls are drafted as well as boys. Deferments are few and far between, issued only if one is unfit, already married or an ultra-orthodox Jew.

DISTAFF MILITARY service is as normal a part of life as gefilte fish in Israel, whose No. 1 priority is national defense and survival. Resist and you become an outcast.

It makes for one of the sexiest armies on record — miniskirts are standard issue — but creates the social problems peculiar to any college campus. Birth control pills are available to army girls on request.

The tour of active duty for a girl is 20 months, followed by a reserve commitment to serve one month a year until she has a bay or turns 55. A private's pay is 19 Israeli pounds ($5.50) a month.

Boot camp, a six-week stint, comes complete with shouting women drill instructors, calisthenics at 5:45 a.m., training on submachine guns and even field maneuvers and marches.

The girls come out of training and move behind typewriters, radio sets, radar screens, mess hall and PX counters, so that their male counterparts are freed for real soldiering.

FEW EVER find their way to the front lines, but they would if the nation's survival were at stake.

This women's corps serves on an equal basis with the male half of the army, eating in the same mess halls and enjoying much the same privileges. Only the barracks and showers are separate.

The Midwife Is Making Comeback

I-J Special Report

LOMA LINDA — Midwives are coming back into medical fashion. Hospitals and private obstetricians all over the United States are on waiting lists to hire them fresh out of the training program. Unlike the midwife of past centuries, the modern version is a highly skilled nurse with special training in obstetrics, local anesthesia and comprehensive advanced methods of pre-and-post natal care. She is capable of handling normal deliveries in a hospital as a physician's responsible health care associate.

Midwifery, as a specialty, is one of two new certificate programs being developed by nursing schools in response to urgent requests from government health authorities and doctors' associations.

The second and newer career program is that of pediatric nurse associate, a job which takes the nurse with specialized postgraduate preparation out of the hospital and into the community to provide health and preventive care to well children and those with minor illness; she gives counsel to their mothers — always in collaboration with a pediatrician or family physician.

BOTH PROGRAMS, according to Ruth White, chairman of community health at Loma Linda University School of Nursing, are being developed because there are not enough obstetricians, pediatricians, and family doctors in all localities to take care of the need. Miss White, a certified nurse-midwife, is assisting development of the two curricula to augment the nursing education program at Loma Linda University.

"Some people think this will be second-class care," she says. "It won't be. It will enhance and increase mother and child health care for all, because it calls for the nurse-practitioner to work in collaboration with the physician and enables the physician to give priority to those who have severe health problems."

Although Loma Linda hopes to be among the first nursing schools in the West to offer such career training to nurses, and one of a small number in the entire country, this trend in education will certainly become universal, Professor White believes, because the demand for nurses with the additional capability is already great.

IN CALIFORNIA nurses are not legally permitted to deliver babies. But the California State Department of Health is now urging baccalaureate schools of nursing to prepare nurse midwives and pediatric nurse associates as a means of increasing the state's health-care.

A nurse-midwife, working with an obstetrician or in a hospital outpatient department, would increase the number of patients that could be served as well as enhance the quality of care. A change in the California law seems likely in the future, says Miss White.

The pediatric nurse-associate is still so new a specialty that the American Academy of Pediatrics, with the American Nurses' Association, has just set up guidelines for education.

Much more than the nurses now working in obstetrical or pediatrics wards of hospitals, a nurse in either of the two new specialties will become a physician's "extra arm," so trained that she will be more perceptive of physical deviations from the normal — for instance: irregularities in heart sounds, abnormal breathing patterns, skin lesions, etc. —and would call them to the physician's attention. At the same time, she will be qualified to accept more responsibility for the management of normal or routine examinations, baby deliveries, and preventive health care.

A PHYSICIAN would examine the expectant mother on the initial prenatal visit. If everything seems normal, and if the mother has signed up for the midwifery service, the nurse-midwife would take care of the patient from then on. However, if during the pregnancy or delivery there were any evidence of a problem, she would call in the obstretician member of the team with whom she works.

The nurse-midwife is trained in the administration of local anesthesia and in doing the episiotomy, as well as the management of all aspects of a normal pregnancy and delivery. She is also skilled in working with women who want to have their babies by natural childbirth. Her training is inclusive of the most recent developments in obstetrics and, like physicians, she will be encouraged to return every few years for new information.

NANCY

ALMANAC

Today is Thursday, July 15, the 196th day of 1971.

The moon is in its last quarter. The morning stars are Venus, Mars and Saturn. The evening stars are Mercury and Jupiter. Those born on this day are under the sign of Cancer.

Dutch painter Rembrandt was born July 15, 1606.

On this day in history:

In 1912 the United States, led by Jim Thorpe, won the Olympic games in Stockholm, Sweden.

In 1942 Americans in eastern cities were faced with the first serious meat shortage of World War II.

In 1945 Italy declared war on its former Axis partner, Japan.

In 1964 Sen. Barry Goldwater was nominated as the Republican candidate for president. He was beaten in November by Lyndon Johnson.

A thought for today: Biologist Thomas Henry Huxley said, "For every man the world is as fresh as it was at the first day and as full of untold novelties for him who has the eyes to see them."

Group Wants To Keep Old Privy

MISSISSAUGA, Ont. (UPI) — The Credit Valley Conservation Authority won't give up a 130 year-old three-seater privy which once stood between a barn and a farmhouse in the area and was discovered recently at a scrapyard.

The Royal Ontario Museum and two government groups wanted the privy for their Canadian collections. But the authority won't give it away. A member, Ab Greenway, said:

"After all, that was the original county seat."

Expert Sylvester Lowery Recalls 1940 Open Pairs Championship

The day before a national tournament opens, bridge players begin to assemble at the site of the tournament to hash over old times and tell the stories of famous players and famous hands. Some of the gatherings tonight in Chicago, where the national tournament opens tomorrow, will surely recall the hand Philadelphia expert Sylvester Lowery played in the 1940 Open Pair Championship.

Opening lead — ♠ K

LEADS KING

West opened the king of spades, and Lowery won the trick in his hand with the ace of spades. The first trick hadn't really required deep thought, but the next trick was a dilly.

Declarer could get to dummy only once, with the ace of clubs. With that one entry to dummy he somehow had to limit the loss to one diamond and one club.

KINGS DIVIDED

Lowery reflected that the king of diamonds and the king of clubs were probably divided between the opponents. If West had both kings, he might well have doubled one club instead of bidding one spade. If West had neither king, he might well have passed instead of bidding the spades.

If West had the king of clubs, the chance of limiting the club loss to one trick was rather poor. But if East had the king of clubs, then the diamond finesse was likely to fail.

BEST CHANCE

Lowery came up with a play that would bring the contract in even if West had the king of diamonds, as feared, provided that South had a minimum of luck elsewhere. See if you can spot the play before you read on.

LEADS QUEEN

West took the king and led another spade, forcing declarer to ruff. South led a club to the ace and returned the ten of diamonds for a finesse.

When East played low, dummy's ten won the trick. If East had covered, South would have taken the ace of diamonds and would then return to dummy with another diamond.

Declarer was now in position to lead a club from dummy, and the job was done. East could get his king of clubs, but nothing else.

ART REVIEW

Gallery Features Only Mill Valley Creators

By LAURA DEVENDORF

For years there have been rumblings that a lot of talent is stashed among Mill Valley's trees and hills. And the rumor assumes credence with the opening of the Genesis Gallery which shows Mill Valley talent only, upstairs at the corner of Miller and Throckmorton avenues.

Not that it matters where an artist is from. But there is a surprising number of respected names among the gallery's almost 50-member group. The show they provide is impressive, especially considering that at least half a dozen of the town's most illustrious artist citizens are missing.

Excepting the shortage of crafts and sculpture, this initial 123-work show has an evenness of ability and a balance of styles that belies its tight resources. The scenic realism is better than usual with interesting oils by Phoebe Deignan-Healey, Gilbert Wheat and Bernard Healey and watercolors by William Lary.

There are attractive less objective works by many artists including Bette Klopf, Jeanne Franklin and Else Gonella to cite a few. And there is figurative work worth note by George Albertus, Sandra Schindler and Maggie Hazell Rosen, plus some of Jeanne Ellner's handsome pots and Charlotte Patera's stitchery.

A co-op type setup staffed by member artists, Genesis is the joint effort of the Mill Valley Fall Arts Festival and the Mill Valley Arts Guild, the latter initiated by the city Art Commission. The three groups are chaired respectively by Dee Fretus, Glen Peterson and Lyman Emerson. And it is Emerson who reports that while Genesis is planned as a showcase for Mill Valley talent, it is also envisioned as the first step toward establishment of a future art center for both visual and performing arts.

As for what it is now, it is a gallery open to all Mill Valley artists and craftsmen who wish to submit work for screening. For the public, it offers member group shows such as the current one which runs through mid August with gallery hours from noon to four, Monday through Saturday. Work is on a sales basis although a rental program is being planned.

Physically, the gallery is a big roomy place. Yet it has been spared that endless wall space look that does justice to certain types of forecful art while doing in those juicy little delicacies. Instead, there are jutting panels and columns for separate displays plus "caves" which hold other intimate groupings. And there are even places to sit down, sometimes with backs on them and cushions.

All such considerations make it easy to pause over such lush rarities as Robert Biancalana's muted intarsia. Its mosaiced chunks of old wood are chosen with such deep concern for their barnacled encrustations, dim, dead paint or the frothy quality of their worm-worked borings that it deserves the time spent lingering.

So does a gentle work such as Carla Hoag's "The Journey Back," an abstract, crystal yellow watercolor with the fragile architecture of a butterfly wing.

A little comfort and assisted seeing is appreciated and it helps any gallery fulfill its purpose of being a place to enjoy as well as feed the spirit.

GENESIS GALLERY — Assistant co-ordinator Jeanne Franklin plus nearly 50 other Mill Valley artists and craftsmen are the working members of this, Marin's newest gallery, just opened downtown at the corner of Miller and Throckmorton avenues. Here, she tests a painting for location.

19,000 Attend Religious Parley

SAN FRANCISCO (UPI)— The 5-day Jehovah's Witness district assembly opened Wednesday with 19,000 persons on hand at Kezar Stadium.

Witnesses from 298 congregations in Central and Northern California and Western Nevada were represented at the start of the marathon of teaching, preaching, singing and morality plays.

Some 500 new ministers will be baptized Thursday by total immersion in the Rossi Playground swim tank.

Indian Music 'Fan Club' Opens Drive

Friends of the Ali Akbar College are organizing as a new group for fans of classical Indian music who do not necessarily seek to become musicians themselves, but will support the Marin school.

According to Daisy Paradis, publicity and planning director for the school, the new organization has launched a $10,000 membership drive, with annual dues ranging from $7.50 for youths to $1,000 for benefactors. The school's expenses annually exceed tuition by $20,000, she said; advance donations and other sources have met half the need this year.

Membership in the Friends of Ali Akbar College will bring admission to special concerts, seminars in appreciation of Indian music and other special privileges.

Three Drunken Driving Sentences

Three persons have been sentenced in Marin Municipal Court for drunken driving.

James Hampton Coleman, 28, of 136 Madrone Avenue, Larkspur, arrested Jan. 14 in San Rafael, who was fined $360.

John Breasted Barnes, 44, of 206 Caledonia Street, Apt. 16, Sausalito, arrested May 9 in Sausalito, who was place on probation for one year, fined $302 and ordered to jail for five days.

Robert Towles Smith, 32, of 125 Cresta Drive, Apt. 4, San Rafael, arrested Dec. 29 on Highway 101, who was fined $240.

Petitioners In One-Way Bid For Streets

Members of the Downtown San Rafael Merchants Committee are circulating petitions to encourage the San Rafael City Council to make Fourth Street and Fifth Avenue into one-way streets.

At the merchants committee' meeting yesterday, Chairman Walter E. Zurcher reported that he had collected 60 signatures from business district merchants urging the council to carry out the proposals of the D. Jackson Faustman downtown traffic program.

The merchants hope to obtain 150 to 200 signers before the council's next hearing on one-way streets Aug. 9, Zurcher said.

He said the plan calls for three lanes of eastbound traffic on Fourth, and two lanes westbound on Fifth, with eventual one-way couplets for downtown north-and-south streets from A through D.

New Water Budget Tops All Previous

A record $10.4 million fiscal planning program for 1971-72 was adopted yesterday by Marin Municipal Water District directors.

Approval of the plan, submitted by Gen. Mgr. William R. Seeger, came after a two-hour workshop session during which no changes were made.

Staff members were on hand to answer questions and Seeger explained the fiscal plan make-up to directors.

The program almost doubles last year's $5,673,029 spending plan and provides for $5.3 million in capital work.

The largest part of the capital improvement program money comes from the sale of $4.5 million Series A bonds, authorized by voters in November.

No water rate increase was recommended. Last year, the board approved a 25 per cent hike that went into effect in September.

The water district calls its budget a fiscal plan so money can be transferred from one account to another without prior board approval, according to Seeger.

Marin Municipal Water District board also:

WEDDING — Approved Lake Lagunitas as the site of a wedding Aug. 21 for approximately 40 persons for a $25 fee.

BID — Went out to bid on the Ross Reservoir pipeline in Phoenix Park, estimated to cost $75,000.

CONTRACT — Awarded a contract to Soiland Company of Novato, lowest of five bidders, for $279,020 for the Ross-San Anselmo bond project.

TRUCKS — Approved request to purchase three service truck bodies from Utility Body Company at a cost of $10,887.

Petition To MMWD Gets Cool Response

Marin Municipal Water District directors yesterday questioned the motives of a citizens group petitioning for an ordinance to force the district to submit major expenditures to the voters for approval.

Several directors surmised that the proposed ordinance is only a smokescreen to cover up the group's real goal: To control future population growth in Marin County.

Although the proposed $47.7 million Sonoma-Marin Aqueduct is not mentioned specifically in the ordinance, proposed to provide control, apparently it is the prime reason for the group's action.

Joan Seminario, one of the group's spokesmen, admitted the group had an interest in population control, but insisted the primary concern of the citizens group was to give voters a chance to decide the issue.

Bruce Benedetti, another representative, told the board petitions are being circulated for an ordinance that would require two-thirds voter approval on any contract, lease or joint powers agreement that exceeds the annual income of the district.

The group must gather approximately 15,000 signatures before Aug. 17 to put the proposed ordinance on the ballot.

Presumably, a requirement of two-thirds approval by voters would make it more difficult for the district to fund projects, such as the Sonoma-Marin Aqueduct, which the citizens' group views as a boon to further development and, consequently, higher population in Marin.

Director John M. MacPhail Jr., said, "I feel this ordinance is a smokescreen for the real reasons: Concern about population control in Marin County and the ecological effect of the aqueduct on the Russian River. "But I feel they're important enough to debate on their own merit," he said. "I'm sorry if it sounds like I'm questioning your intentions. We on this board have had our own intentions questioned in this matter also."

MacPhail noted that the five persons behind the citizens group — Benedetti Miss Seminario, Supervisor Peter R. Arrigoni, Harold Gregg and Jack Felson — are known spokesmen for the Conservation League and the Marin Ecology Center.

Repeating the first concern of the group is to allow the people to vote, Miss Seminario said she was a member of the Marin Alternative, "a grass roots political action committee." Benedetti said he was representing himself and not the ecology center.

Another director, Eugene A. Miller, also questioned the group's motives: "Is it whether or not we should bring water in (into Marin) at all that's concerning you?"

"We want a two-thirds vote to protect ourselves," Miss Seminario said. "We feel we're in jeopardy."

She pointed out that a legislative bill concerning one method of financing the aqueduct requires an ad valorem tax and Miller interrupted, "The ad valorem tax is only if revenue doesn't meet the cost."

"Yes. I'm aware of that," Miss Seminario said. "But we're pretty sure revenue is not going to meet the cost. Are you going to tell me you're pretty sure it will?"

"No. I'm not going to tell you that," Miller said.

Director Jordan L. Martinelli Jr. cut in to demand, "Is it not true that your prime concern is control of future population growth in Marin County?"

Miss Seminario denied it once more and said the group participated in using various zoning laws as one method of controlling population.

California Held Losing Its Allure

SAN FRANCISCO (UPI)— The California Poll said today a survey showed California is losing its allure as one of the best places to live.

The Poll said all residents are less inclined to rate the state as one of the best spots to reside but disenchantment is higher among people who have arrived recently.

"Almost half of these newcomers are so 'turned off' by life in California that they would like to move to another state," the Poll said.

The survey disclosed that overcrowding, smog and air pollution in most parts of the state were to blame.

San Francisco, however, still rates high but satisfaction has dropped off somewhat, the Poll disclosed. The Central Valley also continues to rate high with its residents.

"Sharp declines in appeal have occurred in the Los Angeles and San Diego areas," it said.

The survey showed that this year "only about two out of three residents rate California as one of the best places to live."

"Four years ago, when these measurements were begun, almost three out of four Californians said they thought the state was the 'greatest,'" the Poll said.

Safe Loaded With Jewels Is Carted Off

A 100-pound safe containing several thousand dollars worth of jewelry as well as papers and credit cards has been stolen from a Belvedere home, police reported today.

Officers said the safe was removed from the Donald Davis home at 89 West Shore Road sometime between July 2 and Friday by a thief who apparently forced a lock to gain entry.

Missing were 18 pieces of jewelry, total value unknown. Police said one piece alone is worth $2,000 and estimated the loss could go as high as $10,000 or more.

Aquaduct Financing Bill Clears Hurdle

I-J Special Report

SACRAMENTO — The Assembly Water Committee yesterday approved legislation which would enable the Marin Municipal Water District to go to the voters for approval of its share of the Sonoma-Marin Aquaduct costs.

Assemblyman William T. Bagley, R-San Rafael, had tacked amendments on two bills by Assemblyman Frank P. Belotti, R-Eureka, in order to allow an election on the district's share of the $47.7 million aquaduct.

Bagley's amendments were added because the water district had promised at the time of last year's bond election that such an election would be held.

Louisiana is the nation's No. One salt-producing state, accounting for 24 per cent of domestic production, according to the Louisiana Tourist Commission.

Educators Seek Superintendents

NEW YORK (UPI)—The National Program of Education Leadership (NPEL) is searching for successful professionals and executives who would like to become urban school superintendents after a two-year management development program.

"One source of institutional change in education has come from the outside," said Robert Couglan, program coordinator at Northwestern University in Evanston, Ill. "For example, the new math several years ago was developed by mathematicians at MIT, not by professional educators."

Rotary Club Gives $7,500 For New Park

The Petaluma Rotary Club has made a gift of $7,500 for equipment at the new LaTercera Park.

Richard W. Schollenberger, director of parks and recreation, said the rotary gift will provide 10 picnic tables and benches, 10 park benches, five double braziers, two horseshoe courts, 25 to 30 trees and shrubs, a drinking fountain, lights, pathways and electrical outlets.

Members of the Petaluma Valley Homeowners Association are setting up committees for construction of the park tentatively set to begin next month.

Approval To Annex To Sewer District

Two parcels of land in West Novato will be allowed to annex to the Novato Sanitary District without annexing to the City of Novato.

Marin's local agency formation commission reached that decision last night after considerable discussion on whether the owners should be forced to join the city first.

The properties are a six-acre parcel owned by Summit Building Co. on the north side of Vineyard Road west of Wildhorse Valley Drive and a two and one-half parcel owned by Oliver Mauch and John R. Kristock Jr. at the southeast corner of Vineyard Road and Wildhorse Valley Drive.

The commissioners continued until Aug. 11 another request for annexation to the Novato Sanitary District. R. C. Roberts wants to annex 43 acres at the end of Trumbull Avenue, but the agency formation commissioners put off action to see if the owner will annex first to the City of Novato.

The Local Agency Formation Commission Also:

SEVENTH STREET — Continued until Aug. 11 a request by the City of Novato to annex 35 acres at the corner of San Marin Drive and Seventh Street and asked Executive officer John F. Barrows to notify all owners within the area about the impending annexation to the city.

MILLER AVENUE — Recommended to the Marin County Board of Supervisors that 35 acres of marshland at the end of Miller Avenue, across the railroad tracks from Tamalpais High School, be detached from Almonte Sanitary District because the area is within the City of Mill Valley and already pays city tax.

ALTO STRIP — Asked for an auditor's analysis of the squabble between Richardson Bay Sanitary District and the City of Mill Valley over the 60-acre Alto Strip, from Sabella's to Alto Motel. Mill Valley wants to take over the area and its sanitary facilities because the area now pays double tax. The sanitary district wants $46,630 compensation for the swap, whereas Mill Valley contends it should get money from the sanitary district.

Man Held On Morals Charge

Lawrence K. Visher, 42, of no known address, was indicted Tuesday by the grand jury and arrested yesterday by Marin County sheriff's deputies when he appeared in Placerville, El Dorado County, for a preliminary hearing on a similar charge there.

He was held in Marin County Jail in lieu of $25,000 bail to appear in superior court Monday.

The charge stems from a June 25 incident when Visher allegedly offered a 17-year-old Tamalpais Valley girl a ride home, but instead pulled his car off of Shoreline Highway and forced her at gunpoint to commit an unnatural act.

Activity Fee Subject To Ballot

A bill establishing a student activities fee, subject to student agreement, at Sonoma State College has been approved by the state Assembly subcommittee on higher education.

The bill setting a maximum fee of $15 per semester for athletics and other programs was easily passed and will be sent on to the full education committee for action.

The bill was approved after two amendments were added. One would require an approving vote by the student body before enactment and the other would make the bill effective immediately upon the signature of the governor so funding could be possible for the fall football season.

Students a year ago voted to do away with the fee, complaining they had little voice in how the funds were spent. Athletic programs have since been funded largely by off-campus supporters and other programs such as concerts and lectures have been financed through ticket sales.

Locked Tail Cited In Air Crash Probe

I-J Special Report

OAKLAND — Locked tail controls may have caused the DC-3 crash in Humboldt County June 27 in which 17 persons including a San Rafael man died, according to the Federal Aviation Administration.

FAA investigators said yesterday that they had been told by the pilot of a companion plane that he had put the locks on without telling the DC-3 crew.

The plane, carrying sales representatives from Shelter Cove including Carl Peel, 48, of San Rafael, crashed into a huge rock near the shoreline about 60 miles south of Eureka.

The control pieces, called "down locks" by flyers, are designed to be used while planes are on the ground. They secure the elevators from flapping in the wind and damaging controls but would prevent a plane from becoming airborne after takeoff.

The FAA said the locks apparently were not engaged by the DC-3 crew after it delivered sales representatives to the seaside subdivision for a project tour.

The pilot of a companion plane carrying potential customers landed soon afterwards and connected the locks without telling the other crew. FAA officials were quick to avoid blaming the pilot.

The officials said it "is customary procedure, and it is just as customary for the crew to check and unlock them before takeoff."

Seven persons survived the crash but the FAA said the death of the crew made it impossible to determine if they had removed the locks before the takeoff because the plane has been pulverized by heavy seas.

Bad Check Case To Juvenile Court

The case of Deborah Jean Biesemeier, 20, of Santa Venetia, was transferred yesterday to Marin Juvenile Court.

Miss Biesemeier is accused of a misdemeanor charge of passing a bad check at a San Rafael tavern last May 23.

PUC Joins Protest To Ferry's Route

I-J Special Report

SAN FRANCISCO — The staff of the state Public Utilities Commission yesterday joined in arguments against Harbor Carriers' bid to serve the Tiburon-Angel Island run on its proposed service to Marin from Berkeley.

Harbor Carriers' application to the PUC asked permission to extend its weekend and holiday operation from Tiburon to Berkeley via Angel Island. The company now serves Tiburon commuters and recreational traffic between Tiburon and San Francisco.

The commission's staff, however, agreed that the existing service between Tiburon and Angel Island by Milton McDonogh was adequate and that an additional competing service was not necessary. The only delays on McDonogh's two-vessel service were between 4 and 6 p.m. on Sundays, and then the wait was only 10 to 15 minutes, the PUC staff testified.

The same position was taken by the state Parks and Recreation Department.

The application was taken under submission by the PUC at the close of yesterday's hearing. A spokesman for the PUC said a decision probably would not be issued until after the peak tourist season during which the new service would be scheduled.

Tam Fire Chief Quits; Replacement Selected

Richard K. Oswald, chief of the Tamalpais Fire Department for more than three years, resigned last night and was replaced by William G. Canlett.

Oswald, 39, had been a member of the fire department for eight years. He said he resigned to devote more time to his mechanical repair business and to real estate.

Byron O. Boulware, chairman of the Tamalpais Fire Protection District board, said directors accepted Oswald's resignation last night and appointed Canlett to replace him. Both votes were unanimous, he said.

Canlett, 27, became a volunteer fireman in 1960, was hired part-time in 1966 and full-time in 1969.

His salary will be set by directors at their regular meeting Tuesday. Oswald was earning $1,200 per month as chief.

Guilty Plea To Selling Grass

Tsigelatos is to be sentenced Aug. 4.

He was accused of selling $325 worth of pot to an agent on March 26 and $20 worth on March 29.

High Density Zoning Plan Draws Fire

Proposed high density zoning in the East Petaluma residential district drew opposition last night from the Adobe Community for Improvement of Our Neighborhood.

William C. McGivern, city planning director, showed maps detailing proposed apartment and town house zones near the single family residential area. Pat Furger, steering committee member, said members were concerned that a high rise apartment could be built adjacent to their homes.

Mrs. Furger said McGivern assured the group that adequate buffer zones and landscaping would be required before any apartments are approved. The zoning would permit three-story buildings, but he said he didn't forsee any being built that high.

The organization named Marge Loughran as chairman of a chicken barbecue to be held Aug. 8 at 1 p.m. at McNear park.

Pressed Duck Will Be Imported Again

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Pressed duck from Hong Kong, which disappeared from American grocery shelves in 1968 after the government banned its import, soon will be back.

The Agriculture Department said the Far East Trading Co. of Hong Kong was found to meet U.S. inspection requirements and would soon be exporting the delicacy to this country.

Strike Ends; Creek Flood Work On

Work resumed today on the Corte Madera Creek Flood Control Project as carpenters ended a 2-week-old strike that had halted heavy construction and major projects throughout Northern California.

A new three-year contract was agreed upon by the carpenters and contractors in which a 9.8 per cent increase in wages and fringe benefits will be given the first year.

During the second year, the pact contains a 9.2 per cent increase. An 8.9 per cent hike will take place in the third year.

A union spokesman said the three-year total comes to $2.57 an hour for the 24,000 union carpenters in 46 counties.

Contracts between carpenters and contractors expired June 15. About one week later, carpenters began refusing to report for work.

Harold Hewitt, project manager for the Corte Madera Creek project, said that carpenters were back on the job there this morning.

Work on another major Marin project, a new sewage treatment plant in San Rafael, was expected to resume in a day or two, according to city officials.

Husband Sought In Slaying

A three-state bulletin remained in force today for the estranged husband of a middle-aged Fairfax woman found shot to death yesterday outside her hillside home.

Fairfax police said today they are seeking Edwin Evan Shipe, 49, for questioning in the killing of Barbara P. Shipe at her two-story home at 435 Scenic Road.

The bulletin was issued yesterday to law enforcement officers in California, Oregon and Washington.

The Marin County Coroner's office said today three bullet wounds were found in Mrs. Shipe's body. One bullet entered the woman's head behind the right ear, one in the back of the neck and a third in the back.

Fairfax officers, meanwhile, confirmed reports that a weapon was found at the scene of the murder. Officers would say only that it is a "light caliber weapon" and declined to say whether it was believed to be the murder weapon.

Other unconfirmed reports said the weapon found was a pellet gun — a weapon which projects a missile by air pressure.

Mrs. Shipe was found at 9:40 a.m. yesterday sprawled on the concrete steps leading to her home. Police said Mrs. Shipe's housekeeper, Gina Crane, first discovered the body.

According to Coroner's Investigator Keith C. Craig, the 47-year-old woman was apparently shot the night before and had gone unnoticed until the housekeeper reported for work 12 to 14 hours later.

Officers continued today to comb the well kept residence for evidence.

They described the victim's former husband as white, 175 pounds, six-feet one-inch tall, with gray hair, blue eyes and a moustache.

He is believed driving a blue 1971 Oldsmobile convertible with license number 319-DGT. He may be armed, officers said.

The coroner's office said the couple was married in December 1968 in Fairfax. Mrs. Shipe received a legal separation last December after charging irreconcilable differences.

Her body has been moved to Keaton's Mortuary where funeral arrangements are pending.

She was a native of Hartford, Conn., and had lived in California and Marin County for four years.

She is survived by a sister, Madeline Safford of Hartford.

She was employed at Minneapolis-Honeywell Regular Co. in San Francisco as director of computer education.

Two Cars Stolen In Sausalito

Two vehicles, a convertible and a station wagon, were stolen in Sausalito over the weekend, Sausalito police reported yesterday.

Officers said a white and tan 1952 MG convertible with license number 868 BZQ was stolen from its parking place on Anchor Street between 12:30 and 1:30 a.m. Sunday. It belonged to Thomas C. Fay, of 310 Richardson Street, Sausalito.

The other car, a brown Chevrolet 1965 station wagon, with license RX 43525, belonging to Crystal Castle Enterprises, 777 Bridgeway, Sausalito, was stolen from the company lot between Saturday night and Monday morning, officers said.

Bagley, Not Behr Drops Oil Law Bid

A headline in yesterday's Independent-Journal incorrectly attributed to Sen. Peter H. Behr, R-San Rafael, a bill permitting use of oil and gas depletion allowance money for coastal beaches and parks.

The bill, as the story reported, was introduced by Assemblyman William T. Bagley, R-San Rafael, who announced he was giving up the effort to secure its passage.

Mosquito Abatement Budget Set

The Marin County Mosquito Abatement District board adopted a $180,235 budget for 1971-72 up $1,500 from last year.

The tax rate will remain the same at 2.5 cents per $100 assessed valuation although the tax bite will be steeper because of the higher assessment ratio from 23 to 25 per cent of market value.

The major features of the budget with last year's figures in parentheses include: salaries and benefits, $129,650 ($120,503); services and supplies, $33,085 ($31,045); fixed assets, $17,500 ($20,015).

Included in the budget is $10,000 for the construction of a new $30,000 substation in Petaluma, according to Allan D. Telford, district manager. Telford said the property has been purchased but construction may be blocked if the Petaluma City Council holds to its position of assessing the district $14,000 for sewers.

Telford said the district had planned to use septic tanks until the council imposed the sewer requirements.

The board hired Fernando Reneteria of Petaluma at a salary of $789 per month to replace Norman S. Birse, field mosquito control worker for 12 years for the district. Birse is moving to Montana.

The board passed a motion to appoint a committee to review district policies.

HEATED DEBATE

Tiburon's Annexation Plan: 'A Money Grab'

By JEFF GREER

Proposed annexation of the Strawberry, Eagle Rock and Bel Aire neighborhoods to the City of Tiburon was blasted today as "a money grab" on one hand and defended as the city's logical growth pattern on the other.

Supporting annexation on the KTIM "Sounding Board" program were Tiburon City Councilman Anne L. Ellinwood and longtime Strawberry resident Dorothy Gorman. Opposing the move were Strawberry attorney Stephan H. Kaufmann and Patricia M. Jeremiah, chairman of the Strawberry Anti-Annexation Committee.

Councilman Ellinwood and Mrs. Gorman argued that the areas always were within the city's sphere of interest, and that property owners would benefit directly if the city got the Strawberry shopping center sales tax income that now goes to the county.

Mrs. Jeremiah and Kaufmann argued that homeowners' investments in the Strawberry Recreation District, and local sanitation and fire districts would be jeopardized, police service would decline, and their tax bills would be larger if the city took over.

Kaufmann charged that the proposed annexation would make Tiburon "a strip city." He cited city management remarks favoring dissolution of any special districts in the city boundaries.

"Tiburon is a linear strip — the only way we can achieve community is by incorporation of the whole strip," Councilman Ellinwood argued.

Mrs. Jeremiah declared that Tiburon seeks the $225,000 to $250,000 annual sales tax income from the shopping center for "a tax break" for the older part of the city. She warned that the annexed areas would then have to share the expense of setting up the city police department, and possibly the cost of a substation for the Strawberry area.

In contrast to the county and special districts, "the only service Tiburon can offer us is a very large and high priced staff," Mrs. Jeremiah said.

Mrs. Gorman said the annexation had always "been considered geographically logical." Sales tax from the shopping center only means $1.07 per capita when it is spread throughout the county, but would represent $22 per capita if added to the income of an expanded Tiburon, she said. She also contrasted Tiburon's tax rate of 70 cents per $100 assessed valuation to Mill Valley's $2.93, and warned Mill Valley would seek to annex Strawberry if Tiburon fails.

Kaufmann charged Tiburon with a leaning for high-density residential developments such as Strawberry Cove and Sea Port.

The two sides reported opposite findings among Strawberry merchants as to whether they favored or opposed annexation.

The program moderated by Kitty Oppenheimer will be rebroadcast at 10:05 a.m. Sunday.

Mill Valley Panel Urges Police To Hire Minorities

The Mill Valley Human Rights board, in the middle of an investigation into the hiring practices of the city, last night urged the city council to hire members of minority groups as policemen.

Roger G. Fleischmann said the board unanimously voted to request the city council to require the police department, which currently has no minority members, to engage in a special effort to recruit and hire them.

The investigation also has disclosed there are no minority employees in the fire department. Fleischmann said the board will consider that lack when it meets again Sept. 8.

The board asked the city council to notify it of vacancies on the police department and said it would aid the city in searching for qualified applicants to fill them.

Students Are Climbing Walls (For Credit) At Terra Linda

By MARY BURNS

Anyone driving past Terra Linda High School this summer should be prepared to see students climbing the walls.

They haven't succumbed to the pressures of sociology or advanced trigonometry. They are learning about mountain climbing — the safe way.

The 31-year-old gym teacher got his first taste of mountain climbing while he was a student at Washington State University. However, he really became an enthusiast when he and a friend began climbing Mount Tamalpais regularly.

Four years ago he incorporated mountain climbing into the physical education curriculum at San Rafeael.

Now he has taught about 250 students to climb, using the school's walls as substitute cliffs. The young teacher stresses safety and teamwork in his classes, emphasizing the importance of never climbing alone.

His students take a more difficult step only after they have mastered its prerequisite. Since mountain climbing is a life-and-death affair, the students are made to take responsibility for each other; they learn extensive rescue techniques.

So far Monti has not lost a student to injuries (although one of his present students now wears a sling because he engaged in a little careless horseplay which left him upended with a separated shoulder.)

The students learn the intricacies of the six classes of climbing. The wall's slick surface allows them to experiment with the most difficult class six climb. Students explained that in a class six climb the surface is impossible for the climber to negotiate without a rope and other climbing devices.

Monti believes that there is an increasing interest among youth in noncompetitive sports like climbing. "These kids have found out that football, basketball and track just aren't all they're cracked up to be," he says. Besides, mountain climbing makes room for the nonathlete, he says.

"Successful mountain climbing is not dependent on strength but skill," Monti says. His 100-pound wife, he points out, has climed Mount Shasta.

He helps students develop confidence in themselves and trust in their equipment and fellow climbers through a series of amusing but important games.

For example, one student, wearing proper climbing equipment, may win in a tug of war over two other students equal in size and weight.

"Rock climbing is very good for kids because it brings together nature and ecology, both of which teen-agers are interested in," Monti says.

"There seems to be an element of danger that kids like. In rock climbing they have the advantage of the daring and the skill."

The pupils give various reasons for being in the class. One girl admits she is in for course credit. But others say they came because it's fun. They will not be able to substitute the summer physical education class for one in the fall the students say. Still two classes worth are enrolled. Unsurprisingly, many claim to be nature lovers.

Monti will take his students on one filed trip during the summer, up Mount Tamalpais. "They will have a chance to do all the things we've done artificially, but with honest to goodness rock aroung them."

Although mountain climbing sounds death defying, the classes are safe he says. "I wouldn't teach it if I didn't think it were safe. There is a lot of pain and discomfort but I think this is good for the young people. I think young people have had it too soft. I'm not sure one can really know what h'e's capable of until he's known some stress."

No frost. No fuss.

New refrigerator-freezers are frost-free, which frees you from the drudgery of defrosting. No more filling and spilling of ice trays, either, with the optional feature of an automatic ice maker. What's more, new models give you more freezer and refrigerator storage in the same floor space. If all this sounds like something you need, see your appliance dealer.

Residency Crackdown Recognizes Realities

The San Francisco Board of Supervisors on Monday faced up to reality (in the view of supporters) or turned back the clock (in the view of opponents).

What the San Francisco supervisors did was reinstitute, with some added teeth, an old rule that those who work for the City and County of San Francisco must live in San Francisco.

The rule will apply only to new employees. It will not affect more than 4,000 present San Francisco employees who live elsewhere — more than a fifth of the city's total payroll of some 19,000.

IT WAS THIS proliferation of non-resident employees that caused board president Diane Feinstein to propose the residency rule.

"The taxpayers are concerned that so many of the people whose salaries they pay live and spend that money outside of San Francisco," said Mrs. Feinstein.

San Francisco had such a residency requirement until five years ago, when it was abandoned because it had become largely meaningless through wholesale granting of exceptions. The new rule will permit exceptions only for proved health reasons.

NEITHER MARIN COUNTY nor any of its 11 cities has such a rule. Some of the cities used to — notably San Rafael, where it was written into the charter only to be erased recently in a charter revision. Even the city manager does not live in San Rafael now: City Mgr. James H. McCown resides in Novato, heading a list of many city employees who reside elsewhere.

When the San Francisco supervisors debated Mrs. Feinstein's proposal, a customary objection was raised: It would be discriminatory.

Supervisor Terry Francois had a simple answer to that: "People can live wherever they want. But if they want to work for San Francisco, they can live here as well."

Another objection to a residency rule that is heard often is that it precludes hiring "the best man for the job."

This, however, holds little water. If the best man for the job in San Rafael, for instance, is found in Berkeley, he will be a better man for San Rafael if he moves here to make his home in the city which employes him. And for the vast majority of jobs in public employment, there are plenty of qualified local residents — not a few of whom, nowadays, may be looking for jobs.

MUCH IS HEARD about "home rule." The essence of home rule is government by the people of their own home town (or county, or other jurisdiction). But if the ranks of the bureaucracy are filled with outsiders, home rule is dilluted. The elected officials, who must be residents, make policy; but how that policy is carried out is left to non-residents who lack the same interest in the city, since they do not live in it.

We commend the San Francisco Board of Supervisors for facing up to reality. It did not "turn back the clock."

Perhaps it is time for the governing boards of Marin County and its local jurisdictions to face up to the same realities.

Predator And Rodent Control?

One area of government which makes conservationists see red is the predator and rodent control work of the Division of Wildlife Services of the U. S. Interior Department. It spends seven million dollars a year to pay a small army of poisoners to spread bait on vast areas of mostly public lands in the western states.

The recent report of the President's Public Land Law Review Commission was highly critical of the job being done and recommended that predator control work be eliminated or reduced. A quarterly magazine, Defenders of Wildlife

Legislators Should Be Fired For Not Doing Their Jobs

By HENRY C. MacARTHUR

SACRAMENTO (CNS) — With the battle of the budget over for another year, it might behoove the people of California to take stock and determine if their legislature is doing the job it is supposed to do under the state constitution.

For the third consecutive year, the legislature failed to meet the budget deadline of June 30, and while nothing disruptive has occurred, there is still the possibility that if the dilly-dallying continues, the taxpayers could be the losers in a huge lawsuit.

IN THEORY, the wheels of government halt when there is no money to keep the wheels rolling. This has been called to the attention of the public consistently for the past three years, but the public has not taken it seriously, as state employees join in with the fun and take a chance that they will be paid in due time.

Suppose a suit was filed to halt payment of salaries on those days when no legal funds, in the absence of a budget, were availabe to meet the payroll?

In the school in which this writer was raised, an employee either did his job or he was fired.

No such threat hangs over the heads of the legislators, who more and more are taking advantage of their employers by leaving them open to all sorts of dire consequences as the result of their failure to do their job properly.

IF THE PEOPLE of California followed the practices of many employers in the state, they would fire the members of the legislature by voting them out of office.

Unfortunately, there appears to be no indication that any wholesale firing will take place, primarily because of the lack of interest in government by the employing public, and the fact that legislators are practiced in dreaming up excuses as to why they fail to do their job.

To cite another example of laxity, it was nearly five years ago that the legislature started talking about tax reform and shifting the burden off the backs of the property owners.

And five years after, the legislature is still talking about the matter, with the prospects that it will keep on talking in the foreseeable future.

It was anticipated this year, that with knowledge they had acquired concerning the potentially grave fiscal situation, the legislators would move to perform their mandated duties and provide a budget on June 30.

But such was not the case, and with careless abandon, the legislature again endangered the public interest.

Council Position On Pay Hikes Rapped

As a citizen an taxpayer I feel obligated to express my deep concern and disappointment with the lack of realistic involvement on the part of the San Anselmo City Council in questions pertaining to the financial positon of the police and fire departments here.

We have in this city the undeniable privlege of a competent and dedicated force of men in these vital departments, and the complete lack of interest on the part of the council might well jeopardize the continuation of these high standards.

San Anselmo holds the somewhat dubious honor of being the only city within Marin County which has not granted a sorely needed increase in pay and fringe benefits to it's law-enforcement and fire-fighting personnel.

When inquiring about this phenomenon at the July 6, council meeting, I was emphatically informed that the matter was closed, that no further questions would serve a purpose. . .

This, in my opinion, demonstrates not only incompetence, but a severe breach of public confidence.

People Are Victims Of Legal Profession

"The one great principle of the English law is to make business for itself." — Charles Dickens, "Bleak House," 1852.

Being involved in a yet-to-be-settled legal matter — a case pending on the court calendar for over two years and subject to a series of delays and postponements — I can't help question the integrity of our legal system today.

We, the people, are victims of America's legal profession, victims of a game — attorneys vs. middle class, the middle class trying unsuccessfully to overcome lawyers' unfair advantages.

Are lawayers so impressed with themselves and making a dollar, they fail to consider the "people" they represent, fail to keep their clients informed as to case proceedings, fail to return phone calls, and above all, fail to communicate? Is it demanding too much to insure better public relations if attorneys kept clients informed currently vs. feeding them with tranquilizing pills of half-truths? It is the people of America who are being hurt.

What can be done to bring some balance to the one-sided relationship between the American middle class and our lawyers? We need our lawyers, and, in an increasingly complex world, will need them more and more. However, we need them on fairer terms.

It is obvious a better cooperation between judges, attorneys and clients is essential to insure a higher concept of justice in the United States.

Drunken Driving Law Leaves Loophole

I have been interested in the abundance of comment on a recent drunk driving trial in Marin County. Most of the criticism of this case is misplaced because of the law itself. This law requires tests which specify the amount of body alcohol content determining a person to be legally durnk or sober. The accused has the choice of specified tests to determine whether he is sober or not, the results of which will hold up in court either way — guilty or innocent.

If the accused is conscious and refuses to submit to any of these tests the law is useless. The accused cannot be found guilty without this positive proof in court just because someone says he is.

The only way this law will work would be to put some "teeth" in it — such as the immediate pick-up and cancellation of the driver's license upon his refusal to take one of the presently prescribed tests. The cancellation period-of-time should be definite and resonable — possibly eight months for a refusal, with no bumbling variations for individual cases.

I am surprised that with all our legal talent in the California Legislature that they would write an incomplete law of this type. They must have known that no one could be forced to take a test and therefore no convictions would be possible.

Name Suggestions For Colleges Sought

It has been suggested that, if education at the college level ever becomes more relevant, humanistic, joyous and effective, the change will most likely occur first in new instructional forms.

I believe the Marin Community College District has a blueprint (or master plan) for new forms in the soon to be constructed Indian Valley Colleges. I am intrigued and excited by the plans for the colleges, which I believe to be the new direction in education.

By now, all but the very new residents of Marin are probably aware that the new Indian Valley Colleges is being developed in a cluster style. This is the organization of small interdisciplinary clusters in which students and faculty work together, probing the future in areas of mutual interest and concern. The small group arrangement makes possible the education of larger numbers of students (Indian Valley Colleges is being developed for an eventual 5,000 full-time day students) while providing a humane scale in each college within the cluster.

The three colleges to be constructed and ready for students by late 1974 are College A — the Social and Economic Environment, teaching business, psychology, sociology, and technical offerings such as data processing; College B — Man's Creative Activity, teaching English, speech, languages, art-drama-music, philosophy, and technical programs such as upholstery and home economics; College C — the Natural and Physical Environment, teaching chemistry, math, physics, biology, botany, and technical courses such as auto and electro mechanics and recreation management.

Though the names "Miwok", "Pacheco", and "Novato" are currently being considered for the three colleges in the first cluster, I hope I may emphasize through your readership column that these names are by no means fixed at this time.

We would like to invite anyone with a name to suggest for one, or all three colleges to contact me in my office at the College of Marin in Kentfield.

Humphrey Won't Be Candidate But He Supplies The Ideas

WASHINGTON — Just one year away is the bang of the gavel and the end of the search of a leaderless party for the man to guide them out of the wilderness. The Democrats meeting in Miami Beach — no other city with sufficient hotel accommodations was in the least interested — will have to conclude a confused and muddled horse race that has gone on far too long.

None of the half-dozen candidates currently in view can afford to go into all the primaries. By careful selectivity the prospect is that each will come out with a clutch of delegates. Yet before the last gavel sounds at the convention — short of a fratricidal conflict that would make the nomination worthless — the delegates must agree on a candidate.

PROPHECY AT THIS distance is folly. Nevertheless, here is a negative prediction: the nominee will not be Hubert Horatio Humphrey.

He has a great deal of backing, particularly from labor and the blacks. As to the damage done by the disclosures in the Pentagon papers, Humphrey's own feeling is that this has added little to what he suffered in 1968 when he was a captive of the Johnson administration.

He will not formally campaign, although he is speaking widely around the country. He will not enter primaries.

Yet he has no intention of taking himself out of the contest, for that would make him nothing more than a museum piece — the titular leader in a defeat so agonizingly close to being a victory.

BUT IF HE IS NOT to be the nominee he means to have a great deal to say about the final choice and even more about the platform. Humphrey today takes a realistic view of his party's plight. Unless the Democrats come up with a workable alternative, the voters will see no reason to turn Richard Nixon out of office.

It will not be enough to talk about Vietnam. That is being talked into the ground by a raft of candidates. The approach must be on the economy and the vital needs neglected in a dozen different directions. The alternative of an expanded, far-ranging economy is what the Democrats must arrive at.

IT IS THE FAMILIAR Humphrey of the past, spinning off ideas like the sparks from a pinwheel, bent on giving his party a new mission. He joined with Sen. Herman Talmadge, chairman of the agriculture committee, in introducing a bill calling for a farm and rural credit development system. It would set up a new banking system, fueled initially by $2 billion in federal funds over two years to create jobs and community facilities in what Humphrey calls "the great hinterland of America."

He has a plan to revitalize credit for small business and to get financing for minority groups. But this is only a small beginning. Coming back to the Senate after the four-year interval as vice president, he sees, as the new "old boy" in the school without seniority, the flaws that make it impossible for Congress to function as an equal and coordinate branch of government.

Humphrey intends to push for a joint Senate-House security committee capable of taking an over-all view of the whole security picture as the joint economic committee surveys the economy. Security is fragmented today, with armed service, foreign relations and, on the trade side, finance, all having a piece. The result is competition that puts Congress at a disadvantage in relation to a powerful executive with the resources of a $75 billion defense budget and the other pieces of the security system.

He is thinking of a national commission made up of men and women of the greatest capability and stature to examine the whole structure of Congress. Ancient practices dating from the founding of the republic and increasingly built into a patronage system make the institution not only unwieldly but often unworkable. The delays, the blind resistance to change, the downright failures — all these contribute to disillusionment with representative government.

The new "old boy" in the school is not the only Democrat to look realistically at what his party must try to do in the coming year. Chairman Lawrence F. O'Brien says that since 1968 the party has moved from the impossible to the possible. And the probable, as Humphrey knows, is a long way off.

Powerful Japan Plays Unaccustomed Role

By PHIL NEWSOM
UPI Foreign News Analyst

Japan is doing some soul searching.

The special concern is how Japan now should conduct itself as an economic power second only to the United States in the free world. Urgency is given this self analysis by the winding down of the war in Vietnam, the changing U.S. military stance in the Pacific and by dawning Japanese realization that its new wealth places it in a special category with special responsibilities.

U.S. SECRETARY OF DEFENSE Melvin Laird notified the Japanese during his just-completed Tokyo visit that the United States expected them to take over a greater share of the defense of the Far East.

For their part, Japanese businessmen returning from economic discussions in Washington were described as shaken by the image being created abroad of a Japan so relentlessly intent upon its own industrial expansion that it ignores the basic requirements of good neighborliness.

Specifically, they were accused of flooding the United States with cheap goods at a time when American businessmen were having special difficulties arising from a national economic slowdown.

Japan's new foreign minister, Takeo Fukuda, has promised adjustments will be made.

BESIDES ITS OWN hard work, a goodly share of Japan's prosperity traces back to its no-war constitution imposed upon it by the United States after World War II, an example of the folly of attempting to pre-judge history.

Because that constitution forbade Japan any but forces capable of defending the home islands, its military expenditures have been running at less than 1 per cent of its gross national product as compared to nearly 10 per cent for the United States, the Soviet Union and mainland China.

As the United States presses Japan to take over a greater share of the military burden in the Pacific, the Japanese still have to point to the constitution as a reason why they cannot.

A five-year plan beginning in 1972 foresees a total buildup of $16 billion to make Japan the strongest non-Communist military force in Asia.

The program does not include any great buildup of Japan's 260,000 man self-defense force but does aim at a sizeable increase in fire power and in Japan's ability to replenish its own weapons and other material.

Laird is said also to have promised U.S. aid to Japan in modernizing its military forces.

Special attention, it is said, will be paid to a buildup of Japan's naval strength so that it might help fill the gaps left by a U.S. reduction in the strength of its Seventh Fleet and a buildup to full operational strength of its Sixth Fleet in the Mediterranean.

Japan is used to thinking of itself as poor and outside the pressures of a combative world. To think otherwise creates an emotional shock.

Nameless Victims Found Dead Give Coroner's Office Problems

One story that didn't make it into the I-J last week was the identification of a body found hanging from a tree near Fairfax a couple of weeks ago.

The story almost did make it.

The body was found by two women strolling on Marin Municipal Water District land near Ridgecrest and Bolinas roads on June 25.

To date, the coroner's office has been unable to identify the man, who wore only a white cotton robe and rubber sandals and was found hanging from a homemade cotton rope.

BUT ONE DAY last week the coroner's office received a letter from the Veteran's Administration in Washington, D. C., saying that fingerprints which had been sent to the Federal Bureau of Investigation had been identified.

The Veteran's Administration provided the name and last known address of the man, who was discharged from the Navy in 1945.

The information was turned over to the I-J, a story written and set in type when someone in the coroner's office recognized the name sent by the Veteran's Administration as being that of a man in a month-old case who had already been identified.

The I-J story was killed before the paper was printed and the coroner's office went back to trying to figure out who the man found near Fairfax was.

The case is one of seven unindentified bodies found in Marin this year. Only one other — that of a man which washed ashore near Fort Baker March 26 — remains unindentified.

MOST BODIES are identified within a few days, either through fingerprints and dental records or calls to the coroner's office from relatives or friends.

Of eight unidentified bodies found last year in Marin, only one remains unidentified. That was the body of a man washed up at Stinson Beach on July 2, 1970.

In 1969, only two unidentified bodies were reported to the coroner's office, but neither has yet been identified. One was the body of a man found hanging Aug. 30 not far from where the body was found last month. The 1969 case had $190 in cash in his possession, but no identification.

The other 1969 case was that of an elderly man whose body was found floating Nov. 27 off Lime Point near the Golden Gate Bridge.

ART BUCHWALD

Pariah At The Press Club: The Man With No Secrets

WASHINGTON — After being away from Washington for 17 days I found the town completely changed. Everywhere I went people were trading secret Pentagon papers to each other.

The first place I stopped was the National Press Club bar. It was jammed with correspondents holding up Xeroxed copies in their hands.

"I'll give you two Henry Cabot Lodge memos for one McNamara position paper," someone yelled.

"I've got a Walt Rostow pre-Tonkin Gulf evaluation I'll trade for a Tet offensive report."

"How about a Joint Chiefs of Staff contingency plan for the invasion of Manchuria?"

I DRANK in embarrassed silence. Finally a New York Times man next to me said, "You don't have any Dean Rusk memos to Maxwell Taylor to complete my collection?"

I replied, "I don't have any papers at all."

"I thought you were a newspaperman," he said.

"I am, but I was out of the country when Daniel Ellsberg was handing out the documents."

He turned away from me with suspicion.

I TAPPED HIM on the shoulder. "You wouldn't let me see one, would you?" I asked.

"I should say not," he said indignantly. "These are classified documents."

I saw a friend of mine from the Washington Post.

"Murray," I said, "I don't know how to put this to you, but I was wondering if I could borrow a stolen Pentagon paper until I get paid — on Thursday."

Murray said, "I'd like to help you, but I need every one I've got. I know the guy from the Boston Globe has some extra McGeorge Bundy cables. Why don't you ask him?"

I WENT DOWN the bar to the Boston Globe man. "Healy," I said, "I'm plumb out of Pentagon papers. Could you spare a couple until I can make contact with a traitor from the Rand Corp.?"

"You know I'd do anything for you," Healy said, "but according to Atty. Gen. John Mitchell, these papers could compromise the government. I would be betraying a trust if I gave them to somebody from the press."

"Healy," I said, "I don't like to beg, but I'm the only guy in town that doesn't have a single stolen document. How can I hold up my head in this profession if I don't have a Pentagon paper to my name?"

Healy replied, "Look, we're dealing with 'top secret' stuff here. I know you wouldn't do anything with the papers, and Murray knows you wouldn't do anything to compromise the country. But does J. Edgar Hoover know it?"

A MAN FROM the Los Angeles Times said, "Does anyone want to trade the CIA's estimate of Madame Nhu for the plans of a military coup in Laos?"

"I'll do it," the bartender said, bringing out some papers from behind the bar.

"You have papers, too?" I asked in surprise.

"Sure," he said. "All my tips for the past month have been in stolen Pentagon papers."

"You wouldn't sell any, would you?"

"Not on your life. These papers were given to me on the condition I would never show them to strangers."

I LEFT THE BAR trying not to hear the taunts of the drinkers.

A Chicago Sun-Times man said, loudly enough for me to hear, "We ought to keep an eye on who comes into this place or our papers will be leaked all over town."

Belvedere Firemen To Hold Beer Bust

The Belvedere Volunteer Fire Department will hold its annual beer bust for the men of the community at 7 p.m. tomorrow at the firehouse.

According to Ray Coleman, President of the volunteers, "this is still a stag affair, despite Women's Lib." He asked men who plan to attend to bring their own mugs.

Snacks will be provided in addition to the brew, he said.

The beer bust traditionally precedes the annual Firemen's Ball, set for the San Francisco Yacht Club in Belvedere Aug. 20.

The Junior counterpart of the event, the root beer bust, will be held during Fire Prevention Week in October for the youngsters of the community.

Hughes Is Not A Candidate

WASHINGTON (UPI) —Sen. Harold E. Hughes, D-Iowa, said today he would not be a candidate for the Democratic presidential nomination next year.

Hughes did not announce support of any of the other prospective Democratic presidential candidates.

"I will watch with keen interest the development of the issues by all of the candidates in the field, and will lend my support to that candidate who is most forthright on the issues and most capable of carrying them out when he becomes our national leader," Hughes said at a news conference.

NO SUPPORT

Hughes was among the first to indicate an interest in the Democratic presidential nomination and has made numerous appearances checking on public sentiment. So far, only Sen. George McGovern, D-S.D., has formally announced his candidacy for the nomination a year from now at the party's convention in Miami Beach.

Hughes said he had planned to make his final decision late this year, but discovered already that he was unable to get the support he felt was needed.

"I am now convinced that my greatest value to my country and to my state is to pursue the goals to which I am committed as a United States senator, unimpeded by the label of presidential candidate," he said.

"Therefore, after months of thoughtful consideration, I have decided not to enter the lists as a candidate for my party's presidential nomination, and this decision is clearcut and irrevocable."

Hughes said he had suffered "considerable frustration during the past year" in trying to deal with the nation's drug problem and other social ills with which he was concerned.

"My legislative efforts have been hampered, and my public statements have been discounted by imputation of presidential motives."

He added, "My decision does not indicate any degree of retirement from the national political scene. If anything, I will be more active than before in speaking out on the issues."

RELIGIOUS BELIEFS

A news story which may have been a factor in Hughes' decision to announce now as a noncandidate appeared in a Des Moines newspaper Sunday. The story told of Hughes' religious beliefs, which included attempting to communicate with his dead brother through a spiritual medium.

A staff aide said Wednesday that Hughes told the authors of the story: "If these (beliefs) are a block to me becoming President, then so be it."

"There is no way I can come out of this without being damned," Hughes was quoted as saying.

Hughes, 49, a recovered alcoholic, is in his freshman year as a senator. A former truck driver, he served three two-year terms as Iowa governor and was elected to the Senate in 1968 by only 6,400 votes out of more than one million cast.

The unofficial Hughes presidential campaign had been known to be floundering for several weeks. There was even a report of one stormy session by his strategists concerning which course the campaign ought to take.

One of Hughes' chief problems in seeking the nomination has been finances. He has had to compete for political contributions with more than half a dozen other potential candidates.

$1.05 Million Asked In Razor Blade Ad Suit

SAN FRANCISCO (UPI)—A $1,050,000 damage suit was filed Wednesday on behalf of a two-year-old boy allegedly cut by a razor blade contained in a controversial newspaper advertisement.

Attorney John L. Brennan of San Francisco brought the Superior Court suit on behalf of Morgan Deegan, who lives with his grandmother in Los Angeles. The suit said the child suffered severe cuts and wounds of the head and face as well as shock.

Defendants were the Los Angeles Times, Philip Morris Inc., and the American Safety Razor Co.

The suit, which asked for $50,000 actual damages and $1 million punitive damages, said the ad, run as an insert in the Times and other newspapers, was likely to "produce severe cuts and injuries."

SACRAMENTO ROUNDUP

Environmental Plan Passes Test

SACRAMENTO (UPI) —An omnibus bill designed to protect California from overdevelopment and give citizens the right to sue for preservation of the environment has been approved by the Assembly Ways and Means Committee.

The measure by Assemblyman Edwin L. Z'Berg, D-Sacramento, is far more comprehensive than a Reagan administration proposal sent to the legislature earlier in the week.

The Ways and Means Committee Wednesday —on a split voice vote —approved the Z'berg bill and send it to the floor.

Z'berg, Democratic chairman of the Assembly Natural Resources Committee, told the committee the bill was vital to help cope "with what absolutely is a crisis we're facing in California and nationwide."

Reagan's plan, which goes into effect unless rejected by the legislature, creates a new "Environment and Resources Agency" to incorporate the duties of the State Water Resources Control Board and the Air Resources Board along with agencies which deal with solid waste.

Z'berg's measure establishes a seven-member state environmental quality board appointed by the governor at a $32,500 annual salary to adopt a comprehensive plan by 1975 for "the orderly, long-range conservation and development of California's natural resources."

The measure would take effect in July 1972. In the meantime, an interim panel of state officials would be established to estimate costs and develop initial planning for the reorganization.

Members of the board must be proven experts in environmental management representing areas of resources conservation, ecology, air, noise and water pollution, waste management and wildlife protection.

The measure also creates eight regional environmental quality boards representing the north coast, San Francisco Bay, the central coast, south coast, San Diego, Sacramento Valley, San Joaquin Valley and the Colorado desert.

The governor would appoint the five-member regional boards. Members would need the same qualifications as those on the stateboards but the salaries would be $27,500 a year.

The state board will take over the duties and powers of the existing office of Planning and Research, State Water Resources Control Board, State air Resources Board and all the regional air pollution control districts.

The regional boards are required to adopt by Jan. 1, 1976, plans for conservation and development in their areas. The regional plans are to conform to the state plan and must be approved by the state board.

Cities and counties would be required by the Z'berg measure to adopt by 1977 local plans for conservation and development. The local plans require the approval of the regional boards.

Private individuals also would be authorized by the measure to sue in cases where natural resources are in danger of being impaired, polluted or destroyed.

EDUCATION

SACRAMENTO (UPI)—Gov. Ronald Reagan has made public summary results of his task force investigation aimed at assisting local school boards evaluate management practices in their school districts.

The governor released the summary Wednesday of the group's findings which concluded that only school board members "can ask the questions and act upon the answers."

The detailed report will be sold for $1 each next month.

The summary made no recommendations for action at the state level but did pose a series of questions about how to deal with teachers at contract time and how to improve purchasing practices. It suggested ways to get more use from school plants such as switching to a year-round operation.

The task force was appointed by Reagan last year and told to meet with both state and private auditors "to observe what was really going on in a representative sample of our local schools." The issue of curriculum was not dealt with.

On certain educational policy issues, the governor had said he would await the task force's report before making up his mind. He recently vetoed $100 million from the state budget for schools, saying there was no proof that the extra money was justified.

In a note to school board members, he said, "You can ask the hard questions of our managers and administrators and you can so inform yourself that you will know if their answers are correct."

"We can give you the questions and suggest possible ways of obtaining answers," the governor said. "But the rest is up to you."

On teacher tenure, the task force said current law gives the equivalent to "instant tenure," a situation creating a "haven for those few teachers who should not be permitted in the classroom."

The summary said state and local district rules should be "changed to give you more flexibility in this area" but observed "teachers themselves are in the best position to offer solutions. Let us hope they will recognize their responsibility and opportunity to do so."

COURT PLAN

SACRAMENTO (UPI) — A package of four measures abolishing the municipal courts and incorporating all their functions within a single, state-administered superior court system has cleared the Assembly Ways and Means Committee.

On voice votes Wednesday, the three bills and proposed constitutional amendment by Assemblymen James A. Hayes, R-Long Beach, were sent to the floor.

The measures would fund the state takeover of the courts through a one-cent-per-gallon increase in the state tax on gasoline. The present state tax is seven cents a gallon.

The plan would eliminate the municipal courts and turn all functions over to the superior courts. Municipal judges would be elevated to the superior court. Nonlawyer judges would be phased out gradually. The title of justice would be changed to magistrate.

All present court employes would be guaranteed jobs under the new system.

The proposal would create the Office of State Marshal. The marshal would have deputies who would serve as bailiffs in the courts.

Under present law, deputy marshals are bailiffs in the municipal courts and deputy sheriffs handle the superior courts.

The court revision would take effect in January 1973. The courts last were reformed in 1950.

Under the Hayes plan, each county would retain courts but they would be under the jurisdiction of the state Judicial Council.

'CAN' BILL

SACRAMENTO (UPI) —The Senate Health and Welfare Committee Wednesday defeated the legislature's last surviving bill to "ban the can."

The committee rejected a measure by Sen. John A. enejedly, R-Walnut Creek, which proposed banning the sale of beverages in a container unless it was biodegradable or it carried a five-cent deposit.

Nejedly said the mesure would provide a "sensible way" to raise funds with which to establish a solid waste collection system. But representatives of the California Manufacturers Association said it would cost $90 million to regear equipment to make returnable containers.

Other socalled "ban the can" bills have been killed both in the Assembly and by the Senate Finance Committee.

TAX BACKED

SACRAMENTO, Calif. (UPI) —A legislative committee Wednesday approved a bill increasing the cigarette tax to finance an estimated $92 million annually in cancer and other medical research.

The measure by Sen. Alan Short, D-Stockton, would boost the tax from 10 to 15 cents a package. It was approved on a split voice vote by the Senate Revenue and Taxation Committee and sent to the Finance Committee.

Short, who said his mother, father and older brother died from cancer, predicted "the best research program not only in this country but in the world" will be created by his legislation.

But Sen. James Q. Wedworth, D-Hawthorne, complained that cures for such diseases as cancer should be a national and not only a state undertaking.

HOW TO KEEP WELL

By DR. THEODORE R. VAN DELLEN

People Can Die Suddenly After Strong Emotional Experience

Can a person die suddenly from fear, rage, grief or joy? The possibility exists, in that many people have collapsed following a strong emotional experience. Was it coincidence or did a hidden heart condition or hardened cerebral arteries give way in response to psychological stress? In other words, was the fit of emotion the straw that broke the camel's back? We do not refer to voodoo deaths.

Dr. George L. Engle of Rochester, N. Y., investigated the circumstances preceding the sudden death of 170 individuals. There were more men than women and as a group, 59 per cent of the males were under 61 years of age as compared with 25 per cent of the females. All died after intense emotional excitation and an inability to cope with the situation.

FORTY-SIX succumbed suddenly in a setting of personal danger or threat of injury, real or symbolic. In this group, many were actually "scared to death" during a storm, earthquake, explosion, riot or shipwreck. One was a 63-year-old security guard who died during a robbery. Three fatalities were ascribed to gory scenes on television.

The next most common group included 36 persons who died when informed of the collapse or death of a close relative or friend. Two were teen-agers, one dropped dead when told of her 17-year-old brother's death. And 35 died during a period of acute grief. Included was the 27-year-old Army captain who commanded the ceremonial troops at the funeral of President Kennedy. He died of a heart attack 10 days later.

SUDDEN DEATH also occurred to 16 persons during times when they were concerned about the illness or injury of a person close to them. A 40-year-old father slumped over the head of his injured son lying in the street. Ten persons died on losing their self-esteem or status. (They lost their jobs or a promotion, or were convicted of bribery or fraud). Eleven died suddenly after the danger was over and 10 others at times of triump or success. One was an ex-convict who collapsed on returning home after serving a 15-year prison term.

Questions on medical topics will be answered by mail if stamped, self-addressed envelope accompanies request to the Independent-Journal.)

CAN'T CATNAP

E. H. writes: Almost everyone I know can lie down for an hour or so when the opportunity arises and awaken refreshed. But if I nap in the afternoon or early evening, when I awaken I feel drugged and can't wake up for 2 or 3 hours. I have tried cold water on my face and a walk around the block but remain in a daze until the feeling wears off. Is there anything I can do or take for this condition.

REPLY

Sleep habits vary. Perhaps, at these times you were more tired than you realized and an afternoon nap was not long enough to refresh you. The lethargy is more likely to occur when a nap is taken after a heavy meal or in a room that is too warm.

BAGGY EYELIDS

Mrs. L. A. writes: Outside of too little sleep, what would cause heavy eyelids?

REPLY

A deficiency of thyroid, kidney disease, too much fluid in the tissues, dissipation and fat pads in the lids. Drooping of the upper lids may stem from one of many neurological disorders. The defect may be on a congenital basis.

CURL IS GONE

Mrs. L. s. writes: Why did my curly hair become straight after I had a baby?

REPLY

This occurs occasionally but we do not know the cause.

Today's Health Hint — Serious injuries of any type are best handled by the physician.

11 Automobile Fires Within Three Hours

LOS ANGELES (UPI)—Four autos were destroyed and seven damaged early today in a series of fires in the downtown and south central districts of Los Angeles.

Police said two of the 11 fires were believed to be unrelated, but all occurred within a three-hour period in close proximity. One car was set afire after it was stolen and one was torched in a gangland reprisal. All were parked cars and there were no reported injuries.

Land Price Remains Unsettled

Tamalpais Community Services District directors have decided to renegotiate the price tag on the 5.13 acre Eastwood property, now owned by the Mill Valley School District.

The two groups previously had agreed upon a purchase price of $66,500 for the land at Eastwood Way and Glenwood Avenue, but GXX had not agreed upon future use of the land.

This week school district trustees turned down a resolution to sell the land because a deed restriction clause that would limit use of the land to only park and recreation was not included.

The community services board Tuesday night said it will not buy the parcel $66,500 — with the restrictive clause, according to Glenn Lambacher, board chairman.

He said the price had been a compromise between two appraisers' figures which were based on a high-use development of the land, such as a townhouse or single-family development.

"If they insist on the deed restriction, we'll have to get more appraisals based on a park-only use of the land. When we renegotiate, I'm sure the figure will be considerably lower," Lambacher said.

Another difficulty is the Tamalpais district's application to the Department of Housing and Urban Development (HUD) for a $37,000 grant to purchase the property.

Lambacher said the district has received authorization to proceed with the purchase from HUD without endangering its chances for the grant, but approval of the grant is still uncertain.

If HUD approves the grant, a restricting clause limiting of the land to park and recreation will be mandatory and the district will purchase the tract at the $66,500 price, Lambacher said.

The Tamalpais CSD board also:

PARK NAME — Considered a recommendation to name 11.5 acres of land recently donated to the district by the Tamalpais Improvement Club Rhubarb Park. Directors postponed a decision until public comment could be obtained. The name was suggested because the improvement club purchased the land through sponsoring its annual Rhubarb Review.

PARK DEVELOPMENT — Set a special session for 7:30 p.m. next Wednesday to hear the design proposal for a three-acre open space tract in Marinview Unit No. 1. The developer, Allan Marin, members of the parks and recreation commission and an interested citizens' group, have been meeting to find an agreeable design for the land, between Tamalpais Valley Elementary School and Carrera Drive.

BUDGET — Adjourned to 7 p.m. next Thursday to discuss its budget and set sewer service charges.

Coast Development Bill Clears Panel

SACRAMENTO (UPI) —The Assembly Ways and Means Committee yesterday approved legislation designed to regulate development of the California coastline and protect the public's access to beaches.

It establishes a system of regional and state agencies to control coastline development until 1975 when a master plan for overall future development of the coastline is to be prepared.

The bill creates a coastal conservation commission comprised of two members appointed by the governor, two by the speaker of the Assembly and two by the Senate Rules Committee.

The commission also would have representatives of the six regional agencies.

The regional body's membership would include six representatives of the cities and counties and the remaining six would be appointed by the governor, the Assembly speaker and the Senate Rules Committee.

"The coastline doesn't belong only to the people who happen to control the coast," said Sieroty. "The coastline belongs to all the people."

He noted that local government in some areas, like Sonoma County, approved projects which could harm the coastline or restrict public access.

He said the Sonoma County supervisors had approved construction of a nuclear reactor on the coast but it was later rejected because of possible earthquake danger.

Further up the coast, said Sieroty, a tract of private homes has been built which provides no public access to beaches along its entire length.

"The public has no access to the California coast for 10 miles," said Sieroty.

But Assemblyman Frank Belotti, R-Eureka, whose district includes the area, accused Sieroty of establishing "a dynasty—a dictator" by creation of the regional boards.

Actor Cuts Hand During Oakland Filming

OAKLAND (UPI) —Actor Donald Sutherland and a bewigged Jane Fonda made the rounds of Oakland hospitals Wednesday trying to obtain treatment for lacerations on his hand.

Sutherland, 35, and Miss Fonda were in town shooting the movie "Steel Yard Blues" when the actor cut his hand while tossing coffee into a rough-edged garbage can in one scene. The gashes required 14 stitches.

The two performers first went to Peralta Hospital. Officials sent them to Highland Hospital because Peralta has no emergency service. At Highland, Sutherland asked for plastic surgery and was referred to Merritt Hospital.

By the time he got to Merritt, Sutherland had remembered a friend who was a surgeon at Kaiser Foundation Hospital. He declined service at Merritt and drove to Kaiser where he was finally treated. Doctors decided he didn't need plastic surgery.

300 Ready For Jobs In Marin

The Marin Career Education Program has 300 trained young people for whom it is seeking jobs.

In a letter to chamber of commerce members throughout the county, Virgil S. Hollis, county schools superintendent, and Ernest M. Lynch, director of vocational education, report: "The Marin Career Education Program has completed the 1970-71 school year wherein over 100 students received certificates of proficiency in seven separate occupational areas. An additional 200 attained skills that make them employable at many entry level jobs."

The letter asks chamber of commerce members to consider filling future employment openings with these young people.

Specialties taught in the career education program included general auto repair, auto brake and wheel alignment, food services, marine environmental technology, plastics technology, welding technology, and a variety of office occupations.

Composing Error

Due to an error in the composing room, yesterday's Independent-Journal indicated that a box in the cornerstore of the old Marin County Courthouse was planted in 1982. Actually the box was put in place in 1872 and is to be opened at next Tuesday's meeting of the Board of Supervisors.

Robinson Files For Dissolution

He and his wife, Mary Jane, were married June 15, 1969, and separated last June 29, according to a petition filed in superior court.

Rboinson served on the Mill Valley City Council from 1966 until moving to Tiburon in 1969.

He was arrested July 4 in Sausalito and charged with being drunk in public and resisting arrest. He has pleaded innocent to the charges and a pretrial conference has been set in Municipal Court for Aug. 4.

Farm Bureau Fights Against Cost Of Trials

The Marin County Farm Bureau has stepped up its drive to have the state lift the cost of major trials, such as the Angela Davis trial, off the back of county taxpayers.

Directors have submitted a resolution to the tax committee of the California Farm Bureau, have sought support from individual county farm bureaus and have appealed to legislators, reported Alfred L. Poncia.

Directors agreed Tuesday night to continue efforts to gain support of other organizations thoughout Marin, Poncia said.

Kentucky Man Tells How He Helps Shrink Painful Swelling Of Hemorrhoidal Tissues

...caused by inflammation and infection.

Adolphus, Ky.—Mr. Arlis Harmon of Adolphus reports: "I tried various remedies. Then a friend suggested Preparation H. The very first applications showed marked improvement."

(Note: Doctors' tests have proved Preparation H actually helps shrink swelling of hemorrhoidal tissues caused by inflammation. It's so effective that in many cases the first applications give prompt, temporary relief from pain and itching in such tissues. There's no other formula like doctor-tested Preparation H. TORNADO'S WAKE —

Rescuers searched through the debris yesterday where three persons were killed when a tornado ripped apart the Dunn Mobile Homes Court near Deslodge, Mo., south of St. Louis. The twister wrecked all 15 trailers in the court and injured 19 persons. (UPI Telephoto)

Three Persons Die In Missouri Tornado

By U.P. INTERNATIONAL

High winds and tornadoes lashed portions of the Midwest during the night, killing at least three persons and injuring 23 others, five critically.

High winds swept through two trailer courts on the outskirts of Desloge, Mo., about 60 miles south of St. Louis, ripping trailers from their foundations and leaving only a mass of wreckage. Some trailers were hurled 150 feet into a wooded area. Authorities said 17 trailers were demolished or severely damaged.

Police said three persons, two of them children, died in the storm and that 23 others were injured, five critically.

A tornado touched down near St. Paul, Minn., but there were no reports of damage or injury.

The National Weather Service said today that most of the violent weather had dissipated, though heavy thunderstorms continued from the Missouri bootheel through southern Illinois and into western Kentucky.

The south simmered under a heat wave Wednesday as temperatures soared into the 90s and at some places over the 100 mark.

The mercury approached the 120 degree mark in portions of the southwest and Las Vegas, Nev., recorded its hottest day of the year with a 113 degree reading, one degree off the record for the date.

A drought continued in Michigan and Gov. William G. Milliken has asked U.S. Agriculture Secretary Clifford Hardin to declare three Michigan counties disaster areas because of the lack of rain. Last week, Milliken asked that eight other counties in southwestern Michigan be declared disaster areas because of drought.

Manson: 'I Cut His Head Off'

LOS ANGELES (UPI) — Charles Manson, already sentenced to death for the seven Tate-La Bianca murders, tried to plead guilty to two more slayings Wednesday, saying of one of the victims, "I'll admit I chopped his head off."

The cult leader's request and subsequent remarks threw his second murder trial into chaos —just as his actions in the Tate-La Bianca case.

"Your honor," Manson asked Superior Court Judge Raymond Choate. "Could I plead guilty? Could we change the plea?

"I'll admit I chopped his head off. We could go one step further. We could say I was disappointed because I didn't chop my own off."

Manson then tried to fire his attorney, Irving Kanarek, and requested once again that he be allowed to represent himself "with what small mind I have."

But Manson's requests to change his plea and fire Kanarek were denied and at the end of the tangled court session he ended up with two lawyers — Kanarek and Howard Beckler.

The surprise development interrupted a tedious day of jury selection, which was resuming today following further sessions between the judge, Kanarek and Beckler.

Organic Foods— Health, Hokum?

By JEANNE LESEM
UPI Food Editor

NEW YORK (UPI) —Organic foods are demonstrably good for the ecology.

They're grown without chemicals that can pollute the nation's waters or be carried by winds to contaminate crops, grazing land and the air we breathe.

The compost that fertilizes them recycles barnyard manure, dead leaves and grass, even garbage.

But controversy continues on the questions of flavor and health benefits to consumers, while retail outlets proliferate so fast that their trade organization can't keep count.

Mi''n Okin of the National Nutritional Foods Assn. estimates that the number of "health food" outlets in the United States has doubled during the past three or four years.

Okin, whose group represents manufacturers, wholesalers and retailers, added that there's so much growth activity it's difficult to supply the market.

In New York alone, shops with such suggestive names as Food Liberation, Nature's Children and Mother Nature's Nutrition Centers are popping up like crabgrass in spring.

Los Angeles, long a mecca for health food fanatics, had 74 health food stores in 1966. By the second quarter of 1971, the number was up to 96. An estimated 25 organic restaurants are reported flourishing there, from the flatlands below Hollywood to the winding foothills of the Santa Monina Mountains. Mountains.

Law prohibits health food store owners from advertising medical claims for food. For years, the U.S. Food and Drug Administration (FDA) has cracked down hard on individuals and companies that do so.

J. William Boehne, acting assistant director of the FDA's nutrition division, told UPI there's no way of distinguishing between foods grown with or without chemicals—unless you happen to find a pesticide residue during a laboratory test.

Boehne added that FDA food inspectors often shop at retail stores and test their puchases for contamination, salmonella bacteria and pesticide residues.

Still, the official stand backed up by laboratory findings does not prevent some retailers from suggesting that their merchandise has better flavor and health-giving properties than commercial products.

"The city of Miami is engulfed in them (organic food stores) now and they're all doing well because people are beginning to realize the dangers that are present in some of the chemicals and emulsifiers and hormones and preservatives that go into the foods they buy at big volume supermarkets.

"Sure, they look good. The meats are a rich red because the animals have been hyped up with hormones so they can be slaughtered and rushed to the market. But what kind of nutritional value do you get out of them? Not very much."

Claims of superior nutritional value are refuted by both Dr. Bernard S. Schweigert, chairman of the Department of Food Science and Technology at the University of California, and by Dr. Charles Glen King, professor emeritus and special lecturer at Columbia University's Institute of Human Nutrition.

It wad Dr. King and graduate students at the University of Pittsburgh who isolated Vitamin C nearly 40 years ago. A nutritionist and biochemist, Dr. King sees potential danger in self-dosage of vitamin and mineral supplements, which are widely distributed by health food stores as well as pharmacies. Excessive amounts can be just as dangerous as excessive amounts of food, he said. For example, too much Vitamin C can increase the risk of deposits that form kidney and bladder stones and excesses of Vitamin D are damaging to bone structures.

What about flavor? A Los Angeles wholesaler suggested that claims of superior taste for organic produce can be related to ripeness. He said health food store dates are apt to taste sweeter than nonorganic ones because the former are sold at a riper stage. Being riper, more of their carbohydrates have been converted to sugar.

The same theory can be applied to fresh-picked, plant or tree-ripened produce, compared with unripened produce that has been shipped hundreds of miles from the field or orchard where it was grown. A lot of fresh food sold as organic falls into this category. Organic or not, it will be tastier due to more natural ripening.

More serious than flavor loss is vitamin loss that can occur when fresh produce is shipped under even ideal conditions, which include refrigeration and icing. A canning industry representative said at a New York seminar that Vitamin C loss ran as high as 50 per cent for fresh asparagus stored seven days at 32 degrees, the temperature at which water freezes. Loss of thiamin and riboflavin was 18 and 14 per cent respectively, for the same vegetable stored under the same conditions.

These statistics came from Ira I. Somers, research director of the National Canners Assn., Washington, D.C. He added that storage temperature also is significant in vitamin retention in frozen foods. For instance zero degrees or lower results in "negligible vitamin loss over several months of storage," but at 16 degrees Fahrenheit, the Vitamin C loss after six months storage of some vegetables exceeds 50 per cent. Additional Vitamin C loss occurs during home heating when food is prepared for service.

This reporter bought some health food store products to compare with commercial ones. Unsalted butter at $1.60 a pound tasted no better than a comparable product selling for less than $1.00 a pound at a local supermarket. Eggs labeled "organic" ($1.19 a dozen) failed the freshness test. When broken out, much of the white was thin and spread out.

A 10-ounce bag labeled spinach neither looked nor tasted like true spinach, or spinacea oleracea. It was in fact Tetragonia expansa, a plant popularly called New Zealand spinach that is preferred by health food advocates because it's said to have lower oxalic acid content than the common garden variety. It cost 79 cents for a 10-ounce package when loose spinach was selling for 23 cents for a full pound at nearby markets.

A SUBTLE DIFFERENCE — Experts say that organically grown produce is difficult to distinguish from produce grown with chemical or other aids. Meanwhile, "health food" distributors tout 'superior taste' because of a more natural ripening. Fresh asparagus such as that in the typically summertime dish shown above can lose as much as 50 per cent of its Vitamin C within a week, according to a canning industry spokesman, in reply to the 'riper' argument.

Organic Foods — Health, Hokum?

Our personal market basket study only hinted at the price spread between claimed organic products and regular supermarket foods. But checks by UPI reporters across the country showed price differentials ranging from "a little bit higher" in Madison, Wis., to about 50 per cent higher in a Chicago supermarket that added an organic foods department recently.

Essentially, it is the smaller per acre yield and the freshness of the organic products —fast shipping, short storage time —that contribute to the higher cost. As for its "organic" nature this must be largely accepted on faith —few buyers have FDA-type testing equipment handy.

Until the past few years, most customers for health foods of the type currently enjoying an unprecedented boom in the United States were elderly, conservative and often suffering from ailments or infirmities they thought could be treated with special foods and dietary supplements.

But today thousands of young people are insisting on natural, or organic, foods. It is a natural outgrowth of the present stress on ecology and the damage modern man is doing to his environment.

Said Mrs. Ceil Sundock, co-owner of a Birmingham store: "In the past two years we've seen more young people than ever before. They tell us they are turning off drugs and on to health foods."

Retailer Mario De Lisio, Boise, Idaho, sees health food stores as a new kind of social institution, one that is narrowing the generation gap by attracting youngsters as well as older customers. Retailers in such widespread cities as Dallas, Chicago, Topeka, Spokane, Omaha, Madison and Miami agreed.

An Omaha dealer said the customer type most notably absent was the middle-aged one. He said three-fourths of his customers were young people, although many of them were bringing in their parents "to be educated in health products."

Parelleling the boom in health foods is a demand for cookbooks telling how to prepare them. New ones include "The Interior Ecology Cookbook" by Shirley Ross, a former cook at a Los Angeles restaurant.

Miss Ross' book (published by Straight Arrow Books, San Francisco) differs from most of the genre in that it calls for few special ingredients such as brewer's yeast, soy flour and granular lecithin.

In an interview, Miss Ross said she chose readily available supermarket ingredients because that's what most people can buy easily. She criticized many health food retailers for hard-sell tactics and high prices.

Miss Ross, 30, said she takes vitamin supplements herself because she feels they help "if you have to eat old vegetables," but, she emphasized, "you have to eat a balanced meal for vitamins to help."

Graduate nutritionists agree. Perhaps the most outspoken among them is Adelle Davis, an articulate California grandmother, biochemist and author who has been called "the high priestess of health foods." Total sales of Mrs. Davis' four books are about two million in hardcover alone, according to her publisher, Harcourt Brace Jovanovich. One, which is in its 35th printing, rose to the best-seller list shortly after its paperback edition was released.

Cities May Be Doomed — Mayor

BOSTON (UPI)—Kevin Hagen White, at the age of 41, is still, in his own words, "almost an incurable optimist." But he feels America's urban centers are doomed.

After three-and-a-half frustrating years as mayor of one of the nation's major cities, he can still look out the picture window of his plush City Hall office and see a rotting waterfront. And there's a spiraling tax rate. And high welfare. And high unemployment.

Why are the cities doomed? Not because the world's richest nation lacks the know-how or the money, but because—White is convinced—Americans are unwilling to pay the price to save them.

"I'm not sure we haven't passed that point already. And that's a hell of a thing for a mayor to say," he said.

White sees the country's bustling metropolitan areas from coast to coast decaying so fast they eventually will become sprawling ghost towns as city dwellers flee to the suburbs and beyond to the countryside.

But not before some erupt into new racial violence.

"You know, I'm hoping that a president will get elected or something will happen that will wake everybody up," he said.

"Even if you're a drowning man you don't believe you're going to drown. It's just you don't believe it. And you don't, if you're a mayor, accept the fact that your city is going to die. I'm no Cassandra. I'm almost an incurable optimist.

"But the fact of the matter is I don't see any chance for it to survive. I don't see it coming back. I don't see anything happening to it. I really don't. I mean that sincerely."

"And I think by the time the American people wake up it will be too late."

In 1967, when White won election to a first term, he was one of a handful of liberal mayors bent, he says, on breathing new life into the cities, to rebuilding the slums and improving the lot of the growing black population.

The dire predictions he now utters were unthinkable then to a man who had grown up in one of Boston's most prominent political families and studied government at Harvard University after undergraduate work at Williams College (class of 1952) and Boston College Law School (class of '55).

"I didn't even know what an urban c r i s i s was," he said, looking back. He does now.

At almost every turn he admittedly has found himself frustrated by lack of money, a middle class backlash and the time consuming routine of the office.

"You wake up every single age. You just wonder how much yardage your city is going to lose," he said.

"You like to have a sense of purpose, direction, history, to know where you're going, what you're doing, some frame of reference in solving the problems.

"But it's like having someone walk in and every day having a waste paper basket dumped on your desk. And when you get all through sorting it and piecing it together and trying to unravel it, you come in the next morning and someone dumps another waste paper basket on your desk. And you never have a sense of k n o w i n g what it leads to and whether you are developing a pattern that's contributing to anything.

Despite his despair, White loves his job. He faces reelection this fall and he does not talk like a quitter.

"The fact of the matter is, surprisingly enough, there is no other place, frustrating as it is, where there's more action, more chance to do something even though you're never allowed to do it."

To look at the heart of downtown Boston with its narrow streets lined with expensive, picturesque town houses, modern government center of federal, city and state o f f i c e buildings, new skyscrapers going up, it is hard to believe it is what White claims—a dying city.

Behind the facade, however, is another city, marred not only by its waterfront but by thousands of old decaying buildings; a city where one of five persons is on welfare, the highest rate in the nation; a city in such financial trouble White has put a freeze on wages and hiring, closed down his little city h a l l s and even cut the budget of Boston City Hospital.

Even so, there will have to be a major property tax increase this year to balance the books.

"The cancer is spreading, I think, faster than anybody realizes," he said.

"The city today is not stationary, it's a growing ghetto, it's a ghetto that grows every single day across the face of the city."

Theoretically, at least, White thinks the cities can be saved. But the federal government and the states, he says, will have to pump in the neighborhood of $50 billion into urban areas in the next decade to do it.

And, money alone will not be enough, he adds. Indeed, funds from Washington over the past 10 y e a r s have had so many strings attached "that we haven't been able to adequately spend the money we get."

"Every city in the country is suffering from the same problems, but in different degrees. And priorities shift, daily, monthly, yearly.

"Give me the money and give the mayors the latitude to establish the priorities in spending it. Yes, then the cities can be saved. But both ingredients are necessary.

"There's a risk involved. And that's what h a p p e n s if you draw a bum mayor and you've given him a lot of money and tremendous latitude to spend it. Well, he'll increase with rapidity the death of his city. But you have to gamble somewhere."

Use Of The Pillory Ended In 1905

CHICAGO (UPI) —Punishment by pillory was permitted in America long after it was abolished in Europe.

The French discontinued it in about 1832, according to Encyclopaedia Britannica, and the English abolished the practice in 1837.

U.S. statutes provides for its infliction until 1839 and Delaware, last state to use the pillory, did not abolish it until 1905.

Kentucky Police Prepare Whodunit

FRANKFORT, Ky. (UPI) — Police in Kentucky are working on a paperback whodunit, which is scheduled for release in July It's Kentucky's 1.70 uniform Crime Report, which statistically dissects crimes ranging from murder and robbery to vagrancy and vice.

In the past, the only statewide crime figures available on Kentucky were compiled by the FBI and reported annually in that organization's national crime reports.

Profile: Black Mayor, His City

By DONALD BERNS

EAST ST. LOUIS, Ill. (UPI) —James E. Williams, the first Negro mayor of East St. Louis, needs only to glance out his window at City Hall to see the magnitude of the problem facing him.

Across the street in the city's business district is a row of seven stores. A clothing store, shoe repair shop and fruit stand are still in business. But the other four are vacant, and two of them have boards over the windows.

NEW MAYOR — James E. Williams Sr., first Negro mayor of East St. Louis, chatted with outgoing Mayor Alvin G. Fields in the Mayor's Office this spring when he took the reins of government in the predominantly black city beset by economic woes.

(UPI Telephoto)

If Williams looks more closely, he can see in the window of one of the vacant stores a small sign boosting Virgil Calvert, the black machine politician Williams beat in the city election April 6.

The vacant stores symbolize what may be Williams' greatest challenge—the economic headaches of a predominantly Negro city.

"Businesses have been leaving the city for the last 10 years," Williams said in an interview. "Getting economic development moving again is a tough nut to crack, but we're going to crack it."

It is a very tough nut. The unemployment rate in East St. Louis is currently running at about 17 per cent. Many of the large industries that once provided the jobs for East St. Louis families have left the area.

The big aluminum and steel plants have vanished, and many of the electrical supply companies have gone. Swift & Co. is building an addition to its packing plant, but two other large packinghouses near the stockyards have left town.

East St. Louis used to serve as a major rail switching center, sorting out trains before they crossed the Mississippi River into the rail congestion of St. Louis. The train yards still sprawl over large portions of East St. Louis, but the decline of passenger service has cut the number of trains—and jobs.

East St. Louis' industrial decline has occurred chiefly over the past 15 years. Some blame high taxes and corruption in government. Although some of the plants that have closed have simply been discontinued by their companies, others have moved to places that offer more economic opportunity in an environment that is not as bleak as that of East St. Louis.

"What we need is a climate of confidence in city government," Williams said. "This is a factor businessmen consider and, if we can project the image of a more responsive government, we'll make some progress.

Fields, who is white, was mayor of East St. Louis for 20 years. Although the mayor's office in East St. Louis is supposed to be nonpartisan, Fields was a ranking Democrat and generally regarded as one of the most powerful party leaders in Illinois.

Fields beat a popular black candidate in the election four years ago, but this year he decided not to run after a group of Negro Democratic committeemen told the mayor they would not support him. Fields is 68 now and crippled with arthritis. Census statistics show that the city of 70,000 is now 70 per cent black and that the voter registration has reached 50 per cent black.

Even though Williams threatened to throw the politicians out of office, he began his term May 5 by reappointing the entire supervisory staff assembled by Fields "until further notice." He said that the move was necessary for the smooth transition of city government.

"We are not going to act intemperately or rashly in any dismissals," he said. "We are first going to evaluate performances."

Williams is still rolling on the momentum of his 2,500-vote win over Calvert in an election that had about 19,000 ballots. Calvert, a city councilman appointed by Fields and a political pro for much of his 50 years, had the backing of the powers who wanted to retain the old order, even if that order would change color at the top.

In his campaign, Williams puzzled politicians by snubbing the offered endorsements of both Republican and Democratic committeemen. He was inflexible in maintaining his independence.

Still, despite his professed distaste for political labels, Williams' campaign was given a sizeable boost in its final days when Gov. Richard B. Ogilvie, a Republican, made it known a Williams victory would mean a new state building in East St. Louis. Ogilvie made no bones that if Calvert won the project would go to Collinsville, Ill.

The theme of Williams' campaign was that, if he won, the people would take control of the government and throw out the politicians. Williams' campaign won the bulk of the white vote to give him his margin of victory.

"Not bad for someone born in a town where a black man couldn't be a policeman," Williams says with a smile.

The new mayor, now 49, was born in Maysville, Ky., which, he boasts, "is the hometown of Rosemary Clooney, a big star." He left Maysville as a youth and earned a bachelor's degree from Wilberforce College and a master's degree from Iowa State before teaching chemistry at Lincoln Ridge Institute in Kentucky. Starting during World War II, he worked for 20 years as civilian staff assistant to the commanding officer of the U.S. Army Depot in nearby Granite City, Ill.

St. Louis University school of Law. He finally earned his degree in 1962 and went to work for the St. Clair County Legal Aid Society. He became executive director of the society and held that job until he quit to campaign for mayor.

Williams is a short man with a trim body. His thick mustache adds to the sternness of his face, which lapses infrequently into a smile. His face is scarred on his chin and partially up his right cheek by a skin graft. He was burned as a child, and skin later was grafted to his face from his arm.

Williams is married to the former Lillian Croom and they have five children, Lillian, 19, Sherrie, 17, Theresa, 11, James Jr., 10, and Darcell, 9.

Even though the city's economic problems will probably be the enduring concern of Williams' adminisration, the new mayor would like to handle two other matters as top priorities.

"The first is the national recruitment of a chief of police," he said.

East St. Louis needs a police chief, and a police force it can be proud of.

The Police Department is in less difficulty now than it was in the days of Buster Wortman, the Southern Illinois rackets boss who died about three years ago. Wortman sought to control everything on the east side of the St. Louis metropolitan area—including the East St. Louis Police Department.

He never quite succeeded but he did become a powerful force within organized crime. Hallmarks of Wortman's heyday were gang style killings and stylish mobster funerals. Wortman traveled with bodyguards and lived in a house surrounded by a moat.

The Wortman gang no longer exists. But organized crime still thrives in East St. Louis in the form of narcotics and gambling, especially the numbers racket.

Although the police force is more respectable now, four officers are currently under indictment in connection with the robbery of a dress shop. They were arrested after the stolen dresses were seen in a police squad car.

The more immediate concern of residents is street crime. About one of every 12 persons living in the city was a victim of a major crime last year. Persons living in other parts of the St. Louis metropolitan area avoid East St. Louis at night and may even drive out of the way to skirt the city.

Two Negro gangs, the Warlords and the Black Egyptians, maintain hegemony over their neighborhoods. The new police chief will be elbow deep in problems before he rolls up his sleeves. "The second priority is fiscal responsibility," Williams said. "We're going to review most minutely the fiscal structure of the city, and a fiscal affairs committee of bankers, lawyers and businessmen will be appointed to concentrate on the efficiency of the city's operation."

East St. Louis has about 500 city employes and a semimonthly payroll of roughly $170,000. City Treasurer Horace W. Mickens has said the city will not have enough money for the July 10 payday. The city has a deficit of about $1 million and practiced deficit financing for the 20 years that Fields was in office. Last year for the first time the city's bankers refused to take part in the deficit financing.

Although the problems facing Williams are formidable, he appears to have made a good start in tackling them.

"I like to think of myself as a worker in any job I have, and I've frequently had a couple or three jobs at the same time," Williams said. "I certainly won't be less of a worker as mayor."

New Teachers Gain From Suggestions

STORRS, Conn. (UPI)—Inexperienced teachers who have trouble keeping control in the classroom could greatly improve their efficiency with the help of consultant-observers, it was shown by a demonstration project guided by Dr. Norman L. Breyer of the University of Connecticut.

Reporting on the project, Dr. Breyer, an assistant professor of educational psychology, said two graduate students served as consultants in a fifth grade classroom in which a first-year teacher was having trouble controlling her class of 18. Both teacher performance and pupil behavior improved with suggestions from the consultant-observers were followed.

$75,000 Given In Death Case

PROVIDENCE, R.I. (UPI) — The family of a Hollywood movie set designer killed by a car driven by tobacco heiress Doris Duke was awarded $75,000 in damages Friday in a $1.2 million negligence suit against her.

A jury of seven women and five men made the award on its second day of deliberations in Rhode Island Superior Court.

The suit was filed by the brothers and sisters of Eduardo Tirella who was killed Oct. 7, 1966, as he was opening the gates of Miss Duke's Newport, R.I., estate.

The plaintiffs said the $1.2 million reflected the deceased's earning potential over a normal life span. Tirella was 42 at the time of the accident.

Dollars Bought

Wilderness Road Shuns Contracts

CHICAGO (UPI)—The noisy, smokey little bars dotting the neighborhoods of Chicago traditionally have been the scene of some of America's most creative and intensely personal music. Most of it has come from the South Side, where the muscians are black and the music they play is blue.

But the magic of Chicago, like that of only a few other cities—New Orleans, for example, or San Francisco—is powerful stuff; powerful enough to produce music that reaches beyond the invisible ghetto walls.

On Thursday nights at a particular bar on the city's mostly white North Side, you can hear a rock 'n' roll band called Wilderness Road. The four members of Wilderness Road didn't start out there—their first performances were mostly at outdoor rock concerts, including benefits for political organizations and various causes. They were among a score of bands that played for the thousands of young demonstrators who met in Washington during May.

Recently a scout from Vanguard Records visited that North Side bar to hear Wilderness Road; a little man from New York with wire rim glasses and a mop of curly hair. The band finished a set, the ring of the electric guitars faded into the clink of glasses, the four musicians waded through the crowd for a break—and the little man shook his head, glancing across the aisle with a grin.

"They're the best band I ever heard," he said.

And then he looked embarrassed and very nearly blushed. Talent scouts from big record companies aren't supposed to admit things like that—especially to reporters, especially when there are half a dozen other big record companies with their eyes on the same band.

But Wilderness Road is that good.

It's an unusual band, in a variety of ways. Four members: Nate Herman, guitar, lead vocal and the band's prime composer; Warren Lemming, lead guitar; Andy Haban, bass, and Tom Haban (Andy's brother), drums. All four sing.

One way Wilderness Road is unusual is that they have yet to record an album. There are a variety of reasons for this. One is that Wilderness Road plans—at least for what Warren Lemming calls the "foreseeable future"—to remain in Chicago, not departing for the West Coast at the first drop of a dollar sign. So far, they are not burning up with that notorious rock musician's disease, San Francisco Fever.

They also are holding back from recording or signing a binding contract until sure they are ready to cut an album that will be recognized as better than the week-to-week production of the American pop music mills.

"I think you could call it American music," Lemming said, "and American music is rock 'n' roll, as far as I'm concerned. But there's every kind of influence in the way we play. We have what you might call eclectic tastes."

Probably the strongest single influence on Wilderness Road's sound is country music, and particularly that purest branch of country called bluegrass; both Herman (on mandolin) and Lemming (on banjo) played in mountain music groups before discovering each other at a Chicago playhouse where Lemming worked as an actor and Herman was musical director.

Country music has, of course, always been a part of rock 'n' roll. The earliest white rock stars came directly from country ranks; much of Hank Williams' work belongs as much to the rock tradition as to the country.

In more recent years, some of the best (and therefore longest-surviving) rock bands, including the Byrds and the Grateful Dead, have turned to nearly pure country styles, while other country-oriented groups like The Band have made it entirely on that kind of a sound.

What makes all these bands alike, besides their country roots, is that they've added something more—made the sound original and personal. Such is the case, as well, with Wilderness Road. And they do it with a sense of humor, poking fun at just about everybody from the Woodstock Generation to radio evangelists, with satirical comedy routines throughout their stage performance.

"It's improvised, most of it," said Lemming, who serves as an informal spokesman for the band. "Then we hold the good stuff.

"A lot of our tunes are done in a particular context, so that a comedy bit is just something to enhance the tune. Like we do country-type tunes and one of the things we do is parody or satirize country music stations, which a lot of people have listened to and enjoyed for a long time."

Wilderness Road's humor is biting, irreverent, and might at times even be offensive to some. But such is the nature of satire.

RIDDLE OF ANGELA DAVIS

Ex-Intimates Recall Traits

By JACK V. FOX
United Press International
(Fourth of Five Articles)

When Angela Davis came back to the United States in 1967 after two years in Germany to study again under Prof. Herbert Marcuse at the University of California in San Diego, she lived for almost a year with another graduate student, his wife and their infant son.

The young man was Barry Shapiro, who also was working under Marcuse toward a PhD in philosophy. Shapiro had rented an old house at Cardiff-by-the-Sea north of the campus and he subleased a big downstairs room with an ocean view to Angela.

Miss Davis, now so much in the public eye, still remains pretty much a two dimensional figure —brilliant intellectual, fiery black militant. Of all the dozens of people UPI correspondents talked with in tracing her life. Shapiro was one of the few able — or willing — to talk about her as a woman behind the ultra serious front of intellectualism and political advocacy.

Shapiro found her warm, easy to be around, quick to become involved with the joys and problems of other people.

"I remember her teaching our baby, Aaron, how to walk and talk when he was only six or eight months old," Shapiro recalls.

"My wife, Evelyn, and I would get in fights, I guess like all young people, some pretty bitter, arguments. Angela would listen and then she would stop us and say: Do you know you argued just the opposite the other day and now you have switched completely around? You sound pretty silly. And we would calm down."

Angela would often have the evening meal with the Shapiros,

Residents Terrified Of Killer

GRASS VALLEY (UPI)— "Terrified" residents of the wild Sierra Nevada foothills armed themselves Wednesday as a maniacal killer who hacked two persons to death remained at large.

Sheriff Wayne Brown said his small office at Nevada City was deluged with calls from residents of the Mother Lode gold country seeking information about gun permits and providing "leads" to the killer.

The powerfully built middleaged man with thinning gray hair, "laughing, grumbling and growling like an animal," roamed through a campground on the Bear River Monday night with a sickle and machete, killing a man and woman and wounding three others.

"People up here are just terrified," said District Attorney Harold Berliner. "This is the kind of country where people are used to leaving their doors open and letting their children sleep in the back yard."

Instead, worried housewives in the area near the murder site were telephoning deputies asking if they could buy and keep a gun. They were told they could if they kept the gun visible at all times. Deputies also urged them to keep their doors and windows locked at night.

"These people are frightened —and I mean frightened," said Deputy Ronald Parscali.

The sheriff's office was checking out "thousands" of leads from citizens, searching for physical clues at the blood-spattered Dog Bar campground and questioning miners and hermits living in the remote foothills. Brown called off a ground search for the killer, saying a manhunt in the thick woods and wilderness was "hopeless."

Among the leads checked out by the deputies was a report by a California Division of Forestry employe that he saw a man fitting the slayer's description Tuesday night near Rollins Lake, about five miles from the murder scene. The worker said the man was "just walking around."

Undersheriff Frank Gallino said his men "haven't pinned anything down on this. We're turning over every rock, believe me, but we have nothing firm at all."

Sheriff Brown went to Auburn to question Kenneth Garbe, 20, who was slashed in his tent before the killer attacked his two victims at their nearby tents. Killed were Mrs. Donna Fitzhugh, 28, Ontario, Calif., and John Simmons, 29, Weimar, Calif.

Mrs. Martha Marie Parker, 25, Walnut, Calif., who was nearly decapitated and reported near death Tuesday, remained in critical condition today but doctors said she was showing slight improvement.

FIRE DESTROYS HOUSE, TIMBER

Forest Knolls Blaze Spreads Up Steep Ravine; Aid Called To Combat Flames

Fire of undetermined origin yesterday destroyed a small house in Forest Knolls, then spread up a steep ravine devouring five acres of timber and brush.

Damage to the house was estimated by firemen at $5,000 and $4,000 to the contents. No estimate was made of the value of the timber destroyed.

The fire was first noticed at 1:54 p.m. by Leonard Epstein on Mount Barnabe lookout.

Dennison said that he was alone in the swimming pool on the far side of the larger house, and could not hear anything because of the pool filter running. "When I heard the fire and went up to the house, the windows had all blown out and flames were coming out of them," he said.

The fire had already started up the ravine and burned the first big pine tree, he said.

He ran back to the other house to turn in the alarm, but the first fire truck arrived at that time.

Before the fire was brought under control at 4:45 p.m., the Marin County Fire Department had 10 of its trucks, and two bulldozers on the fire. They were aided by a Civil Defense truck from Kentfield, a Nicasio volunteer fire department truck, four borate tanker planes and one spotter plane from the state Division of Forestry.

In addition, approximately 50 to 60 volunteers helped the 40 firemen stretch hoses and battle the blaze with shovels.

"When I saw the way the fire was spreading up the hillside, I called for help from the bombers to stop it before it went down the other side to Tamal Road," said Fire Chief Richard D. Pedroli.

He estimated that the fire could have endangered 20 to 30 houses and a private campground occupied by about 125 boys and girls and staff members.

One of the firemen said that the fire came within 100 yards of the first house off Tamal Road.

The Marin County Fire Department had 10 men on the fire all night and mopping up operations was to continue today, the chief said.

Dennison said that he was a music student and the larger house was rented by two other musicians, Robert Watson and Robert Johnson. They used the living room of the smaller house for a studio.

"We lost at least $2,000 worth of musical instruments, but probably closer to $4,000 worth," Dennison said. In addition, he lost all of his personal belongings.

Connally: Economic Comeback

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Treasury secretary John B. Connally, newly designated as President Nixon's chief economic spokesman, said today the economy is making a strong comeback from last year's recession although some soft spots may remain.

"You can't come to any conclusion but what we are engaged in is an expansion of considerable proportions," said Connally. "It is broad in its sweep and deep in its track."

But Connally conceded that during the next few months, there would be some bad news mixed with the good:

"If people just want to be pessimistic; if they want to look at things they can be downhearted about, I think they will be able to do it."

At his first general news conference since he became the only Democrat in Nixon's Cabinet last February, Connally declined to be overly specific on the economic situation.

On unemployment, Connally said the administration had not changed its prediction that the jobless rate could be cut from almost 6 per cent of the labor force to 4.5 per cent by the middle of next year. But in the next breath he said, "I'm not prepared to say that we are going to meet the goal."

On inflation, Connally said the rate of price increases "should stabilize" this year. Asked if he expected it to stabilize at the 7.2 per cent annual rate recorded in May, he replied that the present rate "is closer to 3 per cent." But he declined to predict inflation at that rate either.

Connally also reiterated that the administration had ruled out wage-price controls to combat inflation and a tax cut or a massive increase in spending to spur the economy and cut unemployment.

Connally said earlier it was a myth to talk of unemployment at the full-employment rate of 4 per cent. He said that rate had never been achieved except in wartime.

"I did not say that was my view," he said. "I was reporting historical facts. We're going to work to get it to 4 per cent. Then we're going to work to get it lower than that."

Can it be cut to 4 per cent or less?

"Sure, I think so."

When?

"I don't know. It depends upon many factors. I think we can achieve anything we set our mind on."

U.S. Offers Bid To Thaw Peace Talks; Reds Balk

Ambassador Bruce Proposes Cease-Fire In All Of Indochina

PARIS (UPI) — The United States offered what it called a new approach today aimed at unfreezing the Vietnam peace conference including a cease-fire throughout Indochina. It said the Communists failed to respond constructively.

David K.E.Bruce, the chief American negotiator at the Paris talks, suggested at today's weekly meeting of the conference a cease-fire while the July 1 Communist peace proposals are discussed.

He again urged a restricted, nonpublic meeting to discuss the Communist plan. But he emerged from today's four-hour session and told newsmen, "I sought to elicit some clarification of their proposals, past and present, but without any response.

"Nor did I get any answer to the questions I put to them. They pursued their usual false propaganda and reasserted their usual preconditions."

Among other things, the Communist plan calls for releasing the approximately 450 American prisoners of war and withdrawing all U.S troops in Vietnam before the end of this year.

The United States has called in the past for cease-fires, notably last Oct. 7, when President Nixon called for a "cease-fire in place" during an expanded peace conference.

The new Communist peace plan calls only for a cease-fire between the Vietnamese Communists and U.S. forces. Bruce, in effect, was widening that to include a cease-fire by all forces, allied and Communist, throughout all of Indochina—Laos and Cambodia as well as Vietnam.

The Communists in recent interviews have insisted that to enlarge their cease-fire proposal would simply be a delaying tactic.

On the same grounds, that the United States is stalling, the Communists last week refused to hold a restricted meeting.

Today, the Communists said the Nixon Administration's chief reaction so far to their proposals has been to step up the fighting and reassert sup-

Ellsberg Asks Court To Bar Extradition

BOSTON (UPI)—A federal magistrate took under advisement today a motion by lawyers for Dr. Daniel Ellsberg to dismiss a government request that Ellsberg be ordered to California to stand trial for leaking secret Pentagon papers to the press.

Magistrate Peter W. Princi said he would "obviously need more time" to inspect Ellsberg's contention that the government's case against him was obtained through allegedly illegal electronic eavesdropping.

Princi continued the hearing to July 23 to give Ellsberg's attorneys time to prepare a rebuttal to arguments by Assistant U.S. Attorney Lawrence Cohen that Ellsberg's arguments about why the removal order should be not granted are invalid.

Lawyers for Ellsberg, a former Pentagon and State Department aide who is now a senior research associate at the Center for International Studies at Massachusetts Institute of Technology, filed the motion Tuesday that was the basis of arguments at today's hearing.

Ellsberg's chief attorney, Leonard B. Boudin, argued the evidence of wiretapping should be brought out at the removal hearing in Boston rather than at a trial in Los Angeles.

Cohen argued that the U.S. District Court here does not have jurisdiction over the wiretapping charge. He said the defendant would have full opportunity to present evidence of eavesdropping in the Central District for California.

Asked for his reaction to today's court proceedings, Ellsberg said, "It's new to me. I'm just learning all the time."

About 50 reporters and spectators watched the proceedings. Identities were checked at the door and all handbags were searched and men's coats were frisked as persons entered the courtroom.

A prehearing memorandum prepared by Boudin contained the argument that Ellsberg

Transit Union May Add To Nation's Labor Woes

By U.P.INTERNATIONAL

Faced with threats of mass firings and pay cuts, the 180,000-member United Transportation Union today made plans to add to the nation's labor woes by striking at least two railroads Friday over a work rule dispute.

Half a million telephone workers remained off their jobs today in the second day of a strike against the American Telephone and Telegraph Co. (AT&T). No negotiations were scheduled.

A spokesman for the strikers' union said however that union bargaining committees would be meeting with representatives of individual Bell System companies today and that some such sessions were held Wednesday.

Strikes also continued in the copper, shipping, telegraph and farm equipment industries, and complicating the labor scene were contract talks involving 350,000 steel workers and 650,000 postal workers in Washington.

Union Pacific and the Southern Railway are the targets of the UTU's walkout, but the union also wants to strike the Chicago & North Western Railway. Whether they will be able to strike the C&NW depends on a court hearing today in Chicago on an injunction issued by a federal judge preventing the strike until July 23.

As a result of the threatened strike, the railroads announced Wednesday they would impose the new work rules on all railroads not hit by the strike, would fire thousands of UTU members and cut paychecks of others.

The mass walkout by 500,000 Communications Workers of America Wednesday morning had little effect on normal telephone service, except for delays when calling information or in operator assisted calls.

In a cross-country chek, UPI bureaus reported waiting up to 2 1-2 minutes to reach an information operator, with lesser delays for operator-assisted credit card or person-to-person long distance calls.

Bagley Bill For Angela Trial Relief To Floor

I-J Special Report

SACRAMENTO — Legislation requiring the state to pay part of the costs for the Davis-Magee trial went to the Assembly floor yesterday after clearing the ways and means committee in a split voice vote.

Sstate officials variously estimated the potential cost to the state from $350,000 to $1 million under the bill (AB 644) by Assemblyman William T. Bagley, R-San Rafael.

The measure adds conspiracy to escape from prison to those offenses for which the state must reimburse trial costs. Angela Davis and Ruchell Magee are charged with murder, kidnapping and conspiracy in connection with the shoot-out last Aug. 7 at the Civic Center in which Judge Harold J. Haley and three others died.

None of these charges, however, qualified the trial for state reimbursement, the attorney general ruled last month.

The state reimburses counties for the costs of investigation and preparation of a trial as well as for hearings and the trial itself.

But the issue of whether security costs are included has remained unclear, thus Marin probably would get only partial reimbursement even if Bagley's

North Italy Hit By Quake: 2 Die

The earthquake rolled across the Italian peninsula from sea to sea, jarring Genoa, Venice, Milan, Padua, Bologna, Parma, Florence and other cities within a 25,000-square mile area.

Police said many persons were injured during wild scrambles into open fields. One man died of a heart attack and another was killed in the city of Reggio Emilia. The quake registered between 2 and 4 on the 12-point Mercalli scale.

WIRE NEWS BRIEFS From Everywhere

Sleeping Sickness

BROWNSVILLE, Tex. (UPI) —A rare sleeping sickness that has killed thousands of horses in a sweep from South America across Mexico and into Texas, has begun afflicting humans.

Thirty-four persons were hospitalized in Texas' lower Rio Grande Valley with symptoms of the disease. Doctors said three of them were confirmed cases of Venezuelan equine encephomyelitis. The others were awaiting laboratory confirmation.

The disease is not as dangerous to humans as it to horses, health authorities said.

Scores of stricken horses fell dead in South Texas. Local authorities ordered ranchers to bury the animals where they lay.

Rodeos, horse races and county fairs were canceled.

The U.S. Department of Agriculture placed a quarantine on Texas, restricting the movement of horses from the state to those vaccinated 14 days before.

Congo Is Next

NAIROBI, Kenya (UPI)— Vice President Spiro T. Agnew ended a leisurely visit to Kenya today and set off for the Congo, the third African nation on his round-the-world diplomatic mission for President Nixon.

As he did in Ethiopia and Kenya, Agnew will meet with leaders in the Congolese capital of Kinshasa. They are strong allies of the United States and no important problems need to be resolved.

However, the discussions with President Joseph Mobutu — unlike the talks with President Jomo Kenyatta of Kenya which were informal and devoid of substantive issues —likely will be more significant, Agnew aides said.

Mobutu, who has ruled the Congo for six years, can be expected to renew his plea for more American investment in the Congo, Africa's second largest nation, they said.

Strike Halted

MOSCOW (UPI) —Police broke up a public hunger strike by 44 Soviet Jews today and held about 30 of them in custody, possibly for forcible return to their native Soviet Georgian republic, Jewish sources said.

They said 50 to 100 policemen entered the central telegraph building, where the Jews had been fasting since Monday, at about 4 a.m. and led the protesters out without a struggle.

The Jews were demonstrating for the right to go to Israel.

The police took the entire group to a nearby sobering-up station — there are common in Moscow. There, 10 Muscovite Jews were freed about noon after receiving warnings of "serious punishment or further Zionist demonstrations," the sources said.

Factory Output

WASHINGTON (UPI)—The output of the nation's factories, mines and utilities increased in June for the fourth straight month but the pace of the advance indicated that recovery from last year's recession continues to be gradual.

The Federal Reserve Board said its industrial production index rose to 167.9 per cent of the 1957-59 average in June, up 0.4 per cent from May.

But the June index remained 3.8 per cent below the all time peak recorded in July, 1969 and was 0.5 per cent below the figure for August, the final full month before last fall's twomonth auto strike.

Rabat Roundup

RABAT (UPI)—King Hassan II said Wednesday night all the conspirators in Saturday's attempt to overthrow him have been rounded up in a countrywide manhunt by police and soldiers.

Moroccan sources said more than 1,000 civilians have been arrested, besides the mutinous soldiers that tried to assassinate the king and seize control of the government.

They said 260 rebel and loyalist troops and civilians died in the fighting that broke out when rebel soldiers invaded Hassan's summer palace during his 42nd birthday celebration firing machineguns and rockets.

Ten high-ranking officers, among them four generals, were executed by firing squad Tuesday, and more appeared likely.

The Libyan ambassador, Col. Yousef El-Shibani, was under house arrest because of Libya's declaration of support for the rebels, and severance of relations with Morocco. Diplomatic sources in Rabat said, however, Hassan did not plan to mirror Tripoli's move, in the interest of preserving Arab unity as much as possible.

Removing Gas

NAHA, Okinawa (UPI)—The U.S. Army today began moving nearly 13,000 tons of poison gas from Okinawa to Johnston Island in mid-Pacific.

A convoy of seven flatbed trucks carrying artillery shells and mortar rounds filled with mustard gas traveled without incident over and eight-mile route to a Navy pier where the gas was loaded aboard a Navy vessel.

The convoy was the first to transport the gas off Okinawa since January when U.S. authorities moved 150 tons of gas to Johnston Island, a 700-acre island in the middle of the Pacific.

Murder Figure 'Candy' Mossler Marries Again

HOUSTON (UPI) —Candace "Candy" Mossler, 51, who was found innocent five years ago of the murder of her millionaire husband Jacques, was married Wednesday to Barnett Garrison, 32, her third husband.

Garrison is a self-employed electrical contractor.

The former Mrs. Mossler was tried with her nephew Melvin Lane Powers with conspiring to kill Mossler, 69, who was stabbed to death in 1964 in his Miami apartment.

The two defendants were acquitted in 1966.

Mossler left his fortune to his wife and she now manages several investment corporations.

Ford, VW Buses Hit For Crash Protection

WASHINGTON (UPI) —Consumers Union said today its tests of bus-type station wagons turned up safety shortcomings including "grossly inadequate" crash protection in Volkswagen and Ford models.

The report, released to newsmen in advance of its scheduled publication in the August issue of Consumer Reports magazine, said Dodge and Chevrolet bus wagons provide "marginal" protection of passengers in a front end crash.

"Don't buy one unless you absolutely need all the load capacity they offer," the article said of bus wagons.

"CU (Consumers Union) has grave doubts about the safety of such vehicles," the article said. "The ability of the Chevrolet and Dodge to protect occupants adequately in a frontend crash is marginal, in CU's view.

"Protection in the Ford and the VW is so grossly inadequate that we rated these two buses not acceptable. Further, the Ford's brakes were so poor that we judged that vehicle not acceptable on those grounds, too. And the VW has so much difficulty keeping up with highway traffic as to present a hazard not only to its occupants but to occupants of vehicles that share the road with it.

"We also judged that under some conditions lethal exhaust fumes could seep into the passenger compartments of the Dodge, the Ford and the VW buses."

CU said adequate crash protection requires at least two feet of "frontal collapse distance" —the structure between the driver and the vehicle's front.

Volkswagen disputed the finding. "Our engineers, using test data compiled from scores of barrier crash tests, conducted in accordance with federal standards, have designed into our vehicle's structure energy absorbing elements to protect occupants in frontal collisions," Volkswagen said in a statement.

"Thus the VW bus complies with all federal barrier crash standards required for passenger cars even though under the law all such bus type vehicles are exempt from compliance," the firm added.

SAFETY QUESTIONED — In a story released yesterday by Consumers Union, with headquarters in Washington, said tests of bus-type station wagons turned up safety shortcomings including "grossly inadequate" crash protection in Volkswagen (top) and Ford (below) models. Called "marginal" were Dodge and Chevrolet bus wagons. (UPI Telephoto)

Cambodia Asks Death Penalty In Trial Of Sihanouk's Sons

PHNOM PENH (UPI)—The Cambodian government Wednesday asked for the death penalty for two sons of deposed Prince Norodom Sihanouk. They are charged with political murder and collaboration with the enemy.

The royal children sat passively in a packed military courtroom when charges against them and 11 other Cambodians were read, and the death penalty demanded.

Most of the session was taken up by legal manuevring and defense motions to dismiss the cases against the 13.

One of Sihanouk's sons facing trial Wednesday, Nordom Naradipm, 25, was convicted last April 6 of high treason, and is serving a five-year jail sentence.

The second royal child, Norodom Ranarith, 27, a former university of Phnom Penh law student, has been under house arrest since last Dec. 21 for his alleged terrorist activities.

Prosecution sources said that Naradipo was in charge of fiances for the terrorists organization and that he delivered $1,000 from a Chinese businessman in the Cambodian capital to his acccmplices.

Ranarith was accused of supplying grenades and explosives to the other terrorists the sources said.

One of six defense lawyers, Prem Nogin, said the Chinese financier, Yi Bun Hak, had been tortured to death by Cambodian military police during interrogation.

She said the defendants had told judges of the alleged beating during a preliminary hearing, but that the judges had not made a record of the hearing.

Many Sihanouk relatives, including a former wife of the prince, crowded into the courtroom with newsmen and the curious to watch the trial.

Sihanouk himself is in Peking, heading a government in exile. He has been sentenced to death in absentia for high treason.

A Breakthrough In Cancer Work

STANFORD (UPI) —A discovery made by scientists at Stanford University about living cells and how they repair themselves may make X-ray treatment of cancer more effective.

They found the mutant was deficient in a repair mechanism of its DNA molecule —the molecule which gives living cells their hereditary "instructions."

DNA repair systems "seem to be the major factor controlling cell sensitivity to radiation," the scientists said.

The discovery indicates the possibility of combining radiation and drugs "to selectively inhibit the repair of damage" to cancer cells.

Fighting Is Continuing In Jordan

U. P. INTERNATIONAL

Fresh fighting broke out between Arab guerrillas and Jordanian army forces in Jordan today, the third straight day of clashes. A Cairo newspaper said Egypt was ready to intervene politically to prevent a bloodbath. Israeli troops caught up with a six-man Arab guerrilla squad believed responsible for the July 7 rocket attack that killed four persons in a Tel Aviv suburb. The military command said the Israelis "wiped out" the guerrillas.

The command said the Israeli forces caught the guerrillas about midnight Tuesday in the Jordan valley. "In the exchange of fire the six terrorists were killed."

A guerrilla spokesman in Beirut said the Jordanian army "has been waging a concentrated attack against our bases in Jerash and Ajloun areas after an all-night, non-stop shelling." It was the third day of fighting in the area 28 miles north of the Jordanian napital of Amman.

The semiofficial Cairo newspaper Al Ahram said "the situation in Jordan has reached a point which the national and human conscience can no longer bear."

It said Egypt "is ready to intervene morally, politically and financially to prevent the bloodbath to which the Palestinian masses are being subjected."

Israel celebrated its 23rd Air Force Day today, coupling the public demonstrationhof its air strength with an appeal to the United States for additional Phantom jet fighters.

Creation Of Life Beyond The Earth?

WASHINGTON (UPI)—The National Science Foundation has reported for the first time that the elements for creation of life as known on earth may exist in other parts of the universe.

A 34-year-old radioastronomer, Dr. Leonid N. Weliachew, made the discovery of a molecule identified as OH, or hydroxyl, outside the Milky Way galaxy, the foundation announced Wednesday.

Interstellar hydroxyl was first discovered eight years ago in the extremely rarefied dust clouds of the milky way galaxy of 100 billion stars. Since then more than a dozen complex pre-life chemicals have been detected in the milky way, which includes earth and the sun.

Weliachew, a French scientist who is a visiting research fellow at the California Institute of Technology, made the discovery while observing an exploding galaxy and another star family about 60 billion miles from earth.

The OH molecule revealed its presence to Weliachew because of the unique way in which it absorbs radio waves, the foundation said. The molecule discovered by Weliachew outside the Milky Way and other molecules known previously to exist within the milky way are precursors of amino acids, which are the building blocks of living things on earth.

New Twist To Lockheed Issue

WASHINGTON (UPI) —Rep. Wright Patman, D-Tex., chairman of the house banking committee, has evidence that at least one large bank would loan money to ailing Lockheed Aircraft Corp. without a government guaranteed loan.

Patman said the bank, a Lockheed creditor he otherwise would not identify, told him it preferred the guarantee to accompany the loan but could help Lockheed without such backing.

Patman called 24 bank spokesmen to his committee today to discuss the pending Lockheed request for a $250 million loan guarantee which the aerospace giant says it needs to avoid bankruptcy. Those banks already have loaned Lockheed $400 million.

Patman says that he wants Lockheed to exhaust all its efforts to get private financing without government aid before his committee approves a bill.

But at a National Press Club news conference Wednesday night, Patman said it was too late to send Lockheed back to private investors because there is too much sentiment in the House to provide some form of aid to Lockheed. Patman predicted that the House would pass an aid bill to Lockheed before Congress takes a month-long recess in August.

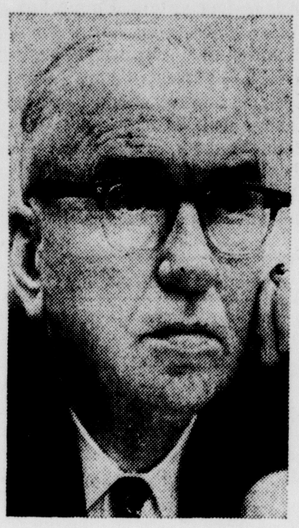
Patman told the Press Club that "Lockheed had no business coming to the Congress before it had exhausted all of its resources and had fully determined whether or not it could obtain credit in the private markets."

The 24 banks will not advance further funds without the government guaranteeing losses in case of default, Lockheed Board Chairman Daniel J. Haughton told Patman Wednesday.



REP. WRIGHT PATMAN
Calls in Lockheed bankers

"Every single welfare recipient in this nation is required to reveal his finances," Patman said, "to use all of his own resources and to make every attempt on his own before the government steps in with assistance."

He said he is "not willing to require more of a poor family on welfare than I am for a giant corporation like Lockheed."

But Patman conceded that many House members feel Lockheed's collapse could cause serious economic problems. Some, Patman said, fear a depression could result from the failure of the company.

Hub Petition Asks Raises For Police

The Irate Taxpayers of Marin submitted a petition with 24 signatures to the City of San Anselmo yesterday urging it grant salary increases to police officers and firemen.

According to Susan Tennler, an officer in the taxpayers' group, more than 400 persons have signed such a petition but their signatures were withheld to save residents from "being harassed by the city council which has happened in the past."

They will be submitted, along with any additional signatures collected, at a city council meeting requested in the petition to reconsider the salary issue.

Mrs. Tennler said that during her morning meeting with City Administrator Alfred C. Kaeppel, however, no assurance was given that the petition would be taken up by the council.

Kaeppel yesterday reiterated the city's position in the salary dispute saying San Anselmo cannot afford pay raises this year.

Any public meeting on the dispute, he said, is up to the councilmen.

WASHINGTON (UPI) — "Fact," a biweekly publication of the Democratic National Committee, said today Vice President Spiro T. Agnew will announce that he does not want to be on the ticket with President Nixon in the next election.

Air Strikes, Battle Flare Up In Vietnam

SAIGON (UPI)—The U.S. Command today reported a renewal of heavy air strikes over South Vietnam's northern quarter and the first sizeable ground fighting involving American troops in a week.

Military spokesmen also said 29 Americans were killed in Vietnam last week, a surprisingly high figure considering the lack of ground fighting the past seven days.

Thirteen of the deaths were men who died of wounds and GIs previously listed as missing.

Field reports said meanwhile that South Vietnamese engineers had finished rebuilding Fire Base Fuller, a mountaintop outpost overrun June 23 by the North Vietnamese. American advisers were sent back to the renovated base along with a South Vietnamese infantry company.

Despite the rebuilding of Fuller, South Vietnamese Gen. Vu Van Giai said he was not sure large installations were a good idea and that he might abandon them once the last Americans leave.

Giai is in command of Operation Lam Son 720 aimed at blocking North Vietnamese infiltration across the DMZ. He said he prefers to keep his men moving to prevent the North Vietnamese from pounding such outposts with artillery and rockets.

On the war fronts, U.S. Air Force and Navy fighterbombers flew 4 missions in South Vietnam's northern quarter Wednesday, more than four times the number Monday and Tuesday when a tropical storm curtailed such missions. B52 bombers flew two raids both in the northwest corner of the country around the abandoned Khe Sanh base.

American GIs returned to ground fighting for the first time in a week in two battles in which they killed a total of 14 North Vietnamese and Viet Cong. One American died.

'Flag Duty' For Jailed Prankster

ALEXANDRIA, La. (UPI)— Dennis G. Hohm, 19, an airman who admitted he stole an American flag from a residence as a prank on July 4th, was sentenced Wednesday to flag duty and jail for 20 days.

Judge Field V. Gremillion first set the sentence at 30 days in jail, but reduced it by 10 days if Hohm agreed to help lower and raise the courthouse flag while he was serving his time. Hohm agreed.

Supreme Court Busier Writing More Opinions

WASHINGTON (UPI) —The justices of the Supreme Court talked a lot more in the term ended June 30 than they did the previous term. They wrote 291 opinions in 126 cases.

Official statistics show 151 cases were argued from October to June. Twenty-two were decided by brief, unsigned opinions. Three will be reargued next term. In the 1969-70 term the court heard 144 cases and handled them in only 227 opinions.

Justice William O. Douglas, always a prolific opinion writer, wrote 52 in the term just ended. The fact that 28 were dissents— up from 23 last term—indicated the new conservative trend of the court.

Douglas wrote 14 opinions for the court, 8 concurring opinions and two "separate" opinions, which merely gave his views with no official label.

Chief Justice Warren E. Burger, who has heavy administrative duties both inside and outside the court, wrote the fewest—20.

Marinwood CSD Budget Is Adopted

The Marinwood Community Services District Board has adopted a $241,761 budget for the current fiscal year, up $39,296 from last year's budget of $202,465.

A 5 per cent increase in salaries and the addition of one fireman, are mainly responsible for the increase, according to Secretary Genevieve T. Bolding. Salaries increased from $119,827 last year to $145,245, she said.

The tax rate was decreased from $1.23 last year to $1.20 per $100 assessed valuation this year, she said. However, the smaller tax rate will bring in more money because of the increase in assessed valuation, she said.

Department budgets for fiscal 1971-72 with 1970-71 figures in parentheses are: fire department, $100,253 ($85,330); parks and recreation department, $127,883 ($105,205), and street lighting and auditing of elections, $13,625 ($11,930).

Other items included in the budget are $5,500 for remodeling the community service building and $4,500 for a new tennis court, according to Mrs. Bolding.

Hope Fades For Pact In Mill Valley Strike

Mill Valley's city employee strike turned two weeks old today with the hope of a settlement fading after yesterday's negotiating session was cancelled abruptly.

A spokesman for the 38 striking employees said city negotiator Earl Leslie called off the meeting, explaining that he had to stay all day in the San Francisco office of his employer, Industrial Employers and Distributors Association. The spokesman added, however, that repeated telephone calls to that office went unanswered.

Neither Leslie nor City Mgr. William H. Cunningham could be reached today for an explanation as to why the meeting was cancelled.

City workers have been on strike since July 1 over what they say is a failure by the city to negotiate in good faith for wage and fringe benefit requests. Police and firemen are not involved.

The employees, members of the Mill Valley Employees Association, American Federation of State, County and Municipal Employees, said they do not know when another negotiating session will be held.

Employees had said they expected progress at yesterday's canceled meeting and rumors had circulated that a settlement in Marin's first municipal employees strike might be in the offing.

Meanwhile, a spokesman for Mill Valley police said his department has been promised by the city a wage increase equal to or greater than any finally negotiated with striking employees.

The spokesman, Sgt. Robert J. Dyche, said police representatives have met twice with the city negotiator but further meetings have been postponed until the strike is settled.

Dyche said the raises granted striking employees will serve as a base for contract discussions between police and the city, with the possibility of an even greater salary boost.

Police and firemen elected to conduct their own negotiations this year although striking employees say members of those two departments are sympathetic to the union.

COSTS

measure survived the tough test it faces in the Senate.

Bagley was not expected to face any difficulty in getting Assembly approval for his bill.

Getting it out of the committee yesterday, however, took a strong plea by the assemblyman. Complete silence met the first few calls by committee chairman Willie L. Brown, D-San Francisco, for a motion to approve it. Bagley, a member of the committee, finally had to make the motion himself.

Both the departments of finance and corrections opposed the bill, citing the liability to the state. The department of Finance estimated the cost to the state at between $800,000 and $1 million, while the legislative analyst's office set the cost at between $350,000 and $800,000.

Meanwhile, Miss Davis met today in the Marin County Jail with the Soledad Brothers who were brought over from San Quentin along with Magee.

She had met earlier with one of them, George Jackson, but this was the first conference with the other two, Fleeta Drumgo and John Cluchette.

Miss Davis is accused of conspiring to kidnap the judge and others in order to gain freedom for the three men, who are charged with killing a guard at Soledad Prison.

Her attorneys had declared that it was necessary for her defense that such meetings be held.

In San Francisco yesterday, Miss Davis contended in a writ to the State District Court of Appeals that her confinement is unlawful and unconstitutional.

She asked the appellate court to hold a hearing and then order Judge Richard E. Arnason to set bail. Arnason, a Contra Costa County jurist, is currently presiding over pretrial proceedings in Marin Superior Court.

He ruled last month that the former instructor is ineligible for bail and also said there is enough evidence to hold her for trial. The later ruling has also been appealed.

Proceedings in the oft-delayed case are set to resume Monday.

Vote On Pay Is Not Unanimous

The Independent-Journal erred yesterday in reporting that a three year contract giving 7.5 per cent, 5 per cent and 5 per cent pay raises for Marin County employees for the next three years was unanimously approved by the Marin County Board of Supervisors Tuesday.

Chairman Louis H. Baar cast the lone dissenting vote, explaining he thinks 7.5 per cent raise for this year is too much because the cost-of-living rise was about 4 per cent at most.

All bargaining units came to terms with the county with three year contracts similar to the one approved by the Marin County employees association. The only exception was the Deputy Sheriff's Association, which settled for a 6.25 per cent raise for this year only, with further negotiations for next year.

ELLSBERG

should not be removed to California because it would work an undue hardship upon him. However, Boudin dropped the argument in the court appearance and relied solely upon the eavesdropping motion to combat extradition.

The motion asked that the government be required to disclose to defense counsel whether any oral or written communications between Ellsberg and his attorneys or any other person have been "seized, recorded, transcribed, intercepted, photographed or overheard by means of personal eavesdropping, telephonic wiretapping, electronic or mechanical device of any kind."

Defense counsel asked the magistrate to hold a hearing to determine whether any such communications were seized "in violation of the defendant's rights to privacy," and whether the arrest warrant and indictment against Ellsberg are "in any way the fruits or products of such unlawful conduct by the government."

lence and vandalism occurred.

Fire late Wednesday destroyed an Illinois Bell Telphone Co. garage at Elgin, Ill., but fire officials would not speculate on the cause of the blaze.

Service was hampered Wednesday when supervisory personnel reported they were unable to get through picket lines at Bradford and Charleroi, Pa. Service to 230 customers in West Miami, Fla., was knocked out when someone stuffed a junction box with rags and set them on fire. At Broward County, Fla., 20 persons were arrested on charges of blocking access to a telephone building.

AT&T officials said they believed they had been very close to reaching an agreement before the strike began, but union president Joseph A. Beirne said any settlement now would take at least two weeks to be approved by the union.

The third week of a nationwide copper strike began today with federally-sponsored negotiations underway between unions and three major firms and stalled with a fourth.

Talks continued between the United Steel Workers, representing 25 other unions, and Anaconda Copper at Helena, Mont., and American Smelting and Refining at San Francisco. Kennecott Copper at Salt Lake City continued negotiations on local issues. In Washington, talks with Phelps-Dodge were recessed until the near future.

The copper strike has idled 39,000 workers.

A strike by the International Longshoremen's and Warehousemen's Union at 25 West Coast ports entered its 15th day with hundreds of ships idle and no negotiations in sight.

Federal mediators were cotinuing to stand by as bargainers for Western Union and the 17,000-member United Telegraph Workers sought to reach an agreement in Washington.

Concern Over Corn Blight In 29 States

WASHINGTON (UPI) —The corn blight, now reported in parts of 29 states, continues to be classified as only a light infestation, according to the latest government reports.

But the Agriculture Department's weekly bulletin on the situation said there are increasing reports of pockets of moderate to severe infection and further evidence that the potentially destructive disease has started to spread from field to field.

TALKS

port of South Vietnamese President Nguyen Van Thieu.

The chief North Vietnamese negotiator, Xuan Thuy, today called the Thieu administration "the greatest obstacle to the progress of the Paris conference."

Bruce said today the United States is willing to study the communists' seven-point plan. But he suggested the Communists give similar attention to standing allied peace offers.

"There is no more pressing military question than the need to stop the killing throughout Indochina," Bruce said.

Bruce, 73, came out of retirement to head the Paris talks. According to Washington reports, he will retire again shortly and be replaced by William J. Porter, the American ambassador to South Korea.

Bruce asked the Communists, "Are you willing to consider a cease-fire separately and join us in a real effort to end the fighting first?"

Bruce urged a real dialogue at the conference to discuss the peace proposals of both sides, rather than the current exchange of formal statements.

The Communists also have asked for informal give-and-take discussions. But so far neither side has agreed on how to start them.

Bruce reiterated the American request for "much more explanation from you as to what your various points actually mean."

He said, "The fixing of a withdrawal date must be the result of a genuine negotiating process, not a price we must first pay just for negotiations to begin, or a unilateral action we must take because you so dictate."

He also asked, "How many prisoners from our side do you plan to release and who are they? Do you also intend to provide whatever information you have on our men missing in action in Southeast Asia?"

Madame Nguyen Thi Binh, chief delegate of the Viet Cong, presented the Communist plan at the session two weeks ago.

Today, South Vietnamese delegate Pham Dang Lam said the Communists insisted on using the conference as a "propaganda forum."

At today's meeting, Thuy asked, "How can one seriously negotiate while pursuing the Vietnamization of the war?" Vietnamization means replacing U.S. troops with Vietnamese.

Thuy said that "since early July the United States has continuously launched barbarous B52 bombing raids in South Vietnam and supported Saigon troops in many sweep operations.

"At the same time it (the United States) pursued air attacks against many populous regions of North Vietnam, particularly those near the 7th parallel, thus violating its engagement to cease all encroachments" on North Vietnamese sovereignty.

Thuy said Washington wanted to "minimize the important significance of the seven-point peace plan, which is very correct, logical and reasonable.

"It is now up to the Nixon Administration to choose the path of peace or to continue the war, to let American servicemen promptly and safely return home or to prolong the list of American casualties and prisoners."

South Vietnam's Pham Dang Lam said, "Since the present conflict is an aggression by North Vietnam against South Vietnam, the war will not be ended by the simple withdrawal of the allied forces but it will be ended only when this aggression ceases."

Madam Binh, foreign minister of the South Vietnamese National Liberation Front's "Provisional Revolutionary Government," said her seven-point plan was "flexible."

She told today's session of the conference, the 121st in 2 1-2 years, that Washington should make a prompt reply.

Madame Binh also accused President Nixon of continuing to support President Nguyen Van Thieu in Saigon, the man whom the Communists want eliminated from power.

Optical Company Adds To Chain

By ROGER E. SPEAR

Q. Over two years ago we bought 100 shares of Terminal-Hudson Electronics. It has been going up recently and we wonder if we should sell. We bought for the long term as we retire in eight years. — A.M.

A. In March of 1970, an optical company, wholly-owned by T.B. Schanbaum, gained control of Terminal-Hudson through acquisition of 26.1 per cent of its outstanding common stock. Thereupon this electronic parts wholesale distributor embarked on a diversification program, acquiring several retail optical stores. In order to reflect this new image, shareholders voted in April, 1971 to drop Electronics from the corporate title. In May, a $3 million cash purchase was completed adding 50 new optical offices to those already owned.

A more recent and somewhat complex proposal, if completed, would add 208 more outlets to the growing chain. As proposed Terminal would acquire from its chairman, T.B. Schanbaum, all stock outstanding in the 13 concerns that operate these 208 outlets. In return he would receive 1,589,960 Terminal-Hudson shares, boosting his direct and indirect ownership from 26.1 percent to 67 percent. In 1970, the companies to be acquired had unaudited sales of $15.9 million. At recent quotes these shares have a market value of about $26 millionm After a five-month, 20-point run-up, shares have consolidated eight points below the high. I would suggest you take the profit now available to you.

Q. I purchased National Fuel Gas 8 5/8 Debentures due 1975 assuming these were bonds, not promissory notes. I cannot afford a loss. Are these high risk? — W.K.

A. These A-rated debentures have not traded below par since initial offering in 1970, a good indication of investor confidence. Earlier this year the issue moved to 109, a good indication of investor confidence. Earlier this year the issue moved to 109, but is currently quoted at 103½. In 1970, interest charges were earned 2.09 times, a sufficient margin of safety. National Fuel Gas is conservatively capitalized with long term debt/equity ratio 51/49.

New York (UPI)—The country's first schedule airline service with McDonnell Douglas's new jumbo DC-10 airliner will be inaugurated Aug. 17 by American Airlines between Chicago and Los Angeles.

YOU GET WHAT YOU PAY FOR

Mercedes-Benz unveiled its latest model, the $13,500 350SL, last week and said it was equipped with the world's "most advanced braking system." The car is shown during braking from a 125 mile per hour run on a wet track at the Indianapolis Speedway. A tiny computer is in the heart of an electronic braking system which prevents any of the wheels from locking up under severe braking. Thus the driver can retain control and brake hard, even on turns.

Ecologist, Oil Man Argue Over Firm's Planned Communities

STANFORD (BW) — Successful attempts by Standard Oil of California to convert oil fields, refineries and tank farms into profitable planned communities was derided and defended by opposing speakers Tuesday at Stanford's School Planning Conference.

"This is typical of California," Claire Dedrick of the Sierra Club Board of Directors commented. "Developers destroy the land and then build on it. They scrape off mountain tops and fill in the marshes."

Edward A. Hartsook, vice president and general manager of the Standard Oil subsidiary, Chevron Land & Development Co., and Mrs. Dedrick were featured speakers at the second day of the conference.

Hartsook, explained how his organization has made the small Southern California oil town of Huntginton Beach into a handsome, well-financed planned community with a lucrative shopping center.

Chevron Land & Development has similar projects either planned or built at seven other sites in California and one near the Boeing plant in Seattle, Hartsook said.

Hartsook pointed out that each development stresses green-belting, proper drainage and sewage, features "closed system" prevention of fume leakage and air pollution, provides local jobs for its residents, keeps a percentage of commuters off the freeways and makes a major contribution to the tax base of the community.

The tax base was the take-off point for Mrs. Dedrick's talk.

Local control of land development, she said, plus the community's power to tax results in a conflict of interest.

In a vicious circle, cities have to tax to stay alive, therefore land must be developed into taxpaying property which in turn means overdevelopment and exploitation, the noted local conservationist said.

The Sierra Club is not against proper development, she stressed, "because we have to have jobs and an economic base." All the club wants to do is get existing conservation laws enforced to prevent ruthless timber cutting, filling of the tidelands and conversions of farm areas into suburban sprawl.

"There is a lag between what the people want and the legislature's actions," she told the gathering. "We must change the cultural attitude of the U.S. Many other countries of the industrialized West have already seen the need for controlled growth and are pushing ahead."

Diaper Plant

Neenah, Wis. (UPI)—Kimberly Clark Corp. announced it will build a disposable diaper converting plant here to be in operation early next year. The company presently makes disposable diapers at its Memphis plant.

Stocks Firm As Improved Tone Noted

Economic news was mixed and analysts generally regarded the market's improved tone as a technical rally coming on the heels of a sharp price decline early in the week.

Treasury Secretary John B. Connally said the economy is on its way back to health. He said the administration had not changed its prediction that the jobless rate could be cut from almost 6 per cent of the labor force to 4.5 per cent by the middle of next year, but he added, "I'm not prepared to say that we are going to meet the goal."

Connally also said the rate of price increases "should stabilize" this year.

Other economic news was less constructive. Early-July car sales dropped sharply from the year ago period; industrial output increased economic recovery was still gradual; and in Paris the organization for economic cooperation and development forecast continued sluggishness for the U.S. economy over the next year.

Prices climbed in moderate turnover on the American Stock Exchange. Gainers topped losers, 472 to 191.

On the Big Board, stocks on the most active list included Texaco up 1-4, Gillette 2 1-2 lower, Ling-Temco up 1-8, and Burroughs 5-8 higher.

Private Ships Lead Artic Transport

QUEBEC CITY (UPI)—The Canadian Transport Department says 1970 was the first year that private shipping firms sent more supply ships to the Canadian Arctic than the Canadian Coast Guard.

There were 23 such ships delivering cargo to Arctic ports, compared with 11 Coast Guard boats and eight cargo ships chartered by the government to deliver 85,000 tons of supplies.

United Magnavox Outlet Will Hold Grand Opening Saturday

Murray

Nelson

Newly opened at Second Street and Lincoln Avenue, San Rafael is United Magnavox taking over the store formerly occupied by Butler's TV and Appliance.

United Magnavox, owned by Al Braunberger, is headquartered in San Francisco and now has five outlets from Daly City to Marin County. The San Rafael store will carry the complete Magnavox home entertainment line and also the Kelvinator white goods line. There will be a service department with carry-in or in-home service.

Store manager in San Rafael is Gale Lakers, who was formerly service manager of all United Magnavox branches.

Grand opening celebration will be held Saturday.

AFTER 20 YEARS operating the Tamalpais Market at Second and D Streets, San Rafael, Lester and Lloyd Mason will close — probably by the end of next month, although their lease does not expire until Sept. 10.

They will be taking a vacation — but no further plans have yet been announced. And at this point I understand no new tenant has been lined up to replace them in the building. Rufer Realty in San Rafael is agent for the property.

This is a ceramics school with classes Mondays, Wednesdays and Fridays from 9 a.m. to 5:30 p.m. for both children and adults. Night courses are also held from 6 p.m. to 9 p.m. on the same days.

Laufenberg was previously with Burt Manufacturing Co., manufacturer of kilns. Instructor at the school is Daniel Fuller of Woodacre, who is also an instructor at College of Marin.

Lease was negotiated through William W. Hoey and Co.

BRUCE A. GIEDT of San Rafael has been appointed resident manager for the Crown Zellerbach paper mill in Carthage, N.Y. Recently serving as marketing manager for the distributor sales division in San Francisco, he joined the company in 1965 as administrative assistant to the vice president for marketing and has subsequently held a number of sales and marketing positons.

RUSSELL B. MURRAY of Greenbrae has been named area officer in Wells Fargo Bank's international division. Formerly credit officer in the San Rafael office, he has been with the bank since 1968.

ROBERT NELSON of San Rafael, manager of the San Rafael Chamber of Commerce, will attend the 1971 Institute for Organization Management of the Chamber of Commerce of the United States at the University of Santa Clara next week

REAL ESTATE: Robert J. Petersen, manager of Kay Noah, Realtor, has received his broker's license and has also completed a real estate management course of the National Institute of Real Estate Brokers held recently in Nevada. With a showing of 75 per cent, Marin County multiple listing cooperative sales for May were the highest of any district in the state.

REDWOOD BANK in San Rafael is now exhibiting the art of Flo Spanier of San Anselmo during the month of July. She is a member of the Marin Society of Artists and the Terra Linda Art Society.

MARINITES LIKE HAWAII: During 1970, 7,790 of them visited the islands — 11.5 per cent of all Marin households. An average of over two persons per household went somewhere by air last year through the San Francisco Airport — a total of 138,658 persons.

Nickel Delay

New York (UPI)—A spokesman for International Nickel Co. denied Wednesday that Inco is delaying a $480 million nickel mining project on the French island of New Caledonia in the Pacific, in which INCOhas a 40 per cent stake. The spokesman said the cause of the delay is the difficulty the French holding firm, Samipac, is having in lining up additional French partners in the venture.

help with the dishes and then go to her room to study.

"She would read until she fell asleep with the book in her lap," Shaprio said. "I was studying hard, too, but I would finally give up and go to bed. But many mornings I came downstairs to find the lights still on and her asleep in the chair. She seemed to feel that she just didn't have time for things like sleep.

"She rarely watched television. I am a kind of nut about the boob tube, particularly the evening news. I want to know everything that is going on in the world. Sometimes she would sit down and watch for a few minutes. And sometimes I would have on some old movie and I would call her and say, 'you ought to see this, it's really far out.' She would come and look for a little while and then go back to her books.

"She drank tea all the time. She had a little hot plate and she would keep it going. She would sweeten the tea with honey. She never drank liquor as far as I know. Sometimes we had wine with our meals."

One of Angela's students later at UCLA said she had a revulsion for marijuana and drugs.

"One day she talked to us about the Manson Family and their life style," the student, Jim Jordan, recalls. "She said their protest against society had taken a completely worthless turn—dropping out, numbing themselves with drugs, sex, complete withdrawal."

Shapiro says his wife is a great proponent of Women's Lib and that Angela not only was, too, but was a prime example of putting it in practice.

"Evelyn looked on her as a truly liberated woman," he says.

The two young women spent many hours talking together and going shopping.

"Angela was a chain smoker and she was trying every way to cut down," Shapiro recalls. She bought one of these little machines to roll your own cigarettes and she became very adept at taking the paper, shaking tobacco from a pouch and rolling this machine with one hand, getting a scraggly looking little cigarette.

"One day she and Evelyn were in one of those posh department stores in La Jolla and Angela was rolling these cigarettes. Here they were, a white girl and a black girl, making what I guess maybe the matrons thought were marijuana joints and the women just gasped."

Shapiro says he never heard Angela talk about getting married. Except for a brief infatuation with a white west German student, men as such did not seem very important to her at this stage.

Shapiro said she had three boyfriends, all black, while she was living with his family and that she had a number of dates.

"Oh, they went to the movies, walked on the beach, I don't know," he says. "But all of them were involved like her with black student affairs on the campus and they spent most of the time talking about that."

One of the reasons Angela had come to Southern California was to study again under Marcuse but another was to be near the big Negro population center of Los Angeles where she could put her political and social theories into practice among her race.

During the last months she was living with the Shapiros, she rented a small one-story wooden apartment in back of a house in south central Los Angeles, not far from Watts, scene of the first big city black riot in 1965.

She commuted regularly the 120 miles between La Jolla and Los Angeles, driving a 1959 station wagon Rambler. Shapiro said one of the things he envied most was her "mobility," her independence that permitted her to be away for days.

She began to become involved with black militant groups in Los Angeles. One was an organization known as US, a black nationalist extreme cult headed by Ron Karenga which, along with the Black Panthers, had emerged as the two best known militant factions among young blacks.

Miss Davis was attracted by US but felt it had two weaknesses. First, it rejected association with the white community in bringing about social upheaval and she felt that was unrealistic. Second, it treated women as "servants" to the men and that Angela Davis would not tolerate.

She became closer to the Black Panthers. There is no evidence that she ever joined the Panther party but she did become involved in their activities and was in later speeches to hail Bobby Seale, Huey Newton and other Panther leaders in jail as martyrs to the black struggle.

Instead, she turned to the U.S. Communist Party and became a member sometime in 1968.

The American Communist Party might have seemed pretty dull and old hat for such an impatient budding revolutionary but Angela Davis had her own ideas about that. She became close to Dorothy Healey, then Southern California district chairman of the U.S. Communist Party.

The young woman and Mrs. Healey, a warm and gracious woman around 60 who later was to be demoted for her opposition to Soviet intervention in Czechoslovakia, talked for many hours, sometimes at Angela's apartment and sometimes at Mrs. Healey's place a few blocks away.

"She was rather shy but extremely warm," says Mrs. Healey. "She was very methodical, not impulsive. She gave a great deal of thought to whether she wanted to join the party.

"I was struck by her intellectualism, her analytical mind. But at the same time she had a tremendous desire not to be isolated from the poor and the street cats. She didn't want to rise above her people. She wanted to rise with them. That's how she got so involved with the Soledad brothers."

Miss Davis joined the Che Lumumba Club, a black adjunct of the party whose role was to work closely with young Negroes in the area and recruit them for the party.

The Communist Party in the United States has been in sad shape for decades, slumping in membership and seldom catching a headline since the days of Alger Hiss and Sen. Joseph McCarthy.

Angela Davis was a godsend and national general secretary Gus Hall made that plain in his report to the party's national committee on Nov. 21, 1970.

While Miss Davis was active in Los Angeles, she was also to become an outstanding figure at the University of California in San Diego (UCSD), one of the newest and most beautiful of the nine universities in the system.

UCSD had been planned for tremendous expansion beyond its 7,000 member student body, a program apparently destined for severe curtailment under the crisis in education funds. It had two colleges, Revelle and Muir, and at the time Miss Davis came in 1967 the university was proceeding toward a third college along much the same lines under the aegis of Chancellor William McGill.

She and other black-Chicano militants demanded that the administration change the entire format so that it be devoted almost entirely to Negro and Mexican-American students with minority instructors and a curriculum to be chosen largely by the students.

It became a flaming issue on campus and McGill offered a compromise under which it would be a two year experimental college pending determination whether academic standards would be lowered otherwise.

"I remember there was a meeting of the Academic Senate (faculty) and the militants presented a list of non-negotiable demands," recalls Dr. Avrum Stroll, now head of the philosophy department at Revelle College.

"A number of blacks moved into the hall and took over the platform and warned that we were in trouble if we didn't approve the demands."

In short, Angela Davis and the militants won. There is now a "Third College" at USCS. It has 167 students, almost all black or Chicano, with 12 to 14 faculty members. The classes are conducted in old marine huts. The curriculum is weighted heavily toward minority studies, sociology, political theory, anthropology. Its future is uncertain but it bears the stamp of Angela Davis.

The young woman, still reading and studying assiduously, was by then well into her treatise for a doctorate in philosophy, the theme—suggested by Marcuse—Kant's analysis of the role of violence in German idealism.

Marcuse says he had urged the girl, like all his students, to put her philosophical theories to the test of practical problems. But he rejects any idea he prodded her into campus activism.

"I have occupied myself very little with black politics," Marcuse says. "I would hope not to assume such a patronizing position. The blacks have reached the point where they can do their own thing."

Shapiro, the graduate student classmate, recalls that about that time Angela came home from Los Angeles one night after a shooting in the cafeteria at UCLA between US and Panther factions in which two persons were killed. She had an M1 rifle with her for protection, he says.

"Seeing that gun frightened the hell out of us," he says. "Two people she knew had just been killed and we asked her why she didn't just split, that nothing was worth her life.

"But she said that if they thought they (Shapiro didn't specify who) thought they were going to shut her up they were wrong. She said she felt she might be shot to death but it wasn't going to stop her. She wasn't like us. She had no problem in understanding the role of violence in a revolutionary situation."

Miss Davis was still living with the Shapiros when she was approached by Dr. Donald Kalish, head of the philosophy department at UCLA, about coming there as an assistant professor. She was more intent on getting her PhD but Kalish assured her she would have sufficient spare time to complete her thesis.

Fire Chief To Ask For Abatements

Marin County Fire Chief Richard D. Pedroli announced yesterday he will ask for abatement action against five parcels of weed-covered property because the dry weeds are a fire hazard and a public nuisance.

Three of the properties are in the Los Ranchitos Area of San Rafael. One is at the corner of Las Gallinas Avenue and Merrydale Road, owned by William A. Timmer; the second is at Tamalpais and Willow Avenues, owned by Sol A. Abrams of Ross; and the third is on Ranchitos Road, owned by Laurent R. Broussal of San Francisco.

The other two parcels are at 311 San Francisco Boulevard, San Anselmo, owned by Vincent O'Kelly of Corte Madera; and on Arroyo Road in Lagunitas, owned by Catherine Dowdall of Sausalito.

The request for abatement action will go to the Marin County Board of Supervisors next Tuesday.

Plan For Seashore Reported Compatible With Marin Vision

Preliminary plans for the future of Point Reyes National Seashore are in keeping with Marin's desire to keep the area as natural as possible, members of the Marin County Parks and Recreation Commission declared yesterday.

Copies of the preliminary plan drafted by the National Park Service have been circulating among county officials, and a public hearing is set for sometime in December.

Parks and Recreation commissioners said they are "impressed" with the emphasis on preserving the natural environment, the trend away from cars and toward hiking and camping, and the setting aside of natural preserves and a wilderness area.

On a suggestion by Polly Smith, the commissioners asked Parks and Recreation Director Pierre W. Joske to arrange for a field tour of the Point Reyes Seashore on July 21 or 26.

The Marin County Parks and Recreation Commission also:

APPOINTMENT — Asked the Marin County Board of Supervisors to appoint a youth to succeed Commissioner Raymond Bresnan, Novato teen-ager, who resigned after three years on the commission. Young Bresnan is leaving for an extended trip abroad.

NEIGHBORHOOD PARKS — Recommended that the county planning commission and staff investigate more effective ways of getting subdivision developers to dedicate space (or in-lieu fee) for neighborhood parks. Commissioner Merritt A. Robinson complained that under present ordinances, subdividers can pay fees that are far too low for acquisition of subdivided land.

YOUTH COMMISSION — Named Robinson as a delegate to the Marin County Youth Commission. Robinson succeeds Albert J. Boro, who quit the youth commission because he has too many other activities.

Marin City Mothers To Realize Dominican Goals

Two College of Marin students — who three months ago wondered how they were going to raise $1,000 each to continue their educations — are almost to their goals.

Thanks to a $500 contribution, one of the students, Georgia M. Payton, 32, has the $1,500 needed for tuition at Dominican College in San Rafael and will enter the school in the fall, although she still lacks about $100 for books.

The other student, 24-year-old Ruby A. Myles, is $200 short, half of that for tuition and half for books, but said she intends to enroll at Dominican anyway.

The women — each married and the mother of five children — learned in March they were to receive $600 each from the Ford Foundation to enable them to transfer from College of Marin to a four-year institution of their choice.

The grants were useless, however, without $1,000 more to meet Dominican's $1,500 tuition and pay for books, so the two set out to make up the difference.

Interviews with the financial aid office at Dominican led to $400 honor grants for each, and then Mrs. Payton was told the Sausalito Artists and Merchants and the Sausalito Policemen's associations wished to contribute $500.

Mrs. Myles, meanwhile, received a $400 gift from a private donor, leaving her only $200 short of her goal.

The women, both of whom live in Marin City and worked until June as educational aides in the Sausalito School District, received the Ford grants under a $2.1 million program designed to aid members of minority groups to transfer from two to four-year colleges.

It was a French chemist, Mege-Mouries, who patented the process of making oleomargarine because France needed a butter substitute just prior to the Franco-Prussian war.

Bolinas Lagoon Boating Outlined

Small motorboats would be allowed inside Bolinas Lagoon under preliminary plans drawn up by the Marin County Parks and Recreation staff.

Park Planner Donald Rolph gave a general outline of the preliminary plan yesterday to the Marin County Parks and Recreation Commissioners.

Commissioner Polly Smith and Frances Stewart, chairman of the Bolinas-Stinson Beach unit of Marin Conservation League, wanted all motorboats banned from the lagoon.

Rolph, however, argued that Edward C. Letter retains a small boat repair shop on the northwest shore of the lagoon, and motorboats have been historically a part of the lagoon. He assured commissioners that since only hand-launching of boats would be allowed, very few power boats will use the lagoon, and the motors would be too small to disturb the ecology.

Rolph and Pierre W. Joske, director of parks and recreation, said they hope to have final plans approved by the end of this year.

Rolph gave this picture of what is in store for Bolinas Lagoon:

The entire lagoon inside the mean higher high water mark would be designated an ecological preserve, with strict limitations on any development.

Public use of the lagoon would be largely limited to observation, research, and educational use. The Bolinas Marine Station, Point Reyes Bird Observatory and Audubon Canyon Ranch are already in those categories.

Three or four observation points, with small parking areas and a few picnic tables will be dispersed around the lagoon. About three boat launching ramps (for hand launching only) are planned. One will be at the existing Letter boat repair, another at the old town of Bolinas where boats are tied up, and a third at Seadrift.

Among picnic areas planned for future acquisition is a grove of alder trees owned by George P. Leonard on the east side of Bolinas Lagoon near Stinson Beach.

Dr. Malcolm Finley, who owns property on the east side of the lagoon, between the Leonard property and the Audubon Canyon Ranch, asked for some dredging inside the lagoon to provide flushing action. He warned that in a few years, the lagoon will become a meadow because of siltation.

Joske said further research, including monitoring of siltation, will be needed before any major dredging can be hazarded.

South Vietnam Joins Islands Ownership Feud

SAIGON (UPI)—South Vietnam has jumped into the dispute over possession of the Spratly and Paracel islands, where geologists believe there may be offshore oil deposits.

The islands are a cluster of more than 50 coral reefs, cays and shoals in the South China Sea between the Chinese mainland and Indochinese peninsula and the Philippine Islands.

Until Nationalist China and the Philippines recently laid claim to them because of the potential oil wealth they had been of little interest to anyone, other than the birds and turtles that lay their eggs on the islands' beaches.

The foreign ministry in Saigon today issued a statement claiming ownership and traced the islands' history back to 1802.

VIET CAMPAIGN

Drug Detection Results Unclear

By KENNETH BRADDICK

LONG BINH, Vietnam (UPI) —Some GIs hand in a bottle of apple juice when it comes time for a urinalysis and others pay $100 to a buddy to take their place in line. It is all part of a sort of desperate game between the U.S. military and soldiers undergoing tests for drug addiction before leaving Vietnam.

Doctors say they are not at all sure who is winning.

Capt. John A. Soyak, 30, of Detroit runs the first stop for GIs being processed to leave Vietnam. His command post is a small wooden shack with a newly painted sign, "Peehouse of the August Moon."

Every soldier from a four star general on down has to provide a urine sample which is tested for heroin, morphine or opium.

The dragnet already has turned up two offices — a major and a captain — as suspected heroin users, a military spokesman said today.

"Let's face it," Soyak said. "Some of these men are desperate and use desperate methods." The room Soyak operates is equipped with big mirrors to alert medics watching for any sleight-of-hand the GIs might try.

Identify checks are tightened when GIs who were not addicts were found collecting up to $100 to substitute for addict soldiers.

Soldiers also sometimes send the electronic testing machine haywire by handing in bottles of apple juice instead of urine. Others have fooled the test by delaying withdrawal symptoms with barbiturates or the synthetic heroin substitute called methadone long enough to clear opiates from their bodies.

"I haven't seen any guys coming through the line going through withdrawal symptoms," said Spec. 4 Robert Burne, 21, a medic from Marion, Ind. He has been assigned to the addiction spotting center since it opened June 18.

"After a while, though, you can kind of tell those who might be on smack (heroin). They're uptight. They want to talk a lot and ask a lot of questions about the way the machine works."

The machine is called "FRAT," an acronym for Free Radical Analysis Technique, which electronically determines whether a person is on heroin.

The U.S. command declines to give any indication of how many soldiers have been found to have taken heroin in the 24 to 48 hours before the urinalysis, the period in which it can be detected.

But officers involved with the program say between 2 and 5 per cent of the estimated 1,000 GIs a day leaving Vietnam show as "positives," meaning they have taken such drugs.

That would be below Congressional estimates ofmore than 10 per cent of GIs in Vietnam as users of heroin.

At first there were numerous myths on how to beat the drug detector.

After the testing began, post exchanges had a run on orange and grapefruit juice and many GIs quit taking their anti-malaria pills.

Word spread that orange and grapefruit juices would guarantee a negative reading on the machine and malaria tablets supposedly showed "positive."

In fact, neither had any effect on the tests.

As soon as the army saw what was happening it began using, in addition to FRAT a technique known as gas liquid cromotography, a method of detecting chemicals in urine by color.

The FRAT machine costs $26,000 and each test costs the government about $1. Such machines will more than likely be used not only for those leaving Vietnam but for GIs going on Rest and Recuperation (R & R) leave, temporary duty and for new arrivals.

Some new arrivals were tested recently as part of a program to give the military a comparison of how many GIs are already drug users when they arrive in Vietnam. The figures never have been released.

The drug program specifies that a drug user go to a detoxification center until his system is free of heroin then he is sent home in a medical plane for a rehabilitation program if necessary. No punishment is involved and the soldier found "positive" goes to the detoxification center on his own.

Dr. Jerome H. Jaffe, President Nixon's special adviser on drug abuse, said the detection and treatment program looks impressive and he would recommend it be expanded.

"Not all the problems have been solved," Jaffe said at the end of a three-day trip to Vietnam, "But I didn't expect them to be within three weeks."

DRUG SMOKING — UPI Photographer Jeff Taylor, working on a series about GI drug abuse in Vietnam, was allowed to photograph a soldier smoking drugs in exchange for a promise of anonymity, hence the blackout of the soldier's eyes. The GI was using a homemake 'hookah' waterpipe made from a wine bottle and a .45-caliber shell in his living quarters somewhere in Vietnam. A campaign currently is underway to detect heroin users among GIs in Vietnam so they can be "detoxified" before returning home. (UPI Telephoto)

Art, Hobby Show Slated To Begin At PG&E Site

The seventh annual art and hobby show by employees of Pacific Gas and Electric Co. will open at 1 p.m. Sunday in the company's demonstration room at Third and Brooks Streets, San Rafael.

Included in the exhibit will be paintings in all media, photography, creative arts, crewel work and rugs. It will feature a rock collection by Joseph Meagor, former College of Marin lapidary instructor.

The show, which is open to the public without charge, will be open from 1 to 5 p.m. every day and also 7 to 10 p.m. on Monday through Friday. It will close on July 25.

Judges for the show will be Bernice Brown of the Art Center, San Rafael; William Torrance of the Torrance Gallery in San Anselmo and Robert Guertz, art instructor for Kentfield School District.

Festival Mounts Solicitations For Season Members

The Marin Shakespeare Festival board has started a phone campaign to solicit season members for the festival's six plays.

Gordon Parr, board president, explained the festival needs season members, who purchase six tickets at a discount, to have capital for the first performances.

The festival will have a preview performance tomorrow at 8 p.m. of "Once Upon a Mattress," directed by Daniel Caldwell, at the Forest Meadows Theatre at Dominican College.

The drama will be repeated Saturday at 8 p.m. following a Feast to Goodwill beginning at 5 p.m. also at Forest Meadows.

The board adjourned to Aug. 2.

Group Circulates Petition For Prison Reform

The San Rafael-based Committee for Prisoner Humanity and Justice has launched a drive to collect petition signatures in support of state legislation to improve the lot of inmates in state correctional institutions.

The committee is backing AB 1181 by Assemblyman Frank Murphy Jr., R-Santa Cruz. His bill would create a joint legislative committee on corrections administration and an Office of Ombudsman for Corrections. The ombudsman would be empowered to seek court action upon complaints by prisoners.

The committee's office is in Room 37, 1029 Fourth Street.

AN EXHIBITION FOR JOE

Red Sox Apologies End Feud

BOSTON (UPI)—The running verbal dispute among the three regular outfielders for the Boston Red Sox appeared to end in a series of statements, apologies and handshakes Wednesday but the ball club was still to be heard from on possible fines and disciplinary action.

Veteran Carl Yastrzemski and young Billy Conigliaro appeared at a special news conference in the office of their mutual attorney and the third player, Reggie Smith, later agreed to end the week-long battle.

But the Red Sox scheduled a closed door team meeting for tonight, just before a scheduled game with the Minnesota Twins, and said it would have no statement on the dispute until after the meeting.

The feud was triggered, strangely, by Tony Conigliaro's sudden retirement from the California Angels a week ago. Billy reacted to Tony's retirement by charging that Yastrzemski was responsible for trading Tony to California last October.

Smith rose to Yastrzemski's defense, charging Billy with being a "quitter" who should be disciplined. Red Sox General Manager Dick O'Connell's only comment on the controversy was that he wished the players involved were batting as well as they were talking while the Red Sox dropped three straight games to the New York Yankees.

In a carefully worded two-page statement, Yastrzemski told a jammed news conference Wednesday that he held both Tony and Billy in the highest regard. Yaz said a "misunderstanding and lack of communication" were responsible for the charges and counter charges.

Billy and Tony, who were present, agreed with Yastrzemski that everything should be forgotten. Smith later concurred in the statement after conferring with both manager Eddie Kasko and club owner Tom Yawkey.

"This misunderstanding is completely behind us and as far as Billy and I are concerned the only thing on our minds is to work together with our teammates and win a pennant this year for the Red Sox fans," Yastrzemski said.

Neither Kasko nor Yawkey would speculate on whether the club will take action against any or all of the trio and said no statement would be made until after the team meeting.

49ers Trade Lakes To New York Giants

For High Future Draft Pick

NEW YORK (UPI)—Roland Lakes, starting defensive tackle for the San Francisco Forty Niners for eight years, was traded to the New York Giants Thursday in exchange for a high future draft choice.

Lakes, 31, is supposed to report on Monday with the Giants' veteran players and hopefully provide the muscle coach Alex Webster has been seeking on the defensive line. Defensive tackle Jerry Shay broke his leg in seven places in the Giants' final game of the season last year against the Los Angeles Rams.

Lakes, 6-4 and 268 pounds, is in his 11th year of pro football. He was with San Francisco for all 10 previous seasons.

The trade is the second made by the Giants in the early days of training. They acquired Mike Gaechter, a defensive back, from the Dallas Cowboys for another draft choice.

49er Official To Meet With Tim And Agent

DAYTON, Ohio (UPI)—Jack White, General Manager of the San Francisco 49ers, will fly here today to handle contract talks with the team's No. 1 draft choice, Tim Anderson of Ohio State, Anderson's agent reported today.

Tony Razzano, who represents five Ohio State football players and is president of United Pro Athletes Inc. said he and Anderson would meet with White at his office here tonight.

"Having Mr. White come here himself has to be progress of a sort," said Razzano. "The 49ers have tried to drive a wedge between me and my clients but it hasn't worked as they thought it would."

Razzano said Anderson did not want to sit in on the negotiating session.

"He did not want to be here but I urged him to come," said Razzano. "As a pro athlete he's in business and he'll benefit from seeing what this is all about."

Golly, I thought this was baseball season. You know, the All-Star game the other night and the Giants in Cincy and the Athletics hosting Detroit tonight.

But, lo and behold, pigskins are beginning to fly. The Oakland Raiders are about to embark on their training routines in Santa Rosa and the San Francisco 49er rookies are already doing their gruntings and groaning near Santa Barbara. (Wouldn't it be something for a Giants-A's World Series and 49ers-Raiders Super Bowl? Just thinking — wishfully.)

Anyway, with football season rapidly approaching I had a long chat yesterday with George McFadden and Dick Berg, the demon public relations men for the 49ers, who fed me the following notes on their team:

There could be a good local angle when the Niners meet the Dallas Cowboys in a controlled scrimmage July 28 at Thousand Oaks. Two of the men on the field will be Elmer Collett, guard for the 49ers, and Honor Jackson, rookie receiver for Dallas, both graduates of Tamalpais High School. Tamalpais, Tamalpais, we love you . . . Tamalpais, Tamalpais, down by the slough . . . (I'm a San Rafael alumnus, you see.)

Berg reminded me that Doug Berry, the 6-foot-2, 195-pound wide receiver from Southern Utah who is with the rookies in camp, comes to the team with fine credentials. He is the son of Rex Berry, a former 49er halfback from 1951 to 1956. Doesn't that make us all feel a little older?

"Hey," interjected McFadden, "speaking of family affairs, don't forget we have a brother act in camp. Tight end Bob Windsor's 'little' brother, Tom, will be trying out at defensive back as a free agent. Tom played at the University of Kentucky just like his brother."

"Want more family ties?" asked Berg, trying to top his partner. "Well, our No. 1 draft pick Tim Anderson is a cousin of our veteran running back Bill Tucker and Jimmy Thomas (running back) has a brother named Earl who was drafted by the Chicago Bears."

For those of you who just can't wait for the fur and pigskins to fly, the 49ers will be televised Aug. 13 against the Miami Dolphins at the Orange Bowl, 5:30 p.m. That's the night your wife will begin developing her annual Fall-Winter videosyncrasy. TV or not TV — that is the question.

Thoughts then changed to the 49ers' new home at Candlestick and Berg whipped out his newsy team publication, "The Diggings," which tells that the old ball orchard will have 40,000 seats for games in August and September and hopefully will increase to 45,000 for October, November and December. Candlestick ultimately will have 60,000 pews, with anywhere from 45,000 to 60,000 in 1972.

"The Diggings" also notes that the football field will run from the first base line (south) toward left center field (north) and that the west side of the field will be the 49er side.

And for those of you who have had trouble over the years cramming your annie fays into Kezar's cramped seats, you will be delighted to know that Candlestick's seats are at least 19 inches wide with knee room of at least 30 inches. No more knees in the back.

Well, so much for the Niners. See you at the Super Bowl next January against the Raiders. That is after the Giants and A's settle the World Series, the playoff that will be described as the "Two-Bit Series" by all you Toll House Cookies. But we'll cross that Bay Bridge when we get to it.

Windward Double Victory?

HONOLULU (UPI) —Windward Passage, declared the official winner on elapsed time in the Transpacific Yacht Race, is also making a race of it on corrected time.

The 73-foot ketch flying the colors of Hawaii's Lahaina Yacht Club set an elapsed time record when she crossed the Diamond Head finish line Tuesday night in nine days nine hours six minutes.

Owner-skipper Robert Johnson was presented a certificate Wednesday officially designating Windward Passage the winner on elapsed time.

But a Transpac spokesman said Windward Passage may also end up the winner on corrected time. He said Moon Day, a 40-foot sloop out of the King Harbor Yacht Club, was in first place in corrected time with Windward Passage a close second.

The spokesman said Moon Day was not expected to cross the finish line until July 17, and, if the winds lighten, Windward Passage "has a good chance" of being corrected time victor as well.

If Windward Passage is declared the corrected time winner, she would be the third yacht in the history of the biennial race, which started in 1906, to win both honors.

Five yachts completed the 2,225-mile journey Wednesday and six more were expected today. Blackfin, the 73-foot ketch out of the St. Francis Yacht Club of San Francisco, which held the old elapsed time record for the 1969 race, crossed the finish line early Wednesday with a time of nine days 17 hours and 17 minutes.

Ondine, from the Larchmont Yacht Club of New York, was the third vessel to finish, Buccaneer, from the Royal New Zealand Yacht Club, was fourth and Kialoa II, out of the Newport Harbor Yacht Club, Calif., was fifth.

Windward Passage was first in Class A, Loco Viente II, a 50-foot sloop from the Balboa Yacht Club topped Class B, Moon Day headed Class C and L'Allegro, from the Richmond Yacht Club, led Class D.

The Canadian ketch Graybeard, which officials feared would have to be towed to Honolulu, was proceeding under her own power after the Coast Guard helped make repairs 450 miles out. The ketch out of the Royal Vancouver Yacht Club lost her rudder and began taking on water Sunday night.

Free Golf Clinic For Youngsters

A free golf clinic for boys and girls between the ages of 9 and 18 will be held July 23 at San Geronimo golf course, from 9 a.m. to 3 p.m.

The San Rafael Parks and Recreation Department will put on the clinic, along with the Professional Golf Association, which will supply instructors. The clinic will consist of instruction in driving, pitching and putting.

The PGA will also provide free lunch.

Leach Wins Trans-Miss Golf Opener

The All-American collegiate selection from Brigham Young University turned back Mark Lye of Napa, 2 and 1. Leach had qualified for the match play competition with a 36-hole total of 151 on rounds of 76-75, sixth best in the field.

Meanwhile, two favorites advanced but the medalist lost in yesterday's opening round.

Tom Kite Jr., the 21-year-old University of Texas star, beat Bill Dougherty of Woodland, 5 and 3.

The losing qualifying round medalist was Bruce Robertson, of San Mateo, the 18-year-old Northern California junior champion. He lost on the 20th hole to Lee Cook, 22, of Scotts Valley, Calif. Cook chipped in from 25 feet for a birdie three to win the second hole of a sudden death playoff.

Two Rookies Leave 49ers' Training Camp

Running back John Bullock of Purdue and defensive tackle Ernie Sterling of Grambling, La., left on the second day of drills. Bullock was the team's 13th draft choice, Sterling was a free agent.

Those who have caught the eye of coach Dick Nolan are wide receiver Jimmy Thomas, a veteran who is being converted from a running back, and rookie running backs Vic Washington and Joe Orduna.

Washington, a graduate of Wyoming, who played Canadian football for the past three years, and Orduna, a former Nebraska star, have impressed the coaching staff with their speed.

Giants In Cincinnati For Trio Of Games

CINCINNATI (UPI) —San Francisco's Juan Marichal, who threw in the All-Star game, will pitch against Don Gullett tonight when the Giants open a series against the Cincinnati Red Sox.

Marichal enters the game with a 10-5 record, while Gullett takes the mound with an impressive 9-3 record.

The Giants, leaders of the National League's Western Division, make the turn into the most important phase of their pennant quest when they launch a three-tilt set against the defending champions.

At this time last year the Reds were 10 games in front of the field and grinding toward a pennant they won and a World Series they lost.

Raiders Open Training Camp

SANTA ROSA (UPI)—Rookies, free agents and some veterans will be on hand as the Oakland Raiders begin two weeks of workouts today.

Coach John Madden said he was "rather excited this year about draft choices." He named defensive back and wide receiver Tom Maxwell from Baltimore, Bill Enyart, Eljah Nevett and Bob Brown.

IN OAKLAND

Athletics Take On The Tigers Tonight

OAKLAND (UPI) — The high-flying Oakland Athletics, enjoying a healthy 11 1-2 game lead in the American League West, open the second half of the season tonight by hosting the Detroit Tigers.

The homestand will be a short one for the A's, who will go with unbeaten Chuck Dobson in series opener against the Tigers. Dobson, who has an 8-0 record, will be opposed by left Mickey Lolich.

After a three-game set against Detroit, the A's will entertain Baltimore and Cleveland in two-game sets.

Three A's players who participated in Tuesday's All-Star Game were excused from a workout Wednesday at the Oakland Coliseum. They were pitcher Vida Blue, who was the game's winning pitcher, outfielder Reggie Jackson and catcher Dave Duncan.

Manager Dick Williams said his pitching ace, Blue, would not miss a turn because of his All-Star Game appearance.

"He'll go Friday night and Jim Hunter Saturday," Williams said. "The All-Star Game was Vida's regular work day so there shouldn't be any problem."

JACK HANLEY

Baseball History: 30 Game Winners

For the benefit of those baseball fans who have been trying off-the-cuff indentification of former 30-game winners, here they are just in case Oakland's Vida Blue joins them this season:

Denny McLain was 31-6 in 1968 with Detroit. McLain, incidentally, won No. 30 that year in a 5-4 victory over Oakland despite two home runs by Reggie Jackson that left him on the short end of a 4-3 score as the Tigers came to bat in the ninth. The Tigers scored two in the ninth.

ONLY EIGHT other American League pitchers won 30 or more in one season. Cy Young was the first and he did it two years in a row. Young was 33-10 in 1901 and 32-10 in 1902 with Boston.

Walter Johnson also had two 30-victory years with Washington. Johnson was 32-12 in 1912, 36-7 the following year.

The other 30-game AL winners were John Chesboro (1904), New York, 41-12 Ed Walsh (1908), Chicago, 50-15; John Coombs (1910), Philadelphia, 31-9; Joe Wood (1912), Boston, 34-5; Jim Bagby (1920), Cleveland, 31-12; Bob (Lefty) Grove (1931), Philadelphia, 31-4. Grove was 31 when he won 31.

There were just four 30-game winners in the National League — Christy Mathewson, Joe McGinnity, Grover Cleveland Alexander and Dizzy Dean unless you want to go back prior to 1900 to make it five. Hoss Radbourne was credited with 60 wins for Providence in 1884. However, records prior to 1900 are not carefully documented.

MATHEWSON WAS a 30-game winner four times for the Giants, 30-13, 1903; 33-12, 1904; 31-9, 1905 and 37-11, 1908. McGinnity was his teammate and was 31-20, 1903; 35-8, 1904.

Alexander was a 30-game winner three times for the Phillies, 31-10, 1915; 33-12, 1916 and 30-13 in 1917. Alexander and Mathewson are the only pitchers ever to win 30 in three consecutive season.

Dean was 30-7 with the Cardinals in 1934 but under today's scoring rules he would have been credited with only 29 wins. The scorer was following the common practice of the time when he awarded Dean a win on June 27 (No. 12) as the starting pitcher who pitched most of the game. Dean was knocked out in the top of the ninth inning of that game with the score tied. He wasn't the pitcher of record when the Cardinals won it on a homer in their half of the ninth.

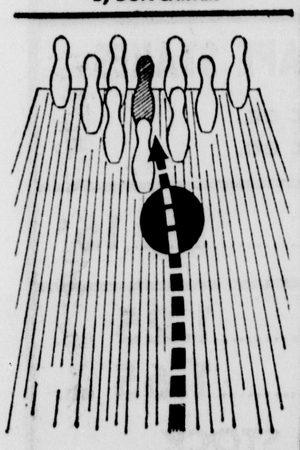
IN 1935 Dean came close to another 30-victory season but finished 28-12 that year. Robin Roberts, never a 30-game winner but a 20-game winner for the Phillies in six straight seasons (1950-55), came close in 1952 with his best record, 28-7.

Others who came close: Carl Hubbell, 26-6 in 1936, the screwball inventor's best in four consecutive 20-game seasons for the Giants (1934-37); Bucky Walters, 27-11 in 1939 for the Reds; Don Newcombe, 27-7 for the Dodgers in 1956; Sandy Koufax, 27-9 for the Dodgers in 1966; Don Drysdale, 25-9 for the Dodgers in 1962; Juan Marichal, 26-9 for the Giants in 1968.

Take a second look at McGinnity's 31-20 record in 1903. No wonder he was nicknamed Iron Man.

BOWLING TIPS

By DON CARTER



Is a big hook great? No way! Watch the star bowlers on television and notice how few boards their hooks cover. Unless the lane is abnormally dry, your ball should not curve over more than 10 boards as it moves toward the pins. If you are able to reduce your hook, you'll find spare shots easier as well.

WESTERN OPEN

Trevino Heads The Field

CHICAGO (UPI) — The $150,000 Western Open began today on Olympia Fields' tough north course with leading money winner Lee Trevino the standout favorite in the field of 150.

Trevino, who has won the U.S., Canadian and British Opens in the last month, should get a strong challenge, however, from Billy Casper, a three time Western winner, as well as Miller Barber, Gene Littler, and Frank Beard.

Three other players, who would have been favorites, Jack Nicklaus, Arnold Palmer and Gary Player, did not enter the event, which for the first time in almost a decade will not be televised, either nationally or locally.

Trevino, who has won $195,869 this year, believed that 9 or 10 under par would be low enough to win the $30,000 top prize in the 72-hole event, thus guessing that 274 or 275 on the par 71 links will triumph. In 1968, the last time the Western was held at Olympia, Nicklaus won with 273.

Trevino declared the 6,749 yard course was "as tough as any we've played," and expected the weather for the four days of the event to be decisive.

"This is going to be a hell of a tournament," he said. "A lot depends on the wind. If it keeps blowing, there'll be some high scores, because the greens are so fast the wind will affect the putts.

"If it doesn't rain anymore, the fairways will be firmer and you'll get more roll. The rough won't grow any more and you'll be able to hold the greens.

"The greens are perfect. They're super speed, fast and true. The course is tight, but I think there'll be some low scores, if it dries out and we don't have wind."

Mathewson and McGinnity are the only teammates ever to win 30 in the same season and they did it twice in 1903-04.

Little League Tourney Time In Marin

The baseball season is barely half over for the professionals, but for Little Leaguers, it's tournament time already.

In Marin County, that means two tournaments, one for the county team championship starting next Tuesday, and then the local playoffs for the national all-star tournament that ends with the Little League World Series at Williamsport, Pa.

Each of Marin's 16 leagues will be represented by its championship team in the team tourney, which will run through next Saturday. The all-star tourney, July 27-31, will feature the 14 top 11 and 12-year-olds from each league, as chosen by the league's coaches.

Both tournaments will be single elimination affairs, starting with eight first-round games. For the team crown, the first games, all at 6 p.m., will include: San Rafael American League vs. Mill Valley National at Hamilton-Loma Verde; San Rafael National vs. Novato National at Novato-Pinheiro; San Geronimo vs. Mill Valley American at Mill Valley American; Hamilton-Loma Verde vs. Gallinas Valley at Gallinas Valley; Marinwood vs. Kentfield-Greenbrae at Marinwood; Novato American vs. Strawberry at Novato-Rancho; Fairfax vs. Twin Cities at Twin Cities; Tiburon vs. Sausalito at Strawberry.

The team tourney continues with 6 p.m. games next Wednesday and Friday, and finishes up with the final game for the championship on Saturday at Marinwood field, beginning at 1 p.m.

The all-star tourney follows the same progression, except that there will be two games on the final Saturday — the championship contest at 3 p.m., preceded by a game for third polace at 1. Both games will be played at Twin Cities field in Larkspur.

First round games include: Fairfax vs. Mill Valley American at Mill Valley American; Strawberry vs. San Rafael American at Strawberry; Hamilton-Loma Verde vs. Marinwood at Marinwood; Kentfield-Greenbrae vs. Mill Valley National at Gallinas Valley; Twin Cities vs. Sausalito at Twin Cities; Tiburon vs. San Rafael National at Hamilton-Loma Verde; San Geronimo vs Novato National at Novato-Rancho; Novato American vs. Gallinas Valley at Novato-Pinheiro.

The Marin County championship all-star team will go on to represent the county (California division two, section two, district three), in the Section Two tournament at Concord the first week of August.

FOOTBALL ROUNDUP

Another Olsen For The Rams

By U.P. INTERNATIONAL

Opponents of the Los Angeles Rams who felt they had trouble coping with one Olsen now have another to contend with.

The Rams, in a rebuilding process under new coach Tommy Prothro, Wednesday signed Phil Olsen, a former All America defensive lineman at Utah State, after he found a legal loophole in his contact with the New England Patriots and became a free agent.

Olsen had been the first draft pick of the then Boston Patriots last year but missed the entire season when he sustained a knee injury while training for the College All Star Game.

Olsen, a 6-foot-5, 265-pounder, will join brother Merlin, a veteran stalwart of the Rams' "Fearsome Foursome", after turning down offers from 19 other teams.

"I'm flattered by the number of teams which contacted my representative," said Olsen. "The two main reasons why we selected the Rams were, first, we looked over the immediate and long range futures of the teams and the offers, and, secondly, while there were some negatives, I felt this would be a fine opportunity to learn from my brother, who's had 10 years experience in the league.

"The negatives are the pressure of being the brother of such a great player and having people expect too much."

Three defensive line slots are taken —those held by Deacon Jones, Coy Bacon and Merlin Olsen, and the younger Olsen will battle Rick Cash, Dick Evey and Bill Nelson for the fourth slot.

Elsewhere in the pro football camps, veteran tight end Fred Arbanas of the Kansas City Chiefs announced his retirement because of a bad knee. Arbanas, a starter for 10 years, played much of his career without one eye, which he lost when he was assaulted on a Kansas City street by two men.

Kent McCloughan, the veteran cornerback traded from Oakland to Los Angeles, did not report to the Rams' camp and indicated he may retire.

Dennis Dummit, a standout as a collegian who was not drafted, completed five of eight passes for 114 yards as the Rams rookies outscored the San Diego rookies three touchdowns to two in a scrimmage. Creston Whitaker, a basketball player from North Texas State, caught four passes for 101 yards, including a 64-yard TD pass from Dummit.

The Detroit Lions dropped five draft choices after they failed to pass physicals. Included were Herman Franklin, the No. 6 pick from Southern California, and the No. 11, 12, 13 and 14 choices, Phil Webb of Colorado, David Abercrombie of Tulane, Bill Pilconis of Pittsburgh and Tom Lorenz of Iowa State.

The Dallas Cowboys cut 10 free agents from their rookie roster, including quarterback Ed Perry of Buffalo and the New York Jets dropped four rookies —Greg Flaska of Western Michigan, Jim Lough of Wichita, Andy Fusco of Syracuse and Phil Jones of Houston, after they failed physicals.

Richey, Ashe Upset

WASHINGTON (UPI)—After only two rounds of play, the $50,000 Washington Star International tennis tournament was assured today of a new 1971 champion. Both of last year's finalists were knocked out of competition Wednesday.

Defending champion Cliff Richey was upset by Spain's Andres Gimeno, 6-4, 7-6, in a match marked by a game-delaying temper flare-up by Richey during a climactic 12-point tie-breaker game in the second set.

Then, Pierre Barthes of France celebrated Bastille Day in rousing fashion by ousting fourth seeded Arthur Ashe, 7-6, 1-6, 6-1.

Still heading the field into the round of 16 however were Wimbledon champion John Newcombe of Australia, Wimbledon runner-up, Stan Smith, and pro tennis' biggest money winner, Rod Laver.

Newcombe was extended before beating Ray Moore of South Africa, 7-5, 5-7, 6-3, to advance into the third round and was matched today against England's giant-killer, Roger Taylor, who upset Clark Graebner, 6-2, 3-6, 7-5.

Laver, who easily dealt with Fred Stolle, 6-2, 6-3, faced another Australian, Ken Rosewall, winner over young John Alexander.

Richey bowed out to a heavy round of boos when he tripped over the line tape while losing a point in the decisive tie-breaker. Limping slightly, he jerked the service court tape loose from its moorings, necessitating a 22-minute time-out while the ground crew made the repairs.

Coniglaro Eye Injury Was Cause

BOSTON (UPI) — The near-fatal injury Tony Conigliaro suffered almost four years ago may have finally ended his stormy career as one of baseball's most promising young sluggers.

The 26-year-old Conigliaro revealed Wednesday that an examination of the left eye he almost lost on Aug. 18, 1967 showed a deterioration in his vision that would make hitting a pitched baseball "difficult if not impossible."

Only a second "miraculous recovery" would allow the California Angels' outfielder to continue as an active player according to a report filed by Dr. Charles D.J. Regan, the eye specialist who two years ago classified Tony's sight recovery as a miracle unprecedented in his medical experience.

The doctor's report, contained in a letter to Tony and made public by the player's attorney, served as an explanation for Conigliaro's sudden decision to quit the Angels last weekend.

Dr. Regan's latest examination, carried out on Tuesday, confirmed Tony's repeated contention that he was not seeing the ball as well as he had when he made his dramatic comeback with the Red Sox in 1969.

Tony narrowly escaped death when he was hit in the face by a Jack Hamilton pitch, then of the same California club, nearly four years earlier.

Idled for the rest of Boston's dramatic pennant run in 1967, Tony tried to make a comeback for the World Series and again the following spring but was forced to sit out the 1968 season.

He came back to hit 20 homers and bat .255 in 1969, and hit 36 home runs with a .266 batting average in 1970 before being traded to the Angels in a widely-unpopular six-player deal last October.

Insisting that he had known his vision was deteriorating, Tony said he had kept the matter a secret for several weeks but was not surprised by the medical finding.

He described the blind spot in the center of his left eye as increasing from "softball to basketball" size when he tried to look the approximate 60-foot distance from the plate to the pitching mound.

SPORTS SHORTS

Banshee Sailing Begins

NAPA (UPI) —Pete Schoonmaker of the St. Francis Yacht Club in San Francisco took the lead Wednesday in the opening races of the second annual National Banshee Sailing Championship at Lake Berryessa.

Schoonmaker, a Newport Beach resident, ended the day with 5 1-2 points after placing first in two races and fourth in a third event.

Two races will be held Thursday with the sixth and final one on Friday.

Tennis

HOUSTON (UPI)—Butch Krikorian, No. 5 seed in senior singles at the National Men's Senior Clay Court tennis championships, defaulted with stomach cramps Wednesday in the third round but recovered to win in doubles play.

Krikorian, of San Jose, Calif., lost 6-0 to Homer Richards Jr. of Charlottesville, Va., in the first set and then defaulted at 1-0.

Krikorian and Joe Woolfson, No. 2 seeds in doubles, won 6-4, 6-4 over Robert Arnold and Al Doyle as Krikorian recovered.

Basketball

CLEVELAND (UPI) —Austin Carr, the top draft pick of the Cleveland Cavaliers of the National Basketball Association, is in Cleveland today for the first time since he cracked a bone in his right foot two weeks ago while scrimmaging on a Harlem playground.

Softballers Win On A Two-Hitter

Marshall Grawson pitched a two-hitter and was given ample support as the Doves crushed Industrial Credit Co. 16-0 last night in one of three San Rafael Softball League games.

In the other games, The Bar outslugged The Bums 14-8 and The Wild Bunch did likewise to the 666th Radar Station 14-11.

GOLF NOTES

Three Aces Fired By Marinites

Bill Jacobsen, Larry Olson and Frank Quigley represent different generations, but they all had one thing in common this week. Each had a hole-in-one.

Jacobsen, of Mill Valley, the eldest of the three at 70, aced the 135-yard fourth hole at Indian Valley in Novato. He used an eight iron for the shot, which was witnessed by Fred Kraemer, Everett Sefton and Gene Quinn, all of Mill Valley.

Olson, 47, of Fairfax, got his ace on the 130-yard 10th hole at Peacock Gap in San Rafael, using a nine iron. Witnesses were Ray Scarlatte, Bill Cole and Sam Cresi.

Eighteen-year-old Quigley of Corte Madera fired a hole-in-one at Los Arroyos course in Sonoma. His masterpiece, for which he used a seven iron, came on the 100-yard sixth hole. Cecil Larcomb of Sonoma and Andy Plumbridge of Homewood, Calif., saw it.

The 20-year-old sprinter has one more year left at UCLA.

NFL Giants Move To New Jersey?

NEW YORK (UPI)—New Jersey officials have reportedly drawn up the contract and are now hoping the New York football Giants will sign it, bringing big-league sports to New Jersey.

New Jersey officials Wednesday maintained an official silence in the face of persistent, but unconfirmed reports that an agreement to bring the Giants to the Garden State was imminent.

Informed sources revealed that the New Jersey Sports Authority has advanced to the point of drawing up a proposed contract. However, there was no confirmation if the authority and the Giants had indeed affixed their signatures to it yet.

The only blank in the contract, besides the place for signatures, sources said, was the date. The month, July, was printed on it.

There was the possibility that announcement of an agreement was being held up until New Jersey Gov. William T. Cahill returned to his desk.

The governor, one of the prime movers in the quest to bring the Giants to New Jersey, has been home all week recuperating from a virus.

State Treasurer Joseph M. McCrane Jr., a member of the Authority, was, according to the sources, supposed to attend a meeting in New York, presumably with the Giants representatives.

However, the source could not confirm that the treasurer had actually held the meeting. As state treasurer, McCrane is authorized to negotiate and sign the contract.

A spokesman for the Giants said club president Wellington Mara did not meet with the New Jersey delegation Wednesday, but added it was possible that club lawyers did.

"Our position is the same as it has been the past few weeks," the spokesman said. "Our lawyers are looking for the lease and we're waiting to hear from them."

If the contract was signed, it would mean that the Giants would move to New Jersey to play in the Hackensack meadowlands where a sports complex, estimated at $100-200 million, would be built.

Hope Expressed To Avoid Ban

Larkspur, Corte Madera and Ross Valley Sanitary District officials took a generally hopeful stand last night that the Bay Area Water Quality Control Board will not clamp a building ban on the Ross Valley.

The 14 officials present agreed to meet again at 9 a.m. Monday in the Corte Madera Town Hall. They will "rehearse" the presentation they will make at 2 p.m. Tuesday in the Mill Valley City Hall, to a hearing panel of the Bay Area water watchdog organization.

The Ross Valley spokesmen agreed they believed the water board should relent on its threatened building ban, in light of efforts already made to clean up sewage discharges into Corte Madera Creek, and future plans.

Ross Valley Sanitary District Board chairman Peter A. Ribar warned the two cities that "you along with us are co-conspirators . . . any sanctions will be applicable to you as well as to us." Both Corte Madera and Larkspur deliver sewage to the Ross Valley district treatment plant under treatment contracts.

"We . . . know the water quality control board's demands are onerous," Ribar declared. "We think we run a very, very good district . . . our tax rate has always been the lowest in California. Our treatment plant, we thought, has always been exemplary except for bypassing" when the wet-season flow of up to 20 million gallons per day from the sewers far exceeded the plant's 4.5 million gallon daily treatment capacity.

Ribar, Dist. Mgr. Ralph C. Noah and Larskpur and Corte Madera officials then recited a series of costly steps taken over the past five years to partly solve the problems, and plans for future expansion of the treatment plan and additional sewers as far up the valley as Fairfax.

Corte Madera Mayor Holmes S. Norville said, "my overall impression from talking to "the bay regional water board staff is that we're not in bad trouble," although the Ross Valley must in the near future decide whether to ship effluent south to Mill Valley or north to San Rafael in the near future.

"We are in trouble," said Corte Madera Vice Mayor Harold B. Wagstaff. "We're fighting a defensive action. Why isn't somebody asking them to explain their basis for this drastic action? I as an individual am not denying the conditions but they are arbitrarily saying 'clean up or ship out' . . . we can't ship out."

Noah urged that the three public agencies should stress that their interim work will continue to offset any new treatment plant load resulting from new construction.

Corte Madera has more than 1,000 dwelling units on developers' drawing board; Larkspur has plans in the near future, and so do other areas in the sanitary district, the officials agreed. Should the regional board issue its order after hearings Tuesday and a second session in Oakland on July 22, the builders would be balked.

Councilmen present agreed that they would carry the load of the presentation Tuesday on behalf of the cities, stressing the "political" impact of the regional threat as suggested by Larkspur Mayor Earl J. O'Grady. The sanitary district plans will be presented by technical staff.

Tuesday's public hearing actually will be on claims that the sanitary district and the cities have violated orders issued April 30, 1968 setting standards for purity and volume of effluent.

Bullet Hits Man Who Stole Purse, Which Saves Him

MANILA (UPI) — A purse snatcher was saved Wednesday by the purse he stole.

Police said Renato Mendoza, 40, grabbed the purse of Mrs. Fratexta Go in a Manila textile market place.

Patrolman Dominador Barros, who answered Mrs. Go's shouts for help, fired his pistol at Mendoza when the purse snatcher lunged at him with a knife.

The bullet went through Mendoza's right hand and pierced his shirt. But it was stopped short of his heart by Mrs. Go's coin-filled purse.

Car Burglary Cited At Golf Course Lot

Two suitcases and a spare tire, valued at a total of $125, were stolen from the trunk of a car in the parking lot of San Geronimo National Golf Course last Thursday, Marin County Sheriff's Office reported yesterday.

Deputies said the car was owned by Frederick J. Gosinger of 137 Lakeside Drive, Corte Madera.

School Austerity In San Anselmo Seen

Officials of the San Anselmo School District yesterday predicted years of belt tightening for their schools as a result of voters' refusal Tuesday to allow a tax rate increase.

Supt. W. Kenneth Lowry and other officials attributed the overwhelming rejection to the "economic conditions" in which taxpayers have found themselves this year.

The ballot measure had requested an 80-cent increase to the district's general purpose tax rate of $2.25 per $100 assessed valuation. Voters rejected the measure 1,876 to 790.

Lowry said he viewed the outcome as a reaction to higher taxes throughout government such as the county's expected 40-cent jump and a mandatory increase in the assessed valuation rate.

Other considerations may have been expected bond elections running into tens of millions of dollars by the college, hospital, water district and city.

As a result of Tuesday's defeat, he said the district will go through "a period of critical planning" during the next year. And that may mean going to fewer but larger schools and reappraising transportation needs among other things.

His assessment of the financial situation and cutback on programs was echoed by trustees.

Junior League Opens Ross Style Series

CRUNCHING INTO salads, some 475 women and a few men yesterday opened the summer season of luncheons and fashion shows to be held weekly by the sponsoring Northgate Group at the Marin Art and Garden Center in Ross. Old friends and new acquaintances discussed their summer travels and plans at the 12:30 p.m. luncheon and were served by volunteer waitresses from the Northgate Group and co-sponsoring Junior League of San Francisco's Marin members.

EYES WERE ON Mrs. Calvin Ewing of the Northgate Group as she swept along the ramp under the trees during the afternoon show in a hostess gown of swirling pinks, blues and white. Seated at left are the Marin Art and Garden Center board members hosting the Ross Town Council, an opening tradition for the series. Other tables of Junior League members and Northgate Group members were surrounded by other Marinites and their guests. (Independent-Journal photos by Alfred Arn)

JUNIOR LEAGUER Mrs. John Caple of San Rafael drew comment from the crowd as she traveled the runway in black hot pants and flowing see-through black gown with silver trim. Ann Caple's shoes were the lace-up-to-the-knee sandals that are new for fall evening wear.

MRS. MERVYN F. Burke of the Northgate Group first appeared on the ramp in traveling outfit teaming the new blazer look with a matching skirt of green. The plaid blazer is among fashion's fall news. A cool straw hat and off-white bag and gloves accessorize her ensemble. The summer series will continue each Wednesday through the next five weeks at the center.

HELEN HELP US!

By HELEN BOTTEL

Men, Boys Expect The Girl To Apologize To End Lovers' Spat

DEAR HELEN:

I still love him though I deny it, even to myself.

How can you forget someone you planned your future with? We went steady for a year and were always true to each other, and then foolish pride ruined things. You see, I waited for him to call me when I was supposed to call him, except I wouldn't call because I thought he owed me an apology. So there we both sat, waiting, and getting madder all the time.

It's too late to do anything about it now because we don't even s p e a k. But Helen, he doesn't date anyone else and he even tells his family we're still going together. Why doesn't he just call up and say he's sorry? — HATES STUBBORNNESS

DEAR H.S.:

B e c a u s e boys (and men) usually aren't made that way. Here are two letters that (1) answer your question and (2) tell you how to solve your problem:

DEAR HELEN:

What is an Ex-Boy friend?

He's the one who always asks your best friend "Where's what's-her-name?"

—The one who calls and says he has the wrong number (rather than says the w o r d s that would get her back).

—The kid who "j u s t happens" to ride past your bus stop when he knows you're there. But w o u l d he stop or even wave? Heck no!

—T h e one who has your phone number scribbled all over his wall, just in case, you know, not for any special reason.

—The one who sends you a birthday card with no name signed, but addressed in his very distinctive handwriting with the g r e e n pen he stole from you.

—He's the kid you really hate to run into on the street, but most of all, face; and he gets that same sinking feeling when he sees you, because you both know that you love each other, but you're both too PROUD to admit it.

(But I did.)

Just sign me — LEARNED, AND NOW HE'S NO LONGER MY EX

DEAR HELEN:

He's back. He's back! That wonderful guy was only six w o r d s away all those many months.

"Honey, I'm sorry. Please forgive me." Those were the six magic words I said to him. Thirty minutes later he burst through my door and hugged me so hard I couldn't breathe. He even accepted part of the blame — then.

One word to your girl readers: By HIS c o d e, he never would have called. He expected me to apologize. So I bit my lip, buried my pride, and did. — JEN

DEAR HELEN:

I totally disagree with the mother who signed h e r s e l f "Down With Mother's Day!" I think our Mother's Day is the best day of the year, and I know MY mother wouldn't mind at all if all eight of us gathered at our house for dinner, even if she had to cook part of it.

After all, a family is the most important thing to a mother — isn't it what we women live for? — THERESA H.

DEAR THERESA:

"Not entirely," Liberationists will say, but thanks for your good letter anyway. — H.

P.S. "D.W.M.D." wasn't against motherhood, but only against the special day that sometimes only emphasizes the slights of other days. — H

(This column is dedicated to family living, so if you're having kid trouble or just plain trouble, let Helen help YOU. She will also welcome your own amusing experiences. Address Helen Bottel in care of the Independent-Journal.)

Two Avocados For Guacamole

Serve a gaucamole dip that's easily made for scooping up on tortilla chips or crackers.

Combine 2 teaspoons instant minced onion and ⅓ cup golden sherry. Let stand 10 minutes or longer. Cut 2 large avocados into halves and remove seeds and skins. Mash fruit coarsely. (There should be 2 cups mashed avocado.)

Combine with wine mixture, 4 teaspoons lemon juice, 1 teaspoon salt and 12 drops liquid red pepper seasoning. Makes about 1 pint.

THIS BIG plaid blanket coat with matching pants suit underneath was unveiled by Norman Norell at his winter collection showing in New York this week. The coat is done in large squares of yellow, orange and navy.

NORMAN NORELL

A Pot-Pourri Is Dished Up

By GAY PAULEY

NEW YORK (UPI) —Designer Norman Norell has served up a pot-pourri of styles for fall and winter.

The new collections shown Tuesday night to press and buyers carried a little something for everybody, from blazer-jacketed suits and pantsuits to the height of opulent fabrics for evening including a whole group of d r e s s e s and coats made entirely of plumage.

Always a pretty independent creator, the dean of American high fashion designers (nearly 50 years in the field) did, however, go along with the rest of the Seventh Avenue gang in two things. He brought back the suit, two-piecers with coordinated blouses that had about the biggest pussycat bow ties at the t h r o a t we've seen for a while.

AND HE did stabilize the hemline at just skimming the knee, an about face from his spring and summer collection when he dropped hems to about 10 inches from the floor.

"I decided lengths don't matter anymore," Norell explained after the show. "We just cut them where they look best and send them on out."

A lot of the military crept in. Witness fitted tweed or solid-tone coats or tunics buttoned all the way up the throat to the chin-line. Shades of West Point cadets! Or, he turned to the navy with pantsuits done as almost pure copies of the sailor suit, c o m p l e t e with wide, squared collars on pullover tunic-length tops. He showed the sailor motif in navy with red collar and a more formal costume in white satin collar, the rest black.

GREATCOATS SWUNG with inverted pleats center back, belted in leather, and often again, military button closings, usually double-breasted. Some of them he trimmed lavishly with big fur c o l l a r s, with notched lapels, as in a group of black Persian lamb on greige (grayed beige). Cuffs, five or six inches deep, also were fur. The audience gave a big hand to his creamy wool greatcoat, belted, with a shoulder-covering trim in sable and to another in black with a collar so large it was almost a bolero.

Norell, who practically invented the pantsuit many sea-s o n s ago, does it anew with tailored, blazer jackets in glennplaids among other ways. For evening, there was his white sequined trousers, cut lean, topped with a black fingertip length jacket.

New Books Offered To Bridge The Gap

NEW YORK (U P I) —The term "generation gap" usually is used to define the communication chasm between parent and teen-ager but that isn't where the problem's at.

For real communications trouble, there's the gap between parent and toddler, as the two and three-year-old struggles with feelings he doesn't fully understand, trying to put them into a language he hasn't yet fully learned to command.

To try to help both big and little people, Golden Press in cooperation with the Menninger Foundation, has begun a new series of "Read Together Books for Parent and Children."

Drs. Robert E. Switzer and J. Cotter Hirschberg, director and associate director of the children's division of The Menninger Clinic, have written the s e r i e s with the help of children's author Jane Werner Watson.

The first books in the series are titled, "Sometimes I Get Angry," "My Friend The Baby-sitter," "Sometime I'm Afraid" and "Look At Me Now." The topics deal with problems the children may have, feelings that confuse them, situations that frighten them. The idea is to help define for the child just how he does feel, help the parents understand, and promote give-and-take on these subjects — and any o t h e r s that may arise from them.

Special Treats On Eastern Visit

By MOLLY MARIN

Mrs. Richard Schlobohm of Novato and her two daughters are back from a trip to the East Coast on which the girls, Mary Blair, 12, and Marcy, 8, had two special treats.

In New York City they were given a personally guided tour of the Metropolitan Museum of Art by Mrs. Schlobohm's cousin, Virginia Burton, who is a curator of Egyptology there. Then in Washington, D.C., they were thrilled to find Lynda Johnson Robb and her husband having dinner at the table next to them with the two Robb children.

The Schlobohms spent a week in New York visiting with Mr. Schlobohm, who is there to establish a business. The couple attended the Broadway plays "Applause" and "Company."

The family also drove to Charlottesville, Va., after three days sightseeing in Washington, and visited the University of Virginia and Monticello. Then they went on to Carter's Grove Plantation, now part of Williamsburg and which was once owned by Carter Burwell, an ancestor of Mrs. Schlobohm. The family spent July 4 at Sea Girt, N.J., and returned home by way of New York.

AFTER A month in Europe the Milton Stannards are back in their home in Tiburon. Their travels took them to Frankfort, Copenhagen and England, where they toured Bristol, Chester and Northern Wales with Mr. and Mrs. Norman Frahm of Corona del Mar.

OFFICERS WIVES Club members will have a coffee to honor Mrs. Lee A. Sarter July 22 at 12:30 p.m. at the Hamilton Air Force Base Officers Club. Mrs. Sarter is the wife of the base commander at Hamilton Air Force Base, and Colonel and Mrs. Sarter are leaving soon for Ent Air Force Base in Colorado Springs.

MRS. JAMES Sullivan and Mrs. Richard Warrington are co-hosting a luncheon at the Sullivan home in the Marin Country Club Estates in Novato on Friday for Mrs. Stanley Friese. Mrs. Friese and her husband are leaving Marin to move to Alaska, where he has accepted a school district job.

MARC BRADLEY Baer, son of Mr. and Mrs. Benjamin F. Baer of Mendota Heights, Minn., and formerly of Marin, married Patricia Ann Smith in Cedar Rapids, Iowa, on Saturday. The couple will live in London for the next year.

The bride just received a degree from the University of Iowa, where she was president of Kappa Kappa Gamma sorority, and Marc has been completing work on a doctorate in history. He was a member of Sigma Alpha Epsilon fraternity there.

From High School To Army In Israel

By THOMAS CHEATHAM

TEL AVIV (UPI)—Their American counterparts prepare this summer for college or marriage or the labor market. Not so Israeli girls just out of high school. For them it's army basic training.

Israel is the only nation in the world where at 18 girls are drafted as well as boys. Deferments are few and far between, issued only if one is unfit, already married or an ultra-orthodox Jew.

DISTAFF MILITARY service is as normal a part of life as gefilte fish in Israel, whose No. 1 priority is national defense and survival. Resist and you become an outcast.

It makes for one of the sexiest armies on record — miniskirts are standard issue — but creates the social problems peculiar to any college campus. Birth control pills are available to army girls on request.

The tour of active duty for a girl is 20 months, followed by a reserve commitment to serve one month a year until she has a bay or turns 55. A private's pay is 19 Israeli pounds ($5.50) a month.

Boot camp, a six-week stint, comes complete with shouting women drill instructors, calisthenics at 5:45 a.m., training on submachine guns and even field maneuvers and marches.

The girls come out of training and move behind typewriters, radio sets, radar screens, mess hall and PX counters, so that their male counterparts are freed for real soldiering.

FEW EVER find their way to the front lines, but they would if the nation's survival were at stake.

This women's corps serves on an equal basis with the male half of the army, eating in the same mess halls and enjoying much the same privileges. Only the barracks and showers are separate.

The Midwife Is Making Comeback

I-J Special Report

LOMA LINDA — Midwives are coming back into medical fashion. Hospitals and private obstetricians all over the United States are on waiting lists to hire them fresh out of the training program. Unlike the midwife of past centuries, the modern version is a highly skilled nurse with special training in obstetrics, local anesthesia and comprehensive advanced methods of pre-and-post natal care. She is capable of handling normal deliveries in a hospital as a physician's responsible health care associate.

Midwifery, as a specialty, is one of two new certificate programs being developed by nursing schools in response to urgent requests from government health authorities and doctors' associations.

The second and newer career program is that of pediatric nurse associate, a job which takes the nurse with specialized postgraduate preparation out of the hospital and into the community to provide health and preventive care to well children and those with minor illness; she gives counsel to their mothers — always in collaboration with a pediatrician or family physician.

BOTH PROGRAMS, according to Ruth White, chairman of community health at Loma Linda University School of Nursing, are being developed because there are not enough obstetricians, pediatricians, and family doctors in all localities to take care of the need. Miss White, a certified nurse-midwife, is assisting development of the two curricula to augment the nursing education program at Loma Linda University.

"Some people think this will be second-class care," she says. "It won't be. It will enhance and increase mother and child health care for all, because it calls for the nurse-practitioner to work in collaboration with the physician and enables the physician to give priority to those who have severe health problems."

Although Loma Linda hopes to be among the first nursing schools in the West to offer such career training to nurses, and one of a small number in the entire country, this trend in education will certainly become universal, Professor White believes, because the demand for nurses with the additional capability is already great.

IN CALIFORNIA nurses are not legally permitted to deliver babies. But the California State Department of Health is now urging baccalaureate schools of nursing to prepare nurse midwives and pediatric nurse associates as a means of increasing the state's health-care.

A nurse-midwife, working with an obstetrician or in a hospital outpatient department, would increase the number of patients that could be served as well as enhance the quality of care. A change in the California law seems likely in the future, says Miss White.

The pediatric nurse-associate is still so new a specialty that the American Academy of Pediatrics, with the American Nurses' Association, has just set up guidelines for education.

Much more than the nurses now working in obstetrical or pediatrics wards of hospitals, a nurse in either of the two new specialties will become a physician's "extra arm," so trained that she will be more perceptive of physical deviations from the normal — for instance: irregularities in heart sounds, abnormal breathing patterns, skin lesions, etc. —and would call them to the physician's attention. At the same time, she will be qualified to accept more responsibility for the management of normal or routine examinations, baby deliveries, and preventive health care.

A PHYSICIAN would examine the expectant mother on the initial prenatal visit. If everything seems normal, and if the mother has signed up for the midwifery service, the nurse-midwife would take care of the patient from then on. However, if during the pregnancy or delivery there were any evidence of a problem, she would call in the obstretician member of the team with whom she works.

The nurse-midwife is trained in the administration of local anesthesia and in doing the episiotomy, as well as the management of all aspects of a normal pregnancy and delivery. She is also skilled in working with women who want to have their babies by natural childbirth. Her training is inclusive of the most recent developments in obstetrics and, like physicians, she will be encouraged to return every few years for new information.

Today is Thursday, July 15, the 196th day of 1971.

The moon is in its last quarter. The morning stars are Venus, Mars and Saturn. The evening stars are Mercury and Jupiter. Those born on this day are under the sign of Cancer.

Dutch painter Rembrandt was born July 15, 1606. .

On this day in history:

In 1912 the United States, led by Jim Thorpe, won the Olympic games in Stockholm, Sweden.

In 1942 Americans in eastern cities were faced with the first serious meat shortage of World War II.

In 1945 Italy declared war on its former Axis partner, Japan.

In 1964 Sen. Barry Goldwater was nominated as the Republican candidate for president. He was beaten in November by Lyndon Johnson.

A thought for today: Biologist Thomas Henry Huxley said, "For every man the world is as fresh as it was at the first day and as full of untold novelties for him who has the eyes to see them."

Group Wants To Keep Old Privy

MISSISSAUGA, Ont. (UPI) — The Credit Valley Conservation Authority won't give up a 130 year-old three-seater privy which once stood between a barn and a farmhouse in the area and was discovered recently at a scrapyard.

The Royal Ontario Museum and two government groups wanted the privy for their Canadian collections. But the authority won't give it away. A member, Ab Greenway, said:

"After all, that was the original county seat."

Expert Sylvester Lowery Recalls 1940 Open Pairs Championship

The day before a national tournament opens, bridge players begin to assemble at the site of the tournament to hash over old times and tell the stories of famous players and famous hands. Some of the gatherings tonight in Chicago, where the national tournament opens tomorrow, will surely recall the hand Philadelphia expert Sylvester Lowery played in the 1940 Open Pair Championship.

LEADS KING

West opened the king of spades, and Lowery won the trick in his hand with the ace of spades. The first trick hadn't really required deep thought, but the next trick was a dilly.

Declarer could get to dummy only once, with the ace of clubs. With that one entry to dummy he somehow had to limit the loss to one diamond and one club.

KINGS DIVIDED

Lowery reflected that the king of diamonds and the king of clubs were probably divided between the opponents. If West had both kings, he might well have doubled one club instead of bidding one spade. If West had neither king, he might well have passed instead of bidding the spades.

If West had the king of clubs, the chance of limiting the club loss to one trick was rather poor. But if East had the king of clubs, then the diamond finesse was likely to fail.

BEST CHANCE

Lowery came up with a play that would bring the contract in even if West had the king of diamonds, as feared, provided that South had a minimum of luck elsewhere. See if you can spot the play before you read on.

LEADS QUEEN

At the second trick Lowery led the queen of diamonds.

West took the king and led another spade, forcing declarer to ruff. South led a club to the ace and returned the ten of diamonds for a finesse.

When East played low, dummy's ten won the trick. If East had covered, South would have taken the ace of diamonds and would then return to dummy with another diamond.

Declarer was now in position to lead a club from dummy, and the job was done. East could get his king of clubs, but nothing else.

ART REVIEW

Gallery Features Only Mill Valley Creators

By LAURA DEVENDORF

For years there have been rumblings that a lot of talent is stashed among Mill Valley's trees and hills. And the rumor assumes credence with the opening of the Genesis Gallery which shows Mill Valley talent only, upstairs at the corner of Miller and Throckmorton avenues.

Not that it matters where an artist is from. But there is a surprising number of respected names among the gallery's almost 50-member group. The show they provide is impressive, especially considering that at least half a dozen of the town's most illustrious artist citizens are missing.

Excepting the shortage of crafts and sculpture, this initial 123-work show has an evenness of ability and a balance of styles that belies its tight resources. The scenic realism is better than usual with interesting oils by Phoebe Deignan-Healey, Gilbert Wheat and Bernard Healey and watercolors by William Lary.

There are attractive less objective works by many artists including Bette Klopf, Jeanne Franklin and Else Gonella to cite a few. And there is figurative work worth note by George Albertus, Sandra Schindler and Maggie Hazell Rosen, plus some of Jeanne Ellner's handsome pots and Charlotte Patera's stitchery.

A co-op type setup staffed by member artists, Genesis is the joint effort of the Mill Valley Fall Arts Festival and the Mill Valley Arts Guild, the latter initiated by the city Art Commission. The three groups are chaired respectively by Dee Fretus, Glen Peterson and Lyman Emerson. And it is Emerson who reports that while Genesis is planned as a showcase for Mill Valley talent, it is also envisioned as the first step toward establishment of a future art center for both visual and performing arts.

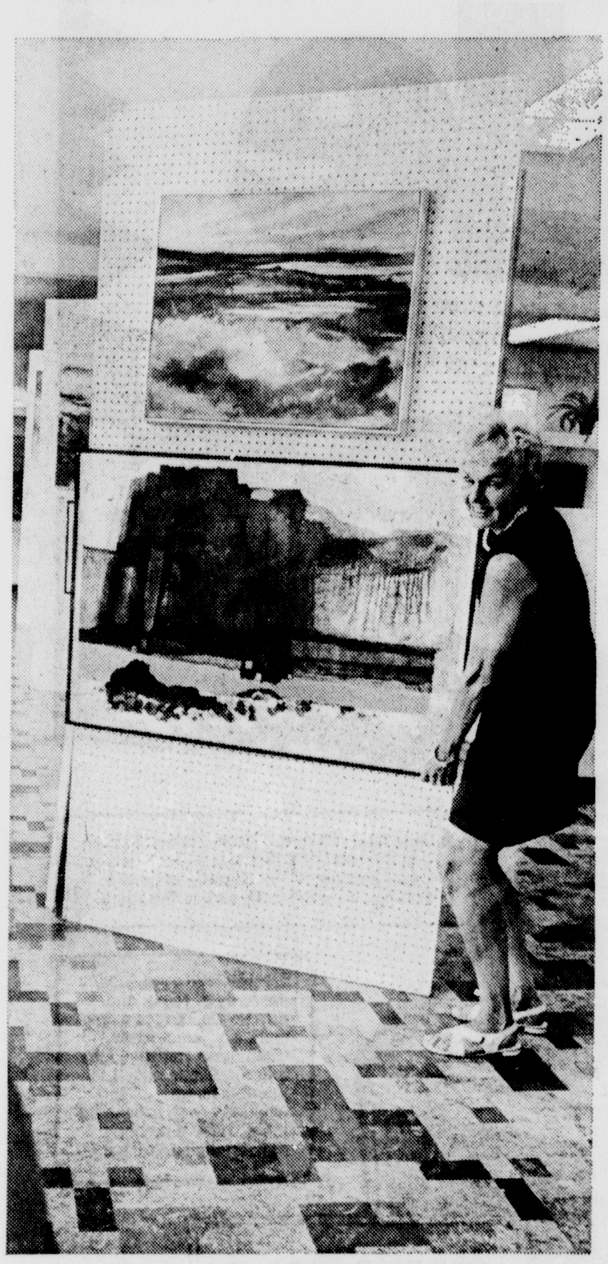
As for what it is now, it is a gallery open to all Mill Valley artists and craftsmen who wish to submit work for screening. For the public, it offers member group shows such as the current one which runs through mid August with gallery hours from noon to four, Monday through Saturday. Work is on a sales basis although a rental program is being planned.

Physically, the gallery is a big roomy place. Yet it has been spared that endless wall space look that does justice to certain types of forecful art while doing in those juicy little delicacies. Instead, there are jutting panels and columns for separate displays plus "caves" which hold other intimate groupings. And there are even places to sit down, sometimes with backs on them and cushions.

All such considerations make it easy to pause over such lush rarities as Robert Biancalana's muted intarsia. Its mosaiced chunks of old wood are chosen with such deep concern for their barnacled encrustations, dim, dead paint or the frothy quality of their worm-worked borings that it deserves the time spent lingering.

So does a gentle work such as Carla Hoag's "The Journey Back," an abstract, crystal yellow watercolor with the fragile architecture of a butterfly wing.

A little comfort and assisted seeing is appreciated and it helps any gallery fulfill its purpose of being a place to enjoy as well as feed the spirit.



GENESIS GALLERY — Assistant co-ordinator Jeanne Franklin plus nearly 50 other Mill Valley artists and craftsmen are the working members of this, Marin's newest gallery, just opened downtown at the corner of Miller and Throckmorton avenues. Here, she tests a painting for location.

19,000 Attend Religious Parley

SAN FRANCISCO (UPI)— The 5-day Jehovah's Witness district assembly opened Wednesday with 19,000 persons on hand at Kezar Stadium.

Witnesses from 298 congregations in Central and Northern California and Western Nevada were represented at the start of the marathon of teaching, preaching, singing and morality plays.

Some 500 new ministers will be baptized Thursday by total immersion in the Rossi Playground swim tank.

Indian Music 'Fan Club' Opens Drive

Friends of the Ali Akbar College are organizing as a new group for fans of classical Indian music who do not necessarily seek to become musicians themselves, but will support the Marin school.

According to Daisy Paradis, publicity and planning director for the school, the new organization has launched a $10,000 membership drive, with annual dues ranging from $7.50 for youths to $1,000 for benefactors. The school's expenses annually exceed tuition by $20,000, she said; advance donations and other sources have met half the need this year.

Membership in the Friends of Ali Akbar College will bring admission to special concerts, seminars in appreciation of Indian music and other special privileges.

James Hampton Coleman, 28, of 136 Madrone Avenue, Larkspur, arrested Jan. 14 in San Rafael, who was fined $360.

John Breasted Barnes, 44, of 206 Caledonia Street, Apt. 16, Sausalito, arrested May 9 in Sausalito, who was place on probation for one year, fined $302 and ordered to jail for five days.

Robert Towles Smith, 32, of 125 Cresta Drive, Apt. 4, San Rafael, arrested Dec. 29 on Highway 101, who was fined $240.

Petitioners In One-Way Bid For Streets

Members of the Downtown San Rafael Merchants Committee are circulating petitions to encourage the San Rafael City Council to make Fourth Street and Fifth Avenue into one-way streets.

At the merchants committee' meeting yesterday, Chairman Walter E. Zurcher reported that he had collected 60 signatures from business district merchants urging the council to carry out the proposals of the D. Jackson Faustman downtown traffic program.

The merchants hope to obtain 150 to 200 signers before the council's next hearing on one-way streets Aug. 9, Zurcher said.

He said the plan calls for three lanes of eastbound traffic on Fourth, and two lanes westbound on Fifth, with eventual one-way couplets for downtown north-and-south streets from A through D.

New Water Budget Tops All Previous

A record $10.4 million fiscal planning program for 1971-72 was adopted yesterday by Marin Municipal Water District directors.

Approval of the plan, submitted by Gen. Mgr. William R. Seeger, came after a two-hour workshop session during which no changes were made.

Staff members were on hand to answer questions and Seeger explained the fiscal plan make-up to directors.

The program almost doubles last year's $5,673,029 spending plan and provides for $5.3 million in capital work.

The largest part of the capital improvement program money comes from the sale of $4.5 million Series A bonds, authorized by voters in November.

No water rate increase was recommended. Last year, the board approved a 25 per cent hike that went into effect in September.

The water district calls its budget a fiscal plan so money can be transferred from one account to another without prior board approval, according to Seeger.

Marin Municipal Water District board also:

WEDDING — Approved Lake Lagunitas as the site of a wedding Aug. 21 for approximately 40 persons for a $25 fee.

BID — Went out to bid on the Ross Reservoir pipeline in Phoenix Park, estimated to cost $75,000.

CONTRACT — Awarded a contract to Soiland Company of Novato, lowest of five bidders, for $279,020 for the Ross-San Anselmo bond project.

TRUCKS — Approved request to purchase three service truck bodies from Utility Body Company at a cost of $10,887.

Petition To MMWD Gets Cool Response

Marin Municipal Water District directors yesterday questioned the motives of a citizens group petitioning for an ordinance to force the district to submit major expenditures to the voters for approval.

Several directors surmised that the proposed ordinance is only a smokescreen to cover up the group's real goal: To control future population growth in Marin County.

Although the proposed $47.7 million Sonoma-Marin Aqueduct is not mentioned specifically in the ordinance, proposed to provide control, apparently it is the prime reason for the group's action.

Joan Seminario, one of the group's spokesmen, admitted the group had an interest in population control, but insisted the primary concern of the citizens group was to give voters a chance to decide the issue.

Bruce Benedetti, another representative, told the board petitions are being circulated for an ordinance that would require two-thirds voter approval on any contract, lease or joint powers agreement that exceeds the annual income of the district.

The group must gather approximately 15,000 signatures before Aug. 17 to put the proposed ordinance on the ballot.

Presumably, a requirement of two-thirds approval by voters would make it more difficult for the district to fund projects, such as the Sonoma-Marin Aqueduct, which the citizens' group views as a boon to further development and, consequently, higher population in Marin.

Director John M. MacPhail Jr., said, "I feel this ordinance is a smokescreen for the real reasons: Concern about population control in Marin County and the ecological effect of the aqueduct on the Russian River. "But I feel they're important enough to debate on their own merit," he said. "I'm sorry if it sounds like I'm questioning your intentions. We on this board have had our own intentions questioned in this matter also."

MacPhail noted that the five persons behind the citizens group — Benedetti Miss Seminario, Supervisor Peter R. Arrigoni, Harold Gregg and Jack Felson — are known spokesmen for the Conservation League and the Marin Ecology Center.

Repeating the first concern of the group is to allow the people to vote, Miss Seminario said she was a member of the Marin Alternative, "a grass roots political action committee." Benedetti said he was representing himself and not the ecology center.

Another director, Eugene A. Miller, also questioned the group's motives: "Is it whether or not we should bring water in (into Marin) at all that's concerning you?"

"We want a two-thirds vote to protect ourselves," Miss Seminario said. "We feel we're in jeopardy."

She pointed out that a legislative bill concerning one method of financing the aqueduct requires an ad valorem tax and Miller interrupted, "The ad valorem tax is only if revenue doesn't meet the cost."

"Yes. I'm aware of that," Miss Seminario said. "But we're pretty sure revenue is not going to meet the cost. Are you going to tell me you're pretty sure it will?"

"No. I'm not going to tell you that," Miller said.

Director Jordan L. Martinelli Jr. cut in to demand, "Is it not true that your prime concern is control of future population growth in Marin County?"

Miss Seminario denied it once more and said the group participated in using various zoning laws as one method of controlling population.

Rotary Club Gives $7,500 For New Park

The Petaluma Rotary Club has made a gift of $7,500 for equipment at the new LaTercera Park.

Richard W. Schollenberger, director of parks and recreation, said the rotary gift will provide 10 picnic tables and benches, 10 park benches, five double braziers, two horseshoe courts, 25 to 30 trees and shrubs, a drinking fountain, lights, pathways and electrical outlets.

Members of the Petaluma Valley Homeowners Association are setting up committees for construction of the park tentatively set to begin next month.

California Held Losing Its Allure

SAN FRANCISCO (UPI)— The California Poll said today a survey showed California is losing its allure as one of the best places to live.

The Poll said all residents are less inclined to rate the state as one of the best spots to reside but disenchantment is higher among people who have arrived recently.

"Almost half of these newcomers are so 'turned off' by life in California that they would like to move to another state," the Poll said.

The survey disclosed that overcrowding, smog and air pollution in most parts of the state were to blame.

San Francisco, however, still rates high but satisfaction has dropped off somewhat, the Poll disclosed. The Central Valley also continues to rate high with its residents.

"Sharp declines in appeal have occurred in the Los Angeles and San Diego areas," it said.

The survey showed that this year "only about two out of three residents rate California as one of the best places to live."

"Four years ago, when these measurements were begun, almost three out of four Californians said they thought the state was the 'greatest,'" the Poll said.

Safe Loaded With Jewels Is Carted Off

A 100-pound safe containing several thousand dollars worth of jewelry as well as papers and credit cards has been stolen from a Belvedere home, police reported today.

Officers said the safe was removed from the Donald Davis home at 89 West Shore Road sometime between July 2 and Friday by a thief who apparently forced a lock to gain entry.

Missing were 18 pieces of jewelry, total value unknown. Police said one piece alone is worth $2,000 and estimated the loss could go as high as $10,000 or more.

Aquaduct Financing Bill Clears Hurdle

I-J Special Report

SACRAMENTO — The Assembly Water Committee yesterday approved legislation which would enable the Marin Municipal Water District to go to the voters for approval of its share of the Sonoma-Marin Aquaduct costs.

Assemblyman William T. Bagley, R-San Rafael, had tacked amendments on two bills by Assemblyman Frank P. Belotti, R-Eureka, in order to allow an election on the district's share of the $47.7 million aquaduct.

Bagley's amendments were added because the water district had promised at the time of last year's bond election that such an election would be held.

Louisiana is the nation's No. One salt-producing state, accounting for 24 per cent of domestic production, according to the Louisiana Tourist Commission.

Educators Seek Superintendents

NEW YORK (UPI)—The National Program of Education Leadership (NPEL) is searching for successful professionals and executives who would like to become urban school superintendents after a two-year management development program.

"One source of institutional change in education has come from the outside," said Robert Couglan, program coordinator at Northwestern University in Evanston, Ill. "For example, the new math several years ago was developed by mathematicians at MIT, not by professional educators."

Meeting Off

The Old Adobe School District board meeting set for 7:30 p.m. today has been canceled because a quorum would not be available, according to Schools Supt. Dean D. Magowan. The next meeting is scheduled for Aug. 5.

Approval To Annex To Sewer District

Two parcels of land in West Novato will be allowed to annex to the Novato Sanitary District without annexing to the City of Novato.

Marin's local agency formation commission reached that decision last night after considerable discussion on whether the owners should be forced to join the city first.

The properties are a six-acre parcel owned by Summit Building Co. on the north side of Vineyard Road west of Wildhorse Valley Drive and a two and one-half parcel owned by Oliver Mauch and John R. Kristock Jr. at the southeast corner of Vineyard Road and Wildhorse Valley Drive.

The commissioners continued until Aug. 11 another request for annexation to the Novato Sanitary District. R. C. Roberts wants to annex 43 acres at the end of Trumbull Avenue, but the agency formation commissioners put off action to see if the owner will annex first to the City of Novato.

The Local Agency Formation Commission Also:

SEVENTH STREET — Continued until Aug. 11 a request by the City of Novato to annex 35 acres at the corner of San Marin Drive and Seventh Street and asked Executive officer John F. Barrows to notify all owners within the area about the impending annexation to the city.

MILLER AVENUE — Recommended to the Marin County Board of Supervisors that 35 acres of marshland at the end of Miller Avenue, across the railroad tracks from Tamalpais High School, be detached from Almonte Sanitary District because the area is within the City of Mill Valley and already pays city tax.

ALTO STRIP — Asked for an auditor's analysis of the squabble between Richardson Bay Sanitary District and the City of Mill Valley over the 60-acre Alto Strip, from Sabella's to Alto Motel. Mill Valley wants to take over the area and its sanitary facilities because the area now pays double tax. The sanitary district wants $46,630 compensation for the swap, whereas Mill Valley contends it should get money from the sanitary district.

Man Held On Morals Charge

Lawrence K. Visher, 42, of no known address, was indicted Tuesday by the grand jury and arrested yesterday by Marin County sheriff's deputies when he appeared in Placerville, El Dorado County, for a preliminary hearing on a similar charge there.

He was held in Marin County Jail in lieu of $25,000 bail to appear in superior court Monday.

The charge stems from a June 25 incident when Visher allegedly offered a 17-year-old Tamalpais Valley girl a ride home, but instead pulled his car off of Shoreline Highway and forced her at gunpoint to commit an unnatural act.

Activity Fee Subject To Ballot

A bill establishing a student activities fee, subject to student agreement, at Sonoma State College has been approved by the state Assembly subcommittee on higher education.

The bill setting a maximum fee of $15 per semester for athletics and other programs was easily passed and will be sent on to the full education committee for action.

The bill was approved after two amendments were added. One would require an approving vote by the student body before enactment and the other would make the bill effective immediately upon the signature of the governor so funding could be possible for the fall football season.

Students a year ago voted to do away with the fee, complaining they had little voice in how the funds were spent. Athletic programs have since been funded largely by off-campus supporters and other programs such as concerts and lectures have been financed through ticket sales.

Locked Tail Cited In Air Crash Probe

I-J Special Report

OAKLAND — Locked tail controls may have caused the DC-3 crash in Humboldt County June 27 in which 17 persons including a San Rafael man died, according to the Federal Aviation Administration.

FAA investigators said yesterday that they had been told by the pilot of a companion plane that he had put the locks on without telling the DC-3 crew.

The plane, carrying sales representatives from Shelter Cove including Carl Peel, 48, of San Rafael, crashed into a huge rock near the shoreline about 60 miles south of Eureka.

The control pieces, called "down locks" by flyers, are designed to be used while planes are on the ground. They secure the elevators from flapping in the wind and damaging controls but would prevent a plane from becoming airborne after takeoff.

The FAA said the locks apparently were not engaged by the DC-3 crew after it delivered sales representatives to the seaside subdivision for a project tour.

The pilot of a companion plane carrying potential customers landed soon afterwards and connected the locks without telling the other crew. FAA officials were quick to avoid blaming the pilot.

The officials said it "is customary procedure, and it is just as customary for the crew to check and unlock them before takeoff."

Seven persons survived the crash but the FAA said the death of the crew made it impossible to determine if they had removed the locks before the takeoff because the plane has been pulverized by heavy seas.

Bad Check Case To Juvenile Court

The case of Deborah Jean Biesemeier, 20, of Santa Venetia, was transferred yesterday to Marin Juvenile Court.

Miss Biesemeier is accused of a misdemeanor charge of passing a bad check at a San Rafael tavern last May 23.

PUC Joins Protest To Ferry's Route

I-J Special Report

SAN FRANCISCO — The staff of the state Public Utilities Commission yesterday joined in arguments against Harbor Carriers' bid to serve the Tiburon-Angel Island run on its proposed service to Marin from Berkeley.

Harbor Carriers' application to the PUC asked permission to extend its weekend and holiday operation from Tiburon to Berkeley via Angel Island. The company now serves Tiburon commuters and recreational traffic between Tiburon and San Francisco.

The commission's staff, however, agreed that the existing service between Tiburon and Angel Island by Milton McDonogh was adequate and that an additional competing service was not necessary. The only delays on McDonogh's two-vessel service were between 4 and 6 p.m. on Sundays, and then the wait was only 10 to 15 minutes, the PUC staff testified.

The same position was taken by the state Parks and Recreation Department.

The application was taken under submission by the PUC at the close of yesterday's hearing. A spokesman for the PUC said a decision probably would not be issued until after the peak tourist season during which the new service would be scheduled.

Tam Fire Chief Quits; Replacement Selected

Richard K. Oswald, chief of the Tamalpais Fire Department for more than three years, resigned last night and was replaced by William G. Canlett.

Oswald, 39, had been a member of the fire department for eight years. He said he resigned to devote more time to his mechanical repair business and to real estate.

Byron O. Boulware, chairman of the Tamalpais Fire Protection District board, said directors accepted Oswald's resignation last night and appointed Canlett to replace him. Both votes were unanimous, he said.

Canlett, 27, became a volunteer fireman in 1960, was hired part-time in 1966 and full-time in 1969.

His salary will be set by directors at their regular meeting Tuesday. Oswald was earning $1,200 per month as chief.

Guilty Plea To Selling Grass

Tsigelatos is to be sentenced Aug. 4.

He was accused of selling $325 worth of pot to an agent on March 26 and $20 worth on March 29.

High Density Zoning Plan Draws Fire

Proposed high density zoning in the East Petaluma residential district drew opposition last night from the Adobe Community for Improvement of Our Neighborhood.

William C. McGivern, city planning director, showed maps detailing proposed apartment and town house zones near the single family residential area. Pat Furger, steering committee member, said members were concerned that a high rise apartment could be built adjacent to their homes.

Mrs. Furger said McGivern assured the group that adequate buffer zones and landscaping would be required before any apartments are approved. The zoning would permit three-story buildings, but he said he didn't forsee any being built that high.

The organization named Marge Loughran as chairman of a chicken barbecue to be held Aug. 8 at 1 p.m. at McNear park.

Pressed Duck Will Be Imported Again

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Pressed duck from Hong Kong, which disappeared from American grocery shelves in 1968 after the government banned its import, soon will be back.

The Agriculture Department said the Far East Trading Co. of Hong Kong was found to meet U.S. inspection requirements and would soon be exporting the delicacy to this country.

Strike Ends; Creek Flood Work On

Work resumed today on the Corte Madera Creek Flood Control Project as carpenters ended a 2-week-old strike that had halted heavy construction and major projects throughout Northern California.

A new three-year contract was agreed upon by the carpenters and contractors in which a 9.8 per cent increase in wages and fringe benefits will be given the first year.

During the second year, the pact contains a 9.2 per cent increase. An 8.9 per cent hike will take place in the third year.

A union spokesman said the three-year total comes to $2.57 an hour for the 24,000 union carpenters in 46 counties.

Contracts between carpenters and contractors expired June 15. About one week later, carpenters began refusing to report for work.

Harold Hewitt, project manager for the Corte Madera Creek project, said that carpenters were back on the job there this morning.

Work on another major Marin project, a new sewage treatment plant in San Rafael, was expected to resume in a day or two, according to city officials.

Two Cars Stolen In Sausalito

Two vehicles, a convertible and a station wagon, were stolen in Sausalito over the weekend, Sausalito police reported yesterday.

Officers said a white and tan 1952 MG convertible with license number 868 BZQ was stolen from its parking place on Anchor Street between 12:30 and 1:30 a.m. Sunday. It belonged to Thomas C. Fay, of 310 Richardson Street, Sausalito.

The other car, a brown Chevrolet 1965 station wagon, with license RX 43525, belonging to Crystal Castle Enterprises, 777 Bridgeway, Sausalito, was stolen from the company lot between Saturday night and Monday morning, officers said.

Bagley, Not Behr Drops Oil Law Bid

A headline in yesterday's Independent-Journal incorrectly attributed to Sen. Peter H. Behr, R-San Rafael, a bill permitting use of oil and gas depletion allowance money for coastal beaches and parks.

The bill, as the story reported, was introduced by Assemblyman William T. Bagley, R-San Rafael, who announced he was giving up the effort to secure its passage.

Husband Sought In Slaying

A three-state bulletin remained in force today for the estranged husband of a middle-aged Fairfax woman found shot to death yesterday outside her hillside home.

Fairfax police said today they are seeking Edwin Evan Shipe, 49, for questioning in the killing of Barbara P. Shipe at her two-story home at 435 Scenic Road.

The bulletin was issued yesterday to law enforcement officers in California, Oregon and Washington.

The Marin County Coroner's office said today three bullet wounds were found in Mrs. Shipe's body. One bullet entered the woman's head behind the right ear, one in the back of the neck and a third in the back.

Fairfax officers, meanwhile, confirmed reports that a weapon was found at the scene of the murder. Officers would say only that it is a "light caliber weapon" and declined to say whether it was believed to be the murder weapon.

Other unconfirmed reports said the weapon found was a pellet gun — a weapon which projects a missile by air pressure.

Mrs. Shipe was found at 9:40 a.m. yesterday sprawled on the concrete steps leading to her home. Police said Mrs. Shipe's housekeeper, Gina Crane, first discovered the body.

According to Coroner's Investigator Keith C. Craig, the 47-year-old woman was apparently shot the night before and had gone unnoticed until the housekeeper reported for work 12 to 14 hours later.

Officers continued today to comb the well kept residence for evidence.

They described the victim's former husband as white, 175 pounds, six-feet one-inch tall, with gray hair, blue eyes and a moustache.

He is believed driving a blue 1971 Oldsmobile convertible with license number 319-DGT. He may be armed, officers said.

The coroner's office said the couple was married in December 1968 in Fairfax. Mrs. Shipe received a legal separation last December after charging irreconcilable differences.

Her body has been moved to Keaton's Mortuary where funeral arrangements are pending.

She was a native of Hartford, Conn., and had lived in California and Marin County for four years.

She is survived by a sister, Madeline Safford of Hartford.

She was employed at Minneapolis-Honeywell Regular Co. in San Francisco as director of computer education.

Mosquito Abatement Budget Set

The tax rate will remain the same at 2.5 cents per $100 assessed valuation although the tax bite will be steeper because of the higher assessment ratio from 23 to 25 per cent of market value.

The major features of the budget with last year's figures in parentheses include: salaries and benefits, $129,650 ($120,503); services and supplies, $33,085 ($31,045); fixed assets, $17,500 ($20,015).

Included in the budget is $10,000 for the construction of a new $30,000 substation in Petaluma, according to Allan D. Telford, district manager. Telford said the property has been purchased but construction may be blocked if the Petaluma City Council holds to its position of assessing the district $14,000 for sewers.

Telford said the district had planned to use septic tanks until the council imposed the sewer requirements.

The board hired Fernando Reneteria of Petaluma at a salary of $789 per month to replace Norman S. Birse, field mosquito control worker for 12 years for the district. Birse is moving to Montana.

The board passed a motion to appoint a committee to review district policies.

HEATED DEBATE

Tiburon's Annexation Plan: 'A Money Grab'

By JEFF GREER

Proposed annexation of the Strawberry, Eagle Rock and Bel Aire neighborhoods to the City of Tiburon was blasted today as "a money grab" on one hand and defended as the city's logical growth pattern on the other.

Supporting annexation on the KTIM "Sounding Board" program were Tiburon City Councilman Anne L. Ellinwood and longtime Strawberry resident Dorothy Gorman. Opposing the move were Strawberry attorney Stephan H. Kaufmann and Patricia M. Jeremiah, chairman of the Strawberry Anti-Annexation Committee.

Councilman Ellinwood and Mrs. Gorman argued that the areas always were within the city's sphere of interest, and that property owners would benefit directly if the city got the Strawberry shopping center sales tax income that now goes to the county.

Mrs. Jeremiah and Kaufmann argued that homeowners' investments in the Strawberry Recreation District, and local sanitation and fire districts would be jeopardized, police service would decline, and their tax bills would be larger if the city took over.

Kaufmann charged that the proposed annexation would make Tiburon "a strip city." He cited city management remarks favoring dissolution of any special districts in the city boundaries.

"Tiburon is a linear strip — the only way we can achieve community is by incorporation of the whole strip," Councilman Ellinwood argued.

Mrs. Jeremiah declared that Tiburon seeks the $225,000 to $250,000 annual sales tax income from the shopping center for "a tax break" for the older part of the city. She warned that the annexed areas would then have to share the expense of setting up the city police department, and possibly the cost of a substation for the Strawberry area.

In contrast to the county and special districts, "the only service Tiburon can offer us is a very large and high priced staff," Mrs. Jeremiah said.

Mrs. Gorman said the annexation had always "been considered geographically logical." Sales tax from the shopping center only means $1.07 per capita when it is spread throughout the county, but would represent $22 per capita if added to the income of an expanded Tiburon, she said. She also contrasted Tiburon's tax rate of 70 cents per $100 assessed valuation to Mill Valley's $2.93, and warned Mill Valley would seek to annex Strawberry if Tiburon fails.

Kaufmann charged Tiburon with a leaning for high-density residential developments such as Strawberry Cove and Sea Port.

The two sides reported opposite findings among Strawberry merchants as to whether they favored or opposed annexation.

The program moderated by Kitty Oppenheimer will be rebroadcast at 10:05 a.m. Sunday.

Mill Valley Panel Urges Police To Hire Minorities

The Mill Valley Human Rights board, in the middle of an investigation into the hiring practices of the city, last night urged the city council to hire members of minority groups as policemen.

Roger G. Fleischmann said the board unanimously voted to request the city council to require the police department, which currently has no minority members, to engage in a special effort to recruit and hire them.

The investigation also has disclosed there are no minority employees in the fire department. Fleischmann said the board will consider that lack when it meets again Sept. 8.

The board asked the city council to notify it of vacancies on the police department and said it would aid the city in searching for qualified applicants to fill them.

Students Are Climbing Walls (For Credit) At Terra Linda

By MARY BURNS

Anyone driving past Terra Linda High School this summer should be prepared to see students climbing the walls.

They haven't succumbed to the pressures of sociology or advanced trigonometry. They are learning about mountain climbing — the safe way.

The 31-year-old gym teacher got his first taste of mountain climbing while he was a student at Washington State University. However, he really became an enthusiast when he and a friend began climbing Mount Tamalpais regularly.

Four years ago he incorporated mountain climbing into the physical education curriculum at San Rafeael.

Now he has taught about 250 students to climb, using the school's walls as substitute cliffs. The young teacher stresses safety and teamwork in his classes, emphasizing the importance of never climbing alone.

His students take a more difficult step only after they have mastered its prerequisite. Since mountain climbing is a life-and-death affair, the students are made to take responsibility for each other; they learn extensive rescue techniques.

So far Monti has not lost a student to injuries (although one of his present students now wears a sling because he engaged in a little careless horseplay which left him upended with a separated shoulder.)

The students learn the intricacies of the six classes of climbing. The wall's slick surface allows them to experiment with the most difficult class six climb. Students explained that in a class six climb the surface is impossible for the climber to negotiate without a rope and other climbing devices.

Monti believes that there is an increasing interest among youth in noncompetitive sports like climbing. "These kids have found out that football, basketball and track just aren't all they're cracked up to be," he says. Besides, mountain climbing makes room for the nonathlete, he says.

"Successful mountain climbing is not dependent on strength but skill," Monti says. His 100-pound wife, he points out, has climed Mount Shasta.

He helps students develop confidence in themselves and trust in their equipment and fellow climbers through a series of amusing but important games.

For example, one student, wearing proper climbing equipment, may win in a tug of war over two other students equal in size and weight.

"Rock climbing is very good for kids because it brings together nature and ecology, both of which teen-agers are interested in," Monti says.

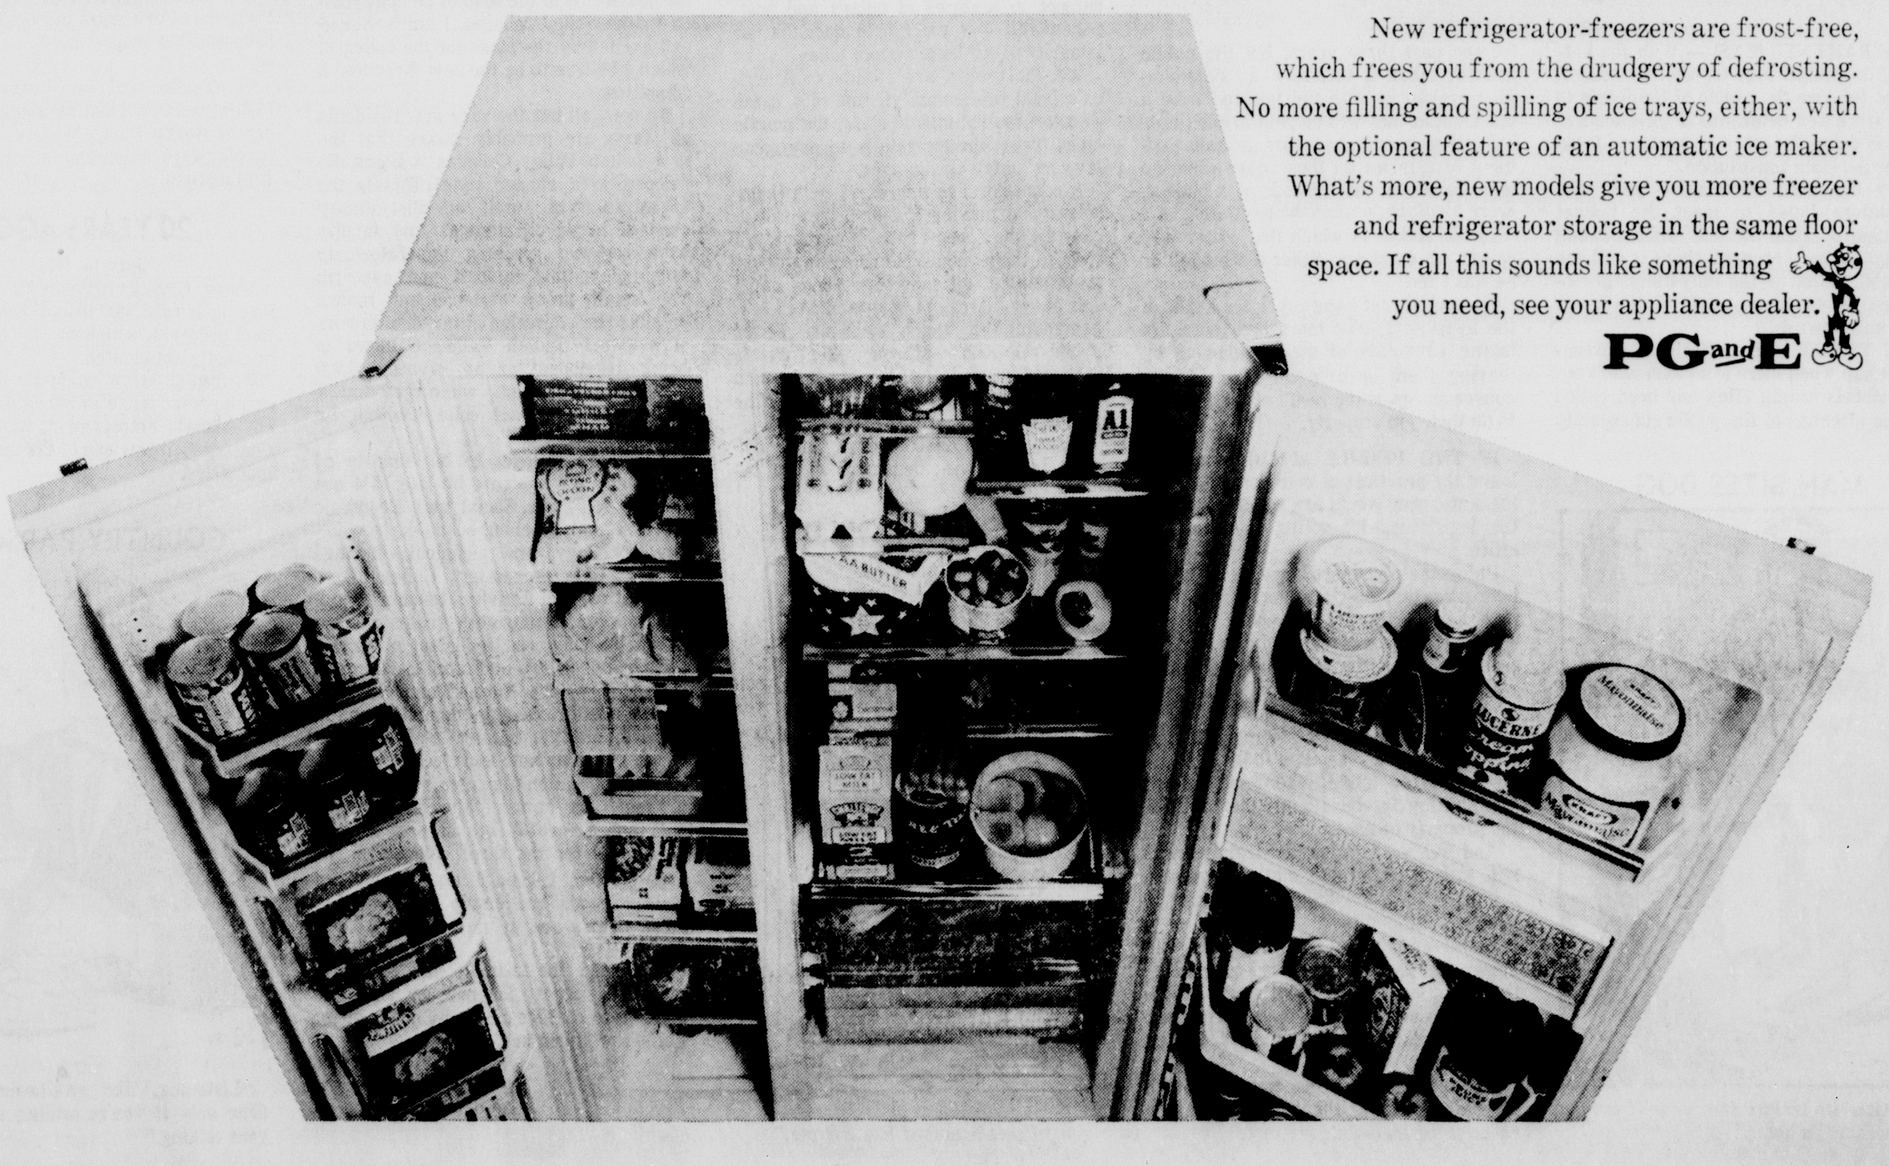
"There seems to be an element of danger that kids like. In rock climbing they have the advantage of the daring and the skill."

The pupils give various reasons for being in the class. One girl admits she is in for course credit. But others say they came because it's fun. They will not be able to substitute the summer physical education class for one in the fall the students say. Still two classes worth are enrolled. Unsurprisingly, many claim to be nature lovers.

Monti will take his students on one filed trip during the summer, up Mount Tamalpais. "They will have a chance to do all the things we've done artificially, but with honest to goodness rock aroung them."

Although mountain climbing sounds death defying, the classes are safe he says. "I wouldn't teach it if I didn't think it were safe. There is a lot of pain and discomfort but I think this is good for the young people. I think young people have had it too soft. I'm not sure one can really know what he's capable of until he's known some stress."

No frost. No fuss.



New refrigerator-freezers are frost-free, which frees you from the drudgery of defrosting. No more filling and spilling of ice trays, either, with the optional feature of an automatic ice maker. What's more, new models give you more freezer and refrigerator storage in the same floor space. If all this sounds like something you need, see your appliance dealer.

Residency Crackdown Recognizes Realities

The San Francisco Board of Supervisors on Monday faced up to reality (in the view of supporters) or turned back the clock (in the view of opponents).

What the San Francisco supervisors did was reinstitute, with some added teeth, an old rule that those who work for the City and County of San Francisco must live in San Francisco.

The rule will apply only to new employees. It will not affect more than 4,000 present San Francisco employees who live elsewhere — more than a fifth of the city's total payroll of some 19,000.

IT WAS THIS proliferation of non-resident employees that caused board president Diane Feinstein to propose the residency rule.

"The taxpayers are concerned that so many of the people whose salaries they pay live and spend that money outside of San Francisco," said Mrs. Feinstein.

San Francisco had such a residency requirement until five years ago, when it was abandoned because it had become largely meaningless through wholesale granting of exceptions. The new rule will permit exceptions only for proved health reasons.

NEITHER MARIN COUNTY nor any of its 11 cities has such a rule. Some of the cities used to — notably San Rafael, where it was written into the charter only to be erased recently in a charter revision. Even the city manager does not live in San Rafael now: City Mgr. James H. McCown resides in Novato, heading a list of many city employees who reside elsewhere.

When the San Francisco supervisors debated Mrs. Feinstein's proposal, a customary objection was raised: It would be discriminatory.

Supervisor Terry Francois had a simple answer to that: "People can live wherever they want. But if they want to work for San Francisco, they can live here as well."

Another objection to a residency rule that is heard often is that it precludes hiring "the best man for the job."

This, however, holds little water. If the best man for the job in San Rafael, for instance, is found in Berkeley, he will be a better man for San Rafael if he moves here to make his home in the city which employes him. And for the vast majority of jobs in public employment, there are plenty of qualified local residents — not a few of whom, nowadays, may be looking for jobs.

MUCH IS HEARD about "home rule." The essence of home rule is government by the people of their own home town (or county, or other jurisdiction). But if the ranks of the bureaucracy are filled with outsiders, home rule is diluted. The elected officials, who must be residents, make policy; but how that policy is carried out is left to non-residents who lack the same interest in the city, since they do not live in it.

We commend the San Francisco Board of Supervisors for facing up to reality. It did not "turn back the clock."

Perhaps it is time for the governing boards of Marin County and its local jurisdictions to face up to the same realities.

Predator And Rodent Control?

One area of government which makes conservationists see red is the predator and rodent control work of the Division of Wildlife Services of the U. S. Interior Department. It spends seven million dollars a year to pay a small army of poisoners to spread bait on vast areas of mostly public lands in the western states.

The recent report of the President's Public Land Law Review Commission was highly critical of the job being done and recommended that predator control work be eliminated or reduced. A quarterly magazine, Defenders of Wildlife

Legislators Should Be Fired For Not Doing Their Jobs

By HENRY C. MacARTHUR

SACRAMENTO (CNS) — With the battle of the budget over for another year, it might behoove the people of California to take stock and determine if their legislature is doing the job it is supposed to do under the state constitution.

For the third consecutive year, the legislature failed to meet the budget deadline of June 30, and while nothing disruptive has occurred, there is still the possibility that if the dilly-dallying continues, the taxpayers could be the losers in a huge lawsuit.

IN THEORY, the wheels of government halt when there is no money to keep the wheels rolling. This has been called to the attention of the public consistently for the past three years, but the public has not taken it seriously, as state employees join in with the fun and take a chance that they will be paid in due time.

Suppose a suit was filed to halt payment of salaries on those days when no legal funds, in the absence of a budget, were availabe to meet the payroll?

In the school in which this writer was raised, an employee either did his job or he was fired.

No such threat hangs over the heads of the legislators, who more and more are taking advantage of their employers by leaving them open to all sorts of dire consequences as the result of their failure to do their job properly.

IF THE PEOPLE of California followed the practices of many employers in the state, they would fire the members of the legislature by voting them out of office.

Unfortunately, there appears to be no indication that any wholesale firing will take place, primarily because of the lack of interest in government by the employing public, and the fact that legislators are practiced in dreaming up excuses as to why they fail to do their job.

To cite another example of laxity, it was nearly five years ago that the legislature started talking about tax reform and shifting the burden off the backs of the property owners.

And five years after, the legislature is still talking about the matter, with the prospects that it will keep on talking in the foreseeable future.

It was anticipated this year, that with knowledge they had acquired concerning the potentially grave fiscal situation, the legislators would move to perform their mandated duties and provide a budget on June 30.

But such was not the case, and with careless abandon, the legislature again endangered the public interest.

Council Position On Pay Hikes Rapped

As a citizen an taxpayer I feel obligated to express my deep concern and disappointment with the lack of realistic involvement on the part of the San Anselmo City Council in questions pertaining to the financial positon of the police and fire departments here.

We have in this city the undeniable privlege of a competent and dedicated force of men in these vital departments, and the complete lack of interest on the part of the council might well jeopardize the continuation of these high standards.

San Anselmo holds the somewhat dubious honor of being the only city within Marin County which has not granted a sorely needed increase in pay and fringe benefits to it's law-enforcement and fire-fighting personnel.

When inquiring about this phenomenon at the July 6, council meeting, I was emphatically informed that the matter was closed, that no further questions would serve a purpose. . .

This, in my opinion, demonstrates not only incompetence, but a severe breach of public confidence.

People Are Victims Of Legal Profession

"The one great principle of the English law is to make business for itself." — Charles Dickens, "Bleak House," 1852.

Being involved in a yet-to-be-settled legal matter — a case pending on the court calendar for over two years and subject to a series of delays and postponements — I can't help question the integrity of our legal system today.

We, the people, are victims of America's legal profession, victims of a game — attorneys vs. middle class, the middle class trying unsuccessfully to overcome lawyers' unfair advantages.

Are lawayers so impressed with themselves and making a dollar, they fail to consider the "people" they represent, fail to keep their clients informed as to case proceedings, fail to return phone calls, and above all, fail to communicate? Is it demanding too much to insure better public relations if attorneys kept clients informed currently vs. feeding them with tranquilizing pills of half-truths? It is the people of America who are being hurt.

What can be done to bring some balance to the one-sided relationship between the American middle class and our lawyers? We need our lawyers, and, in an increasingly complex world, will need them more and more. However, we need them on fairer terms.

It is obvious a better cooperation between judges, attorneys and clients is essential to insure a higher concept of justice in the United States.

Drunken Driving Law Leaves Loophole

I have been interested in the abundance of comment on a recent drunk driving trial in Marin County. Most of the criticism of this case is misplaced because of the law itself. This law requires tests which specify the amount of body alcohol content determining a person to be legally durnk or sober. The accused has the choice of specified tests to determine whether he is sober or not, the results of which will hold up in court either way — guilty or innocent.

If the accused is conscious and refuses to submit to any of these tests the law is useless. The accused cannot be found guilty without this positive proof in court just because someone says he is.

The only way this law will work would be to put some "teeth" in it — such as the immediate pick-up and cancellation of the driver's license upon his refusal to take one of the presently prescribed tests. The cancellation period-of-time should be definite and resonable — possibly eight months for a refusal, with no bumbling variations for individual cases.

I am surprised that with all our legal talent in the California Legislature that they would write an incomplete law of this type. They must have known that no one could be forced to take a test and therefore no convictions would be possible.

Name Suggestions For Colleges Sought

It has been suggested that, if education at the college level ever becomes more relevant, humanistic, joyous and effective, the change will most likely occur first in new instructional forms.

I believe the Marin Community College District has a blueprint (or master plan) for new forms in the soon to be constructed Indian Valley Colleges. I am intrigued and excited by the plans for the colleges, which I believe to be the new direction in education.

By now, all but the very new residents of Marin are probably aware that the new Indian Valley Colleges is being developed in a cluster style. This is the organization of small interdisciplinary clusters in which students and faculty work together, probing the future in areas of mutual interest and concern. The small group arrangement makes possible the education of larger numbers of students (Indian Valley Colleges is being developed for an eventual 5,000 full-time day students) while providing a humane scale in each college within the cluster.

The three colleges to be constructed and ready for students by late 1974 are College A — the Social and Economic Environment, teaching business, psychology, sociology, and technical offerings such as data processing; College B — Man's Creative Activity, teaching English, speech, languages, art-drama-music, philosophy, and technical programs such as upholstery and home economics; College C — the Natural and Physical Environment, teaching chemistry, math, physics, biology, botany, and technical courses such as auto and electro mechanics and recreation management.

Though the names "Miwok", "Pacheco", and "Novato" are currently being considered for the three colleges in the first cluster, I hope I may emphasize through your readership column that these names are by no means fixed at this time.

We would like to invite anyone with a name to suggest for one, or all three colleges to contact me in my office at the College of Marin in Kentfield.

Humphrey Won't Be Candidate But He Supplies The Ideas

WASHINGTON — Just one year away is the bang of the gavel and the end of the search of a leaderless party for the man to guide them out of the wilderness. The Democrats meeting in Miami Beach — no other city with sufficient hotel accommodations was in the least interested — will have to conclude a confused and muddled horse race that has gone on far too long.

None of the half-dozen candidates currently in view can afford to go into all the primaries. By careful selectivity the prospect is that each will come out with a clutch of delegates. Yet before the last gavel sounds at the convention — short of a fratricidal conflict that would make the nomination worthless — the delegates must agree on a candidate.

PROPHECY AT THIS distance is folly. Nevertheless, here is a negative prediction: the nominee will not be Hubert Horatio Humphrey.

He has a great deal of backing, particularly from labor and the blacks. As to the damage done by the disclosures in the Pentagon papers, Humphrey's own feeling is that this has added little to what he suffered in 1968 when he was a captive of the Johnson administration.

He will not formally campaign, although he is speaking widely around the country. He will not enter primaries.

Yet he has no intention of taking himself out of the contest, for that would make him nothing more than a museum piece — the titular leader in a defeat so agonizingly close to being a victory.

BUT IF HE IS NOT to be the nominee he means to have a great deal to say about the final choice and even more about the platform. Humphrey today takes a realistic view of his party's plight. Unless the Democrats come up with a workable alternative, the voters will see no reason to turn Richard Nixon out of office.

It will not be enough to talk about Vietnam. That is being talked into the ground by a raft of candidates. The approach must be on the economy and the vital needs neglected in a dozen different directions. The alternative of an expanded, far-ranging economy is what the Democrats must arrive at.

IT IS THE FAMILIAR Humphrey of the past, spinning off ideas like the sparks from a pinwheel, bent on giving his party a new mission. He joined with Sen. Herman Talmadge, chairman of the agriculture committee, in introducing a bill calling for a farm and rural credit development system. It would set up a new banking system, fueled initially by $2 billion in federal funds over two years to create jobs and community facilities in what Humphrey calls "the great hinterland of America."

He has a plan to revitalize credit for small business and to get financing for minority groups. But this is only a small beginning. Coming back to the Senate after the four-year interval as vice president, he sees, as the new "old boy" in the school without seniority, the flaws that make it impossible for Congress to function as an equal and coordinate branch of government.

Humphrey intends to push for a joint Senate-House security committee capable of taking an over-all view of the whole security picture as the joint economic committee surveys the economy. Security is fragmented today, with armed service, foreign relations and, on the trade side, finance, all having a piece. The result is competition that puts Congress at a disadvantage in relation to a powerful executive with the resources of a $75 billion defense budget and the other pieces of the security system.

He is thinking of a national commission made up of men and women of the greatest capability and stature to examine the whole structure of Congress. Ancient practices dating from the founding of the republic and increasingly built into a patronage system make the institution not only unwieldly but often unworkable. The delays, the blind resistance to change, the downright failures — all these contribute to disillusionment with representative government.

The new "old boy" in the school is not the only Democrat to look realistically at what his party must try to do in the coming year. Chairman Lawrence F. O'Brien says that since 1968 the party has moved from the impossible to the possible. And the probable, as Humphrey knows, is a long way off.

Powerful Japan Plays Unaccustomed Role

By PHIL NEWSOM
UPI Foreign News Analyst

Japan is doing some soul searching.

The special concern is how Japan now should conduct itself as an economic power second only to the United States in the free world. Urgency is given this self analysis by the winding down of the war in Vietnam, the changing U.S. military stance in the Pacific and by dawning Japanese realization that its new wealth places it in a special category with special responsibilities.

U.S. SECRETARY OF DEFENSE Melvin Laird notified the Japanese during his just-completed Tokyo visit that the United States expected them to take over a greater share of the defense of the Far East.

For their part, Japanese businessmen returning from economic discussions in Washington were described as shaken by the image being created abroad of a Japan so relentlessly intent upon its own industrial expansion that it ignores the basic requirements of good neighborliness.

Specifically, they were accused of flooding the United States with cheap goods at a time when American businessmen were having special difficulties arising from a national economic slowdown.

Japan's new foreign minister, Takeo Fukuda, has promised adjustments will be made.

BESIDES ITS OWN hard work, a goodly share of Japan's prosperity traces back to its no-war constitution imposed upon it by the United States after World War II, an example of the folly of attempting to pre-judge history.

Because that constitution forbade Japan any but forces capable of defending the home islands, its military expenditures have been running at less than 1 per cent of its gross national product as compared to nearly 10 per cent for the United States, the Soviet Union and mainland China.

As the United States presses Japan to take over a greater share of the military burden in the Pacific, the Japanese still have to point to the constitution as a reason why they cannot.

A five-year plan beginning in 1972 foresees a total buildup of $16 billion to make Japan the strongest non-Communist military force in Asia.

The program does not include any great buildup of Japan's 260,000 man self-defense force but does aim at a sizeable increase in fire power and in Japan's ability to replenish its own weapons and other material.

Laird is said also to have promised U.S. aid to Japan in modernizing its military forces.

Special attention, it is said, will be paid to a buildup of Japan's naval strength so that it might help fill the gaps left by a U.S. reduction in the strength of its Seventh Fleet and a buildup to full operational strength of its Sixth Fleet in the Mediterranean.

Japan is used to thinking of itself as poor and outside the pressures of a combative world. To think otherwise creates an emotional shock.

REMEMBER WHEN?

10 YEARS AGO

July 15, 1961

A brush and grass fire swept through 150 acres of dry grass in Fort Baker near Sausalito but caused no damage or injury.

Liz Taylor and her husband, Eddie Fisher, were mobbed by autograph seekers in Gorky Park, Moscow, where the couple were attending an international film festival.

20 YEARS AGO

July 15, 1951

Marin County supervisors considered levying a road tax to pay for a $600,000 road program, which was far bigger than originally anticipated.

Wilfred C. Gruit, manager of the state employment office in San Rafael, reported Marin's employment was booming. Construction was one of the most thriving industries.

WORTH SAYING AGAIN

Just as the love of God demands a ritual of observance lest it die, so does love among people demand a ritual of friendship — a ritual of small attentions, services and remembrances, which make one almost say that great love is verily a series of many little attentions. — Dagobert D. Runes.

I-J REPORTER'S NOTEBOOK

By C. P. McCarthy

Nameless Victims Found Dead Give Coroner's Office Problems

One story that didn't make it into the I-J last week was the identification of a body found hanging from a tree near Fairfax a couple of weeks ago.

The story almost did make it.

The body was found by two women strolling on Marin Municipal Water District land near Ridgecrest and Bolinas roads on June 25.

To date, the coroner's office has been unable to identify the man, who wore only a white cotton robe and rubber sandals and was found hanging from a homemade cotton rope.

BUT ONE DAY last week the coroner's office received a letter from the Veteran's Administration in Washington, D. C., saying that fingerprints which had been sent to the Federal Bureau of Investigation had been identified.

The Veteran's Administration provided the name and last known address of the man, who was discharged from the Navy in 1945.

The information was turned over to the I-J, a story written and set in type when someone in the coroner's office recognized the name sent by the Veteran's Administration as being that of a man in a month-old case who had already been identified.

The I-J story was killed before the paper was printed and the coroner's office went back to trying to figure out who the man found near Fairfax was.

The case is one of seven unindentified bodies found in Marin this year. Only one other — that of a man which washed ashore near Fort Baker March 26 — remains unindentified.

MOST BODIES are identified within a few days, either through fingerprints and dental records or calls to the coroner's office from relatives or friends.

Of eight unidentified bodies found last year in Marin, only one remains unidentified. That was the body of a man washed up at Stinson Beach on July 2, 1970.

In 1969, only two unidentified bodies were reported to the coroner's office, but neither has yet been identified. One was the body of a man found hanging Aug. 30 not far from where the body was found last month. The 1969 case had $190 in cash in his possession, but no identification.

The other 1969 case was that of an elderly man whose body was found floating Nov. 27 off Lime Point near the Golden Gate Bridge.

ART BUCHWALD

Pariah At The Press Club: The Man With No Secrets

WASHINGTON — After being away from Washington for 17 days I found the town completely changed. Everywhere I went people were trading secret Pentagon papers to each other.

The first place I stopped was the National Press Club bar. It was jammed with correspondents holding up Xeroxed copies in their hands.

"I'll give you two Henry Cabot Lodge memos for one McNamara position paper," someone yelled.

"I've got a Walt Rostow pre-Tonkin Gulf evaluation I'll trade for a Tet offensive report."

"How about a Joint Chiefs of Staff contingency plan for the invasion of Manchuria?"

I DRANK in embarrassed silence. Finally a New York Times man next to me said, "You don't have any Dean Rusk memos to Maxwell Taylor to complete my collection?"

I replied, "I don't have any papers at all."

"I thought you were a newspaperman," he said.

"I am, but I was out of the country when Daniel Ellsberg was handing out the documents."

He turned away from me with suspicion.

I TAPPED HIM on the shoulder. "You wouldn't let me see one, would you?" I asked.

"I should say not," he said indignantly. "These are classified documents."

I saw a friend of mine from the Washington Post.

"Murray," I said, "I don't know how to put this to you, but I was wondering if I could borrow a stolen Pentagon paper until I get paid — on Thursday."

Murray said, "I'd like to help you, but I need every one I've got. I know the guy from the Boston Globe has some extra McGeorge Bundy cables. Why don't you ask him?"

I WENT DOWN the bar to the Boston Globe man. "Healy," I said, "I'm plumb out of Pentagon papers. Could you spare a couple until I can make contact with a traitor from the Rand Corp.?"

"You know I'd do anything for you," Healy said, "but according to Atty. Gen. John Mitchell, these papers could compromise the government. I would be betraying a trust if I gave them to somebody from the press."

"Healy," I said, "I don't like to beg, but I'm the only guy in town that doesn't have a single stolen document. How can I hold up my head in this profession if I don't have a Pentagon paper to my name?"

Healy replied, "Look, we're dealing with 'top secret' stuff here. I know you wouldn't do anything with the papers, and Murray knows you wouldn't do anything to compromise the country. But does J. Edgar Hoover know it?"

A MAN FROM the Los Angeles Times said, "Does anyone want to trade the CIA's estimate of Madame Nhu for the plans of a military coup in Laos?"

"I'll do it," the bartender said, bringing out some papers from behind the bar.

"You have papers, too?" I asked in surprise.

"Sure," he said. "All my tips for the past month have been in stolen Pentagon papers."

"You wouldn't sell any, would you?"

"Not on your life. These papers were given to me on the condition I would never show them to strangers."

I LEFT THE BAR trying not to hear the taunts of the drinkers.

A Chicago Sun-Times man said, loudly enough for me to hear, "We ought to keep an eye on who comes into this place or our papers will be leaked all over town."

Belvedere Firemen To Hold Beer Bust

The Belvedere Volunteer Fire Department will hold its annual beer bust for the men of the community at 7 p.m. tomorrow at the firehouse.

According to Ray Coleman, President of the volunteers, "this is still a stag affair, despite Women's Lib." He asked men who plan to attend to bring their own mugs.

Snacks will be provided in addition to the brew, he said.

The beer bust traditionally precedes the annual Firemen's Ball, set for the San Francisco Yacht Club in Belvedere Aug. 20.

The Junior counterpart of the event, the root beer bust, will be held during Fire Prevention Week in October for the youngsters of the community.

Hughes Is Not A Candidate

WASHINGTON (UPI) —Sen. Harold E. Hughes, D-Iowa, said today he would not be a candidate for the Democratic presidential nomination next year.

Hughes did not announce support of any of the other prospective Democratic presidential candidates.

"I will watch with keen interest the development of the issues by all of the candidates in the field, and will lend my support to that candidate who is most forthright on the issues and most capable of carrying them out when he becomes our national leader," Hughes said at a news conference.

NO SUPPORT

Hughes was among the first to indicate an interest in the Democratic presidential nomination and has made numerous appearances checking on public sentiment. So far, only Sen. George McGovern, D-S.D., has formally announced his candidacy for the nomination a year from now at the party's convention in Miami Beach.

Hughes said he had planned to make his final decision late this year, but discovered already that he was unable to get the support he felt was needed.

"I am now convinced that my greatest value to my country and to my state is to pursue the goals to which I am committed as a United States senator, unimpeded by the label of presidential candidate," he said.

"Therefore, after months of thoughtful consideration, I have decided not to enter the lists as a candidate for my party's presidential nomination, and this decision is clearcut and irrevocable."

Hughes said he had suffered "considerable frustration during the past year" in trying to deal with the nation's drug problem and other social ills with which he was concerned.

"My legislative efforts have been hampered, and my public statements have been discounted by imputation of presidential motives."

He added, "My decision does not indicate any degree of retirement from the national political scene. If anything, I will be more active than before in speaking out on the issues."

RELIGIOUS BELIEFS

A news story which may have been a factor in Hughes' decision to announce now as a noncandidate appeared in a Des Moines newspaper Sunday. The story told of Hughes' religious beliefs, which included attempting to communicate with his dead brother through a spiritual medium.

A staff aide said Wednesday that Hughes told the authors of the story: "If these (beliefs) are a block to me becoming President, then so be it."

"There is no way I can come out of this without being damned," Hughes was quoted as saying.

Hughes, 49, a recovered alcoholic, is in his freshman year as a senator. A former truck driver, he served three two-year terms as Iowa governor and was elected to the Senate in 1968 by only 6,400 votes out of more than one million cast.

The unofficial Hughes presidential campaign had been known to be floundering for several weeks. There was even a report of one stormy session by his strategists concerning which course the campaign ought to take.

One of Hughes' chief problems in seeking the nomination has been finances. He has had to compete for political contributions with more than half a dozen other potential candidates.

$1.05 Million Asked In Razor Blade Ad Suit

SAN FRANCISCO (UPI)—A $1,050,000 damage suit was filed Wednesday on behalf of a two-year-old boy allegedly cut by a razor blade contained in a controversial newspaper advertisement.

Attorney John L. Brennan of San Francisco brought the Superior Court suit on behalf of Morgan Deegan, who lives with his grandmother in Los Angeles. The suit said the child suffered severe cuts and wounds of the head and face as well as shock.

Defendants were the Los Angeles Times, Philip Morris Inc., and the American Safety Razor Co.

The suit, which asked for $50,000 actual damages and $1 million punitive damages, said the ad, run as an insert in the Times and other newspapers, was likely to "produce severe cuts and injuries."

SACRAMENTO ROUNDUP

Environmental Plan Passes Test

SACRAMENTO (UPI) —An omnibus bill designed to protect California from overdevelopment and give citizens the right to sue for preservation of the environment has been approved by the Assembly Ways and Means Committee.

The measure by Assemblyman Edwin L. Z'Berg, D-Sacramento, is far more comprehensive than a Reagan administration proposal sent to the legislature earlier in the week.

The Ways and Means Committee Wednesday —on a split voice vote —approved the Z'berg bill and send it to the floor.

Z'berg, Democratic chairman of the Assembly Natural Resources Committee, told the committee the bill was vital to help cope "with what absolutely is a crisis we're facing in California and nationwide."

Reagan's plan, which goes into effect unless rejected by the legislature, creates a new "Environment and Resources Agency" to incorporate the duties of the State Water Resources Control Board and the Air Resources Board along with agencies which deal with solid waste.

Z'berg's measure establishes a seven-member state environmental quality board appointed by the governor at a $32,500 annual salary to adopt a comprehensive plan by 1975 for "the orderly, long-range conservation and development of California's natural resources."

The measure would take effect in July 1972. In the meantime, an interim panel of state officials would be established to estimate costs and develop initial planning for the reorganization.

Members of the board must be proven experts in environmental management representing areas of resources conservation, ecology, air, noise and water pollution, waste management and wildlife protection.

The measure also creates eight regional environmental quality boards representing the north coast, San Francisco Bay, the central coast, south coast, San Diego, Sacramento Valley, San Joaquin Valley and the Colorado desert.

The governor would appoint the five-member regional boards. Members would need the same qualifications as those on the stateboards but the salaries would be $27,500 a year.

The state board will take over the duties and powers of the existing office of Planning and Research, State Water Resources Control Board, State air Resources Board and all the regional air pollution control districts.

The regional boards are required to adopt by Jan. 1, 1976, plans for conservation and development in their areas. The regional plans are to conform to the state plan and must be approved by the state board.

Cities and counties would be required by the Z'berg measure to adopt by 1977 local plans for conservation and development. The local plans require the approval of the regional boards.

Private individuals also would be authorized by the measure to sue in cases where natural resources are in danger of being impaired, polluted or destroyed.

EDUCATION

SACRAMENTO (UPI)—Gov. Ronald Reagan has made public summary results of his task force investigation aimed at assisting local school boards evaluate management practices in their school districts.

The governor released the summary Wednesday of the group's findings which concluded that only school board members "can ask the questions and act upon the answers."

The detailed report will be sold for $1 each next month.

The summary made no recommendations for action at the state level but did pose a series of questions about how to deal with teachers at contract time and how to improve purchasing practices. It suggested ways to get more use from school plants such as switching to a year-round operation.

The task force was appointed by Reagan last year and told to meet with both state and private auditors "to observe what was really going on in a representative sample of our local schools." The issue of curriculum was not dealt with.

On certain educational policy issues, the governor had said he would await the task force's report before making up his mind. He recently vetoed $100 million from the state budget for schools, saying there was no proof that the extra money was justified.

In a note to school board members, he said, "You can ask the hard questions of our managers and administrators and you can so inform yourself that you will know if their answers are correct."

"We can give you the questions and suggest possible ways of obtaining answers," the governor said. "But the rest is up to you."

On teacher tenure, the task force said current law gives the equivalent to "instant tenure," a situation creating a "haven for those few teachers who should not be permitted in the classroom."

The summary said state and local district rules should be "changed to give you more flexibility in this area" but observed "teachers themselves are in the best position to offer solutions. Let us hope they will recognize their responsibility and opportunity to do so."

COURT PLAN

SACRAMENTO (UPI) — A package of four measures abolishing the municipal courts and incorporating all their functions within a single, state-administered superior court system has cleared the Assembly Ways and Means Committee.

On voice votes Wednesday, the three bills and proposed constitutional amendment by Assemblymen James A. Hayes, R-Long Beach, were sent to the floor.

The measures would fund the state takeover of the courts through a one-cent-per-gallon increase in the state tax on gasoline. The present state tax is seven cents a gallon.

The plan would eliminate the municipal courts and turn all functions over to the superior courts. Municipal judges would be elevated to the superior court. Nonlawyer judges would be phased out gradually. The title of justice would be changed to magistrate.

All present court employes would be guaranteed jobs under the new system.

The proposal would create the Office of State Marshal. The marshal would have deputies who would serve as bailiffs in the courts.

Under present law, deputy marshals are bailiffs in the municipal courts and deputy sheriffs handle the superior courts.

The court revision would take effect in January 1973. The courts last were reformed in 1950.

Under the Hayes plan, each county would retain courts but they would be under the jurisdiction of the state Judicial Council.

'CAN' BILL

SACRAMENTO (UPI) —The Senate Health and Welfare Committee Wednesday defeated the legislature's last surviving bill to "ban the can."

The committee rejected a measure by Sen. John A. Nejedly, R-Walnut Creek, which proposed banning the sale of beverages in a container unless it was biodegradable or it carried a five-cent deposit.

Nejedly said the mesure would provide a "sensible way" to raise funds with which to establish a solid waste collection system. But representatives of the California Manufacturers Association said it would cost $90 million to regear equipment to make returnable containers.

Other socalled "ban the can" bills have been killed both in the Assembly and by the Senate Finance Committee.

TAX BACKED

SACRAMENTO, Calif. (UPI) —A legislative committee Wednesday approved a bill increasing the cigarette tax to finance an estimated $92 million annually in cancer and other medical research.

The measure by Sen. Alan Short, D-Stockton, would boost the tax from 10 to 15 cents a package. It was approved on a split voice vote by the Senate Revenue and Taxation Committee and sent to the Finance Committee.

Short, who said his mother, father and older brother died from cancer, predicted "the best research program not only in this country but in the world" will be created by his legislation.

But Sen. James Q. Wedworth, D-Hawthorne, complained that cures for such diseases as cancer should be a national and not only a state undertaking.

HOW TO KEEP WELL

By DR. THEODORE R. VAN DELLEN

People Can Die Suddenly After Strong Emotional Experience

Can a person die suddenly from fear, rage, grief or joy? The possibility exists, in that many people have collapsed following a strong emotional experience. Was it coincidence or did a hidden heart condition or hardened cerebral arteries give way in response to psychological stress? In other words, was the fit of emotion the straw that broke the camel's back? We do not refer to voodoo deaths.

Dr. George L. Engle of Rochester, N. Y., investigated the circumstances preceding the sudden death of 170 individuals. There were more men than women and as a group, 59 per cent of the males were under 61 years of age as compared with 25 per cent of the females. All died after intense emotional excitation and an inability to cope with the situation.

FORTY-SIX succumbed suddenly in a setting of personal danger or threat of injury, real or symbolic. In this group, many were actually "scared to death" during a storm, earthquake, explosion, riot or shipwreck. One was a 63-year-old security guard who died during a robbery. Three fatalities were ascribed to gory scenes on television.

The next most common group included 36 persons who died when informed of the collapse or death of a close relative or friend. Two were teen-agers, one dropped dead when told of her 17-year-old brother's death. And 35 died during a period of acute grief. Included was the 27-year-old Army captain who commanded the ceremonial troops at the funeral of President Kennedy. He died of a heart attack 10 days later.

SUDDEN DEATH also occurred to 16 persons during times when they were concerned about the illness or injury of a person close to them. A 40-year-old father slumped over the head of his injured son lying in the street. Ten persons died on losing their self-esteem or status. (They lost their jobs or a promotion, or were convicted of bribery or fraud). Eleven died suddenly after the danger was over and 10 others at times of triump or success. One was an ex-convict who collapsed on returning home after serving a 15-year prison term.

Questions on medical topics will be answered by mail if stamped, self-addressed envelope accompanies request to the Independent-Journal.)

CAN'T CATNAP

E. H. writes: Almost everyone I know can lie down for an hour or so when the opportunity arises and awaken refreshed. But if I nap in the afternoon or early evening, when I awaken I feel drugged and can't wake up for 2 or 3 hours. I have tried cold water on my face and a walk around the block but remain in a daze until the feeling wears off. Is there anything I can do or take for this condition.

REPLY

Sleep habits vary. Perhaps, at these times you were more tired than you realized and an afternoon nap was not long enough to refresh you. The lethargy is more likely to occur when a nap is taken after a heavy meal or in a room that is too warm.

BAGGY EYELIDS

Mrs. L. A. writes: Outside of too little sleep, what would cause heavy eyelids?

REPLY

A deficiency of thyroid, kidney disease, too much fluid in the tissues, dissipation and fat pads in the lids. Drooping of the upper lids may stem from one of many neurological disorders. The defect may be on a congenital basis.

CURL IS GONE

Mrs. L. s. writes: Why did my curly hair become straight after I had a baby?

REPLY

This occurs occasionally but we do not know the cause.

Today's Health Hint — Serious injuries of any type are best handled by the physician.

11 Automobile Fires Within Three Hours

LOS ANGELES (UPI)—Four autos were destroyed and seven damaged early today in a series of fires in the downtown and south central districts of Los Angeles.

Police said two of the 11 fires were believed to be unrelated, but all occurred within a three-hour period in close proximity. One car was set afire after it was stolen and one was torched in a gangland reprisal. All were parked cars and there were no reported injuries.

Coast Development Bill Clears Panel

SACRAMENTO (UPI) —The Assembly Ways and Means Committee yesterday approved legislation designed to regulate development of the California coastline and protect the public's access to beaches.

It establishes a system of regional and state agencies to control coastline development until 1975 when a master plan for overall future development of the coastline is to be prepared.

The bill creates a coastal conservation commission comprised of two members appointed by the governor, two by the speaker of the Assembly and two by the Senate Rules Committee.

The commission also would have representatives of the six regional agencies.

The regional body's membership would include six representatives of the cities and counties and the remaining six would be appointed by the governor, the Assembly speaker and the Senate Rules Committee.

"The coastline doesn't belong only to the people who happen to control the coast," said Sieroty. "The coastline belongs to all the people."

He noted that local government in some areas, like Sonoma County, approved projects which could harm the coastline or restrict public access.

He said the Sonoma County supervisors had approved construction of a nuclear reactor on the coast but it was later rejected because of possible earthquake danger.

Further up the coast, said Sieroty, a tract of private homes has been built which provides no public access to beaches along its entire length.

"The public has no access to the California coast for 10 miles," said Sieroty.

But Assemblyman Frank Belotti, R-Eureka, whose district includes the area, accused Sieroty of establishing "a dynasty—a dictator" by creation of the regional boards.

Land Price Remains Unsettled

Tamalpais Community Services District directors have decided to renegotiate the price tag on the 5.13 acre Eastwood property, now owned by the Mill Valley School District.

The two groups previously had agreed upon a purchase price of $66,500 for the land at Eastwood Way and Glenwood Avenue, but GXX had not agreed upon future use of the land.

This week school district trustees turned down a resolution to sell the land because a deed restriction clause that would limit use of the land to only park and recreation was not included.

The community services board Tuesday night said it will not buy the parcel $66,500 — with the restrictive clause, according to Glenn Lambacher, board chairman.

He said the price had been a compromise between two appraisers' figures which were based on a high-use development of the land, such as a townhouse or single-family development.

"If they insist on the deed restriction, we'll have to get more appraisals based on a park-only use of the land. When we renegotiate, I'm sure the figure will be considerably lower," Lambacher said.

Another difficulty is the Tamalpais district's application to the Department of Housing and Urban Development (HUD) for a $37,000 grant to purchase the property.

Lambacher said the district has received authorization to proceed with the purchase from HUD without endangering its chances for the grant, but approval of the grant is still uncertain.

If HUD approves the grant, a restricting clause limiting of the land to park and recreation will be mandatory and the district will purchase the tract at the $66,500 price, Lambacher said.

The Tamalpais CSD board also:

PARK NAME — Considered a recommendation to name 11.5 acres of land recently donated to the district by the Tamalpais Improvement Club Rhubarb Park. Directors postponed a decision until public comment could be obtained. The name was suggested because the improvement club purchased the land through sponsoring its annual Rhubarb Review.

PARK DEVELOPMENT — Set a special session for 7:30 p.m. next Wednesday to hear the design proposal for a three-acre open space tract in Marinview Unit No. 1. The developer, Allan Marin, members of the parks and recreation commission and an interested citizens' group, have been meeting to find an agreeable design for the land, between Tamalpais Valley Elementary School and Carrera Drive.

BUDGET — Adjourned to 7 p.m. next Thursday to discuss its budget and set sewer service charges.

300 Ready For Jobs In Marin

The Marin Career Education Program has 300 trained young people for whom it is seeking jobs.

In a letter to chamber of commerce members throughout the county, Virgil S. Hollis, county schools superintendent, and Ernest M. Lynch, director of vocational education, report: "The Marin Career Education Program has completed the 1970-71 school year wherein over 100 students received certificates of proficiency in seven separate occupational areas. An additional 200 attained skills that make them employable at many entry level jobs."

The letter asks chamber of commerce members to consider filling future employment openings with these young people.

Specialties taught in the career education program included general auto repair, auto brake and wheel alignment, food services, marine environmental technology, plastics technology, welding technology, and a variety of office occupations.

Actor Cuts Hand During Oakland Filming

OAKLAND (UPI) —Actor Donald Sutherland and a bewigged Jane Fonda made the rounds of Oakland hospitals Wednesday trying to obtain treatment for lacerations on his hand.

Sutherland, 35, and Miss Fonda were in town shooting the movie "Steel Yard Blues" when the actor cut his hand while tossing coffee into a rough-edged garbage can in one scene. The gashes required 14 stitches.

The two performers first went to Peralta Hospital. Officials sent them to Highland Hospital because Peralta has no emergency service. At Highland, Sutherland asked for plastic surgery and was referred to Merritt Hospital.

By the time he got to Merritt, Sutherland had remembered a friend who was a surgeon at Kaiser Foundation Hospital. He declined service at Merritt and drove to Kaiser where he was finally treated. Doctors decided he didn't need plastic surgery.

Composing Error

Due to an error in the composing room, yesterday's Independent-Journal indicated that a box in the cornerstore of the old Marin County Courthouse was planted in 1982. Actually the box was put in place in 1872 and is to be opened at next Tuesday's meeting of the Board of Supervisors.

Robinson Files For Dissolution

He and his wife, Mary Jane, were married June 15, 1969, and separated last June 29, according to a petition filed in superior court.

They have a 1-year-old son, Rodric L. Robinson Jr. and lived at 24 Via San Fernando, Tiburon.

Rboinson served on the Mill Valley City Council from 1966 until moving to Tiburon in 1969.

He was arrested July 4 in Sausalito and charged with being drunk in public and resisting arrest. He has pleaded innocent to the charges and a pretrial conference has been set in Municipal Court for Aug. 4.

Farm Bureau Fights Against Cost Of Trials

The Marin County Farm Bureau has stepped up its drive to have the state lift the cost of major trials, such as the Angela Davis trial, off the back of county taxpayers.

Directors have submitted a resolution to the tax committee of the California Farm Bureau, have sought support from individual county farm bureaus and have appealed to legislators, reported Alfred L. Poncia.

Directors agreed Tuesday night to continue efforts to gain support of other organizations thoughout Marin, Poncia said.

Kentucky Man Tells How He Helps Shrink Painful Swelling Of Hemorrhoidal Tissues

...caused by inflammation and infection.

Adolphus, Ky.—Mr. Arlis Harmon of Adolphus reports: "I tried various remedies. Then a friend suggested Preparation H. The very first applications showed marked improvement."

(Note: Doctors' tests have proved Preparation H actually helps shrink swelling of hemorrhoidal tissues caused by inflammation. It's so effective that in many cases the first applications give prompt, temporary relief from pain and itching in such tissues. There's no other formula like doctor-tested Preparation H. TORNADO'S WAKE —

Rescuers searched through the debris yesterday where three persons were killed when a tornado ripped apart the Dunn Mobile Homes Court near Deslodge, Mo., south of St. Louis. The twister wrecked all 15 trailers in the court and injured 19 persons. (UPI Telephoto)

Three Persons Die In Missouri Tornado

By U.P. INTERNATIONAL

High winds and tornadoes lashed portions of the Midwest during the night, killing at least three persons and injuring 23 others, five critically.

High winds swept through two trailer courts on the outskirts of Desloge, Mo., about 60 miles south of St. Louis, ripping trailers from their foundations and leaving only a mass of wreckage. Some trailers were hurled 150 feet into a wooded area. Authorities said 17 trailers were demolished or severely damaged.

Police said three persons, two of them children, died in the storm and that 23 others were injured, five critically.

A tornado touched down near St. Paul, Minn., but there were no reports of damage or injury.

The National Weather Service said today that most of the violent weather had dissipated, though heavy thunderstorms continued from the Missouri bootheel through southern Illinois and into western Kentucky.

The south simmered under a heat wave Wednesday as temperatures soared into the 90s and at some places over the 100 mark.

The mercury approached the 120 degree mark in portions of the southwest and Las Vegas, Nev., recorded its hottest day of the year with a 113 degree reading, one degree off the record for the date.

A drought continued in Michigan and Gov. William G. Milliken has asked U.S. Agriculture Secretary Clifford Hardin to declare three Michigan counties disaster areas because of the lack of rain. Last week, Milliken asked that eight other counties in southwestern Michigan be declared disaster areas because of drought.

Antiwar Group To Hold Reception

Support Our Soldiers, a Bay Area group backing GIs opposed to the Southeast Asia war, will hold a fund-raising reception at 375 Tennessee Avenue, Mill Valley, from 3:30 to 7 p.m. July 24.

Manson: 'I Cut His Head Off'

LOS ANGELES (UPI) — Charles Manson, already sentenced to death for the seven Tate-La Bianca murders, tried to plead guilty to two more slayings Wednesday, saying of one of the victims, "I'll admit I chopped his head off."

The cult leader's request and subsequent remarks threw his second murder trial into chaos —just as his actions in the Tate-La Bianca case.

"Your honor," Manson asked Superior Court Judge Raymond Choate. "Could I plead guilty? Could we change the plea?

"I'll admit I chopped his head off. We could go one step further. We could say I was disappointed because I didn't chop my own off."

Manson then tried to fire his attorney, Irving Kanarek, and requested once again that he be allowed to represent himself "with what small mind I have."

But Manson's requests to change his plea and fire Kanarek were denied and at the end of the tangled court session he ended up with two lawyers — Kanarek and Howard Beckler.

The surprise development interrupted a tedious day of jury selection, which was resuming today following further sessions between the judge, Kanarek and Beckler.

Organic Foods— Health, Hokum?

By JEANNE LESEM
UPI Food Editor

NEW YORK (UPI) —Organic foods are demonstrably good for the ecology.

They're grown without chemicals that can pollute the nation's waters or be carried by winds to contaminate crops, grazing land and the air we breathe.

The compost that fertilizes them recycles barnyard manure, dead leaves and grass, even garbage.

But controversy continues on the questions of flavor and health benefits to consumers, while retail outlets proliferate so fast that their trade organization can't keep count.

Mi"n Okin of the National Nutritional Foods Assn. estimates that the number of "health food" outlets in the United States has doubled during the past three or four years.

Okin, whose group represents manufacturers, wholesalers and retailers, added that there's so much growth activity it's difficult to supply the market.

In New York alone, shops with such suggestive names as Food Liberation, Nature's Children and Mother Nature's Nutrition Centers are popping up like crabgrass in spring.

Los Angeles, long a mecca for health food fanatics, had 74 health food stores in 1966. By the second quarter of 1971, the number was up to 96. An estimated 25 organic restaurants are reported flourishing there, from the flatlands below Hollywood to the winding foothills of the Santa Monina Mountains. Mountains.

Law prohibits health food store owners from advertising medical claims for food. For years, the U.S. Food and Drug Administration (FDA) has cracked down hard on individuals and companies that do so.

J. William Boehne, acting assistant director of the FDA's nutrition division, told UPI there's no way of distinguishing between foods grown with or without chemicals—unless you happen to find a pesticide residue during a laboratory test.

Boehne added that FDA food inspectors often shop at retail stores and test their puchases for contamination, salmonella bacteria and pesticide residues.

Still, the official stand backed up by laboratory findings does not prevent some retailers from suggesting that their merchandise has better flavor and health-giving properties than commercial products.

Irving Fields, a retailer in Coconut Grove, Fla., told UPI:

"The city of Miami is engulfed in them (organic food stores) now and they're all doing well because people are beginning to realize the dangers that are present in some of the chemicals and emulsifiers and hormones and preservatives that go into the foods they buy at big volume supermarkets.

"Sure, they look good. The meats are a rich red because the animals have been hyped up with hormones so they can be slaughtered and rushed to the market. But what kind of nutritional value do you get out of them? Not very much."

Claims of superior nutritional value are refuted by both Dr. Bernard S. Schweigert, chairman of the Department of Food Science and Technology at the University of California, and by Dr. Charles Glen King, professor emeritus and special lecturer at Columbia University's Institute of Human Nutrition.

It wad Dr. King and graduate students at the University of Pittsburgh who isolated Vitamin C nearly 40 years ago. A nutritionist and biochemist, Dr. King sees potential danger in self-dosage of vitamin and mineral supplements, which are widely distributed by health food stores as well as pharmacies. Excessive amounts can be just as dangerous as excessive amounts of food, he said. For example, too much Vitamin C can increase the risk of deposits that form kidney and bladder stones and excesses of Vitamin D are damaging to bone structures.

What about flavor? A Los Angeles wholesaler suggested that claims of superior taste for organic produce can be related to ripeness. He said health food store dates are apt to taste sweeter than nonorganic ones because the former are sold at a riper stage. Being riper, more of their carbohydrates have been converted to sugar.

The same theory can be applied to fresh-picked, plant or tree-ripened produce, compared with unripened produce that has been shipped hundreds of miles from the field or orchard where it was grown. A lot of fresh food sold as organic falls into this category. Organic or not, it will be tastier due to more natural ripening.

More serious than flavor loss is vitamin loss that can occur when fresh produce is shipped under even ideal conditions, which include refrigeration and icing. A canning industry representative said at a New York seminar that Vitamin C loss ran as high as 50 per cent for fresh asparagus stored seven days at 32 degrees, the temperature at which water freezes. Loss of thiamin and riboflavin was 18 and 14 per cent respectively, for the same vegetable stored under the same conditions.

These statistics came from Ira I. Somers, research director of the National Canners Assn., Washington, D.C. He added that storage temperature also is significant in vitamin retention in frozen foods. For instance zero degrees or lower results in "negligible vitamin loss over several months of storage," but at 16 degrees Fahrenheit, the Vitamin C loss after six months storage of some vegetables exceeds 50 per cent. Additional Vitamin C loss occurs during home heating when food is prepared for service.

This reporter bought some health food store products to compare with commercial ones. Unsalted butter at $1.60 a pound tasted no better than a comparable product selling for less than $1.00 a pound at a local supermarket. Eggs labeled "organic" ($1.19 a dozen) failed the freshness test. When broken out, much of the white was thin and spread out.

A 10-ounce bag labeled spinach neither looked nor tasted like true spinach, or spinacea oleracea. It was in fact Tetragonia expansa, a plant popularly called New Zealand spinach that is preferred by health food advocates because it's said to have lower oxalic acid content than the common garden variety. It cost 79 cents for a 10-ounce package when loose spinach was selling for 23 cents for a full pound at nearby markets.

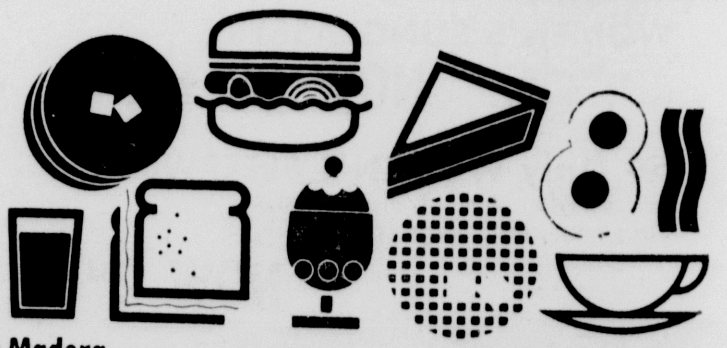
A SUBTLE DIFFERENCE — Experts say that organically grown produce is difficult to distinguish from produce grown with chemical or other aids. Meanwhile, "health food" distributors tout 'superior taste' because of a more natural ripening. Fresh asparagus such as that in the typically summertime dish shown above can lose as much as 50 per cent of its Vitamin C within a week, according to a canning industry spokesman, in reply to the 'riper' argument.



Organic Foods — Health, Hokum?

Our personal market basket study only hinted at the price spread between claimed organic products and regular supermarket foods. But checks by UPI reporters across the country showed price differentials ranging from "a little bit higher" in Madison, Wis., to about 50 per cent higher in a Chicago supermarket that added an organic foods department recently.

Essentially, it is the smaller per acre yield and the freshness of the organic products —fast shipping, short storage time —that contribute to the higher cost. As for its "organic" nature this must be largely accepted on faith —few buyers have FDA-type testing equipment handy.

Until the past few years, most customers for health foods of the type currently enjoying an unprecedented boom in the United States were elderly, conservative and often suffering from ailments or infirmities they thought could be treated with special foods and dietary supplements.

But today thousands of young people are insisting on natural, or organic, foods. It is a natural outgrowth of the present stress on ecology and the damage modern man is doing to his environment.

Said Mrs. Ceil Sundock, co-owner of a Birmingham store: "In the past two years we've seen more young people than ever before. They tell us they are turning off drugs and on to health foods."

Retailer Mario De Lisio, Boise, Idaho, sees health food stores as a new kind of social institution, one that is narrowing the generation gap by attracting youngsters as well as older customers. Retailers in such widespread cities as Dallas, Chicago, Topeka, Spokane, Omaha, Madison and Miami agreed.

An Omaha dealer said the customer type most notably absent was the middle-aged one. He said three-fourths of his customers were young people, although many of them were bringing in their parents "to be educated in health products."

Parelleling the boom in health foods is a demand for cookbooks telling how to prepare them. New ones include "The Interior Ecology Cookbook" by Shirley Ross, a former cook at a Los Angeles restaurant.

Miss Ross' book (published by Straight Arrow Books, San Francisco) differs from most of the genre in that it calls for few special ingredients such as brewer's yeast, soy flour and granular lecithin.

In an interview, Miss Ross said she chose readily available supermarket ingredients because that's what most people can buy easily. She criticized many health food retailers for hard-sell tactics and high prices.

Miss Ross, 30, said she takes vitamin supplements herself because she feels they help "if you have to eat old vegetables," but, she emphasized, "you have to eat a balanced meal for vitamins to help."

Graduate nutritionists agree. Perhaps the most outspoken among them is Adelle Davis, an articulate California grandmother, biochemist and author who has been called "the high priestess of health foods." Total sales of Mrs. Davis' four books are about two million in hardcover alone, according to her publisher, Harcourt Brace Jovanovich. One, which is in its 35th printing, rose to the best-seller list shortly after its paperback edition was released.

Cities May Be Doomed — Mayor

BOSTON (UPI)—Kevin Hagen White, at the age of 41, is still, in his own words, "almost an incurable optimist." But he feels America's urban centers are doomed.

After three-and-a-half frustrating years as mayor of one of the nation's major cities, he can still look out the picture window of his plush City Hall office and see a rotting waterfront. And there's a spiraling tax rate. And high welfare. And high unemployment.

Why are the cities doomed? Not because the world's richest nation lacks the know-how or the money, but because—White is convinced—Americans are unwilling to pay the price to save them.

"I'm not sure we haven't passed that point already. And that's a hell of a thing for a mayor to say," he said.

White sees the country's bustling metropolitan areas from coast to coast decaying so fast they eventually will become sprawling ghost towns as city dwellers flee to the suburbs and beyond to the countryside.

But not before some erupt into new racial violence.

"You know, I'm hoping that a president will get elected or something will happen that will wake everybody up," he said.

"Even if you're a drowning man you don't believe you're going to drown. It's just you don't believe it. And you don't, if you're a mayor, accept the fact that your city is going to die. I'm no Cassandra. I'm almost an incurable optimist.

"But the fact of the matter is I don't see any chance for it to survive. I don't see it coming back. I don't see anything happening to it. I really don't. I mean that sincerely."

"And I think by the time the American people wake up it will be too late."

In 1967, when White won election to a first term, he was one of a handful of liberal mayors bent, he says, on breathing new life into the cities, to rebuilding the slums and improving the lot of the growing black population.

The dire predictions he now utters were unthinkable then to a man who had grown up in one of Boston's most prominent political families and studied government at Harvard University after undergraduate work at Williams College (class of 1952) and Boston College Law School (class of '55).

"I didn't even know what an urban crisis was," he said, looking back. He does now.

At almost every turn he admittedly has found himself frustrated by lack of money, a middle class backlash and the time consuming routine of the office.

"You wake up every single age. You just wonder how much yardage your city is going to lose," he said.

"You like to have a sense of purpose, direction, history, to know where you're going, what you're doing, some frame of reference in solving the problems.

"But it's like having someone walk in and every day having a waste paper basket dumped on your desk. And when you get all through sorting it and piecing it together and trying to unravel it, you come in the next morning and someone dumps another waste paper basket on your desk. And you never have a sense of knowing what it leads to and whether you are developing a pattern that's contributing to anything.

Despite his despair, White loves his job. He faces reelection this fall and he does not talk like a quitter.

"The fact of the matter is, surprisingly enough, there is no other place, frustrating as it is, where there's more action, more chance to do something even though you're never allowed to do it."

To look at the heart of downtown Boston with its narrow streets lined with expensive, picturesque town houses, modern government center of federal, city and state office buildings, new skyscrapers going up, it is hard to believe it is what White claims—a dying city.

Behind the facade, however, is another city, marred not only by its waterfront but by thousands of old decaying buildings; a city where one of five persons is on welfare, the highest rate in the nation; a city in such financial trouble White has put a freeze on wages and hiring, closed down his little city halls and even cut the budget of Boston City Hospital.

Even so, there will have to be a major property tax increase this year to balance the books.

"The cancer is spreading, I think, faster than anybody realizes," he said.

"The city today is not stationary, it's a growing ghetto, it's a ghetto that grows every single day across the face of the city."

Theoretically, at least, White thinks the cities can be saved. But the federal government and the states, he says, will have to pump in the neighborhood of $50 billion into urban areas in the next decade to do it.

And, money alone will not be enough, he adds. Indeed, funds from Washington over the past 10 years have had so many strings attached "that we haven't been able to adequately spend the money we get."

"Every city in the country is suffering from the same problems, but in different degrees. And priorities shift, daily, monthly, yearly.

"Give me the money and give the mayors the latitude to establish the priorities in spending it. Yes, then the cities can be saved. But both ingredients are necessary.

"There's a risk involved. And that's what happens if you draw a bum mayor and you've given him a lot of money and tremendous latitude to spend it. Well, he'll increase with rapidity the death of his city. But you have to gamble somewhere."

Use Of The Pillory Ended In 1905

CHICAGO (UPI) —Punishment by pillory was permitted in America long after it was abolished in Europe.

The French discontinued it in about 1832, according to Encyclopaedia Britannica, and the English abolished the practice in 1837.

U.S. statutes provides for its infliction until 1839 and Delaware, last state to use the pillory, did not abolish it until 1905.

Kentucky Police Prepare Whodunit

FRANKFORT, Ky. (UPI) — Police in Kentucky are working on a paperback whodunit, which is scheduled for release in July It's Kentucky's 1.70 uniform Crime Report, which statistically dissects crimes ranging from murder and robbery to vagrancy and vice.

In the past, the only statewide crime figures available on Kentucky were compiled by the FBI and reported annually in that organization's national crime reports.

Profile: Black Mayor, His City

By DONALD BERNS

EAST ST. LOUIS, Ill. (UPI) —James E. Williams, the first Negro mayor of East St. Louis, needs only to glance out his window at City Hall to see the magnitude of the problem facing him.

Across the street in the city's business district is a row of seven stores. A clothing store, shoe repair shop and fruit stand are still in business. But the other four are vacant, and two of them have boards over the windows.

NEW MAYOR — James E. Williams Sr., first Negro mayor of East St. Louis, chatted with outgoing Mayor Alvin G. Fields in the Mayor's Office this spring when he took the reins of government in the predominantly black city beset by economic woes.

(UPI Telephoto)

If Williams looks more closely, he can see in the window of one of the vacant stores a small sign boosting Virgil Calvert, the black machine politician Williams beat in the city election April 6.

The vacant stores symbolize what may be Williams' greatest challenge—the economic headaches of a predominantly Negro city.

"Businesses have been leaving the city for the last 10 years," Williams said in an interview. "Getting economic development moving again is a tough nut to crack, but we're going to crack it."

It is a very tough nut. The unemployment rate in East St. Louis is currently running at about 17 per cent. Many of the large industries that once provided the jobs for East St. Louis families have left the area.

The big aluminum and steel plants have vanished, and many of the electrical supply companies have gone. Swift & Co. is building an addition to its packing plant, but two other large packinghouses near the stockyards have left town.

East St. Louis used to serve as a major rail switching center, sorting out trains before they crossed the Mississippi River into the rail congestion of St. Louis. The train yards still sprawl over large portions of East St. Louis, but the decline of passenger service has cut the number of trains—and jobs.

East St. Louis' industrial decline has occurred chiefly over the past 15 years. Some blame high taxes and corruption in government. Although some of the plants that have closed have simply been discontinued by their companies, others have moved to places that offer more economic opportunity in an environment that is not as bleak as that of East St. Louis.

"What we need is a climate of confidence in city government," Williams said. "This is a factor businessmen consider and, if we can project the image of a more responsive government, we'll make some progress.

Fields, who is white, was mayor of East St. Louis for 20 years. Although the mayor's office in East St. Louis is supposed to be nonpartisan, Fields was a ranking Democrat and generally regarded as one of the most powerful party leaders in Illinois.

Fields beat a popular black candidate in the election four years ago, but this year he decided not to run after a group of Negro Democratic committeemen told the mayor they would not support him. Fields is 68 now and crippled with arthritis. Census statistics show that the city of 70,000 is now 70 per cent black and that the voter registration has reached 50 per cent black.

Even though Williams threatened to throw the politicians out of office, he began his term May 5 by reappointing the entire supervisory staff assembled by Fields "until further notice." He said that the move was necessary for the smooth transition of city government.

"We are not going to act intemperately or rashly in any dismissals," he said. "We are first going to evaluate performances."

Williams is still rolling on the momentum of his 2,500-vote win over Calvert in an election that had about 19,000 ballots. Calvert, a city councilman appointed by Fields and a political pro for much of his 50 years, had the backing of the powers who wanted to retain the old order, even if that order would change color at the top.

In his campaign, Williams puzzled politicians by snubbing the offered endorsements of both Republican and Democratic committeemen. He was inflexible in maintaining his independence.

Still, despite his professed distaste for political labels, Williams' campaign was given a sizeable boost in its final days when Gov. Richard B. Ogilvie, a Republican, made it known a Williams victory would mean a new state building in East St. Louis. Ogilvie made no bones that if Calvert won the project would go to Collinsville, Ill.

The theme of Williams' campaign was that, if he won, the people would take control of the government and throw out the politicians. Williams' campaign won the bulk of the white vote to give him his margin of victory.

"Not bad for someone born in a town where a black man couldn't be a policeman," Williams says with a smile.

The new mayor, now 49, was born in Maysville, Ky., which, he boasts, "is the hometown of Rosemary Clooney, a big star." He left Maysville as a youth and earned a bachelor's degree from Wilberforce College and a master's degree from Iowa State before teaching chemistry at Lincoln Ridge Institute in Kentucky. Starting during World War II, he worked for 20 years as civilian staff assistant to the commanding officer of the U.S. Army Depot in nearby Granite City, Ill.

St. Louis University school of Law. He finally earned his degree in 1962 and went to work for the St. Clair County Legal Aid Society. He became executive director of the society and held that job until he quit to campaign for mayor.

Williams is a short man with a trim body. His thick mustache adds to the sternness of his face, which lapses infrequently into a smile. His face is scarred on his chin and partially up his right cheek by a skin graft. He was burned as a child, and skin later was grafted to his face from his arm.

Williams is married to the former Lillian Croom and they have five children, Lillian, 19, Sherrie, 17, Theresa, 11, James Jr., 10, and Darcell, 9.

Even though the city's economic problems will probably be the enduring concern of Williams' adminisration, the new mayor would like to handle two other matters as top priorities.

"The first is the national recruitment of a chief of police," he said.

The Police Department is in less difficulty now than it was in the days of Buster Wortman, the Southern Illinois rackets boss who died about three years ago. Wortman sought to control everything on the east side of the St. Louis metropolitan area—including the East St. Louis Police Department.

He never quite succeeded but he did become a powerful force within organized crime. Hallmarks of Wortman's heyday were gang style killings and stylish mobster funerals. Wortman traveled with bodyguards and lived in a house surrounded by a moat.

The Wortman gang no longer exists. But organized crime still thrives in East St. Louis in the form of narcotics and gambling, especially the numbers racket.

Although the police force is more respectable now, four officers are currently under indictment in connection with the robbery of a dress shop. They were arrested after the stolen dresses were seen in a police squad car.

The more immediate concern of residents is street crime. About one of every 12 persons living in the city was a victim of a major crime last year. Persons living in other parts of the St. Louis metropolitan area avoid East St. Louis at night and may even drive out of the way to skirt the city.

Two Negro gangs, the Warlords and the Black Egyptians, maintain hegemony over their neighborhoods. The new police chief will be elbow deep in problems before he rolls up his sleeves. "The second priority is fiscal responsibility," Williams said. "We're going to review most minutely the fiscal structure of the city, and a fiscal affairs committee of bankers, lawyers and businessmen will be appointed to concentrate on the efficiency of the city's operation."

East St. Louis has about 500 city employes and a semimonthly payroll of roughly $170,000. City Treasurer Horace W. Mickens has said the city will not have enough money for the July 10 payday. The city has a deficit of about $1 million and practiced deficit financing for the 20 years that Fields was in office. Last year for the first time the city's bankers refused to take part in the deficit financing.

Although the problems facing Williams are formidable, he appears to have made a good start in tackling them.

"I like to think of myself as a worker in any job I have, and I've frequently had a couple or three jobs at the same time," Williams said. "I certainly won't be less of a worker as mayor."

New Teachers Gain From Suggestions

STORRS, Conn. (UPI)—Inexperienced teachers who have trouble keeping control in the classroom could greatly improve their efficiency with the help of consultant-observers, it was shown by a demonstration project guided by Dr. Norman L. Breyer of the University of Connecticut.

Reporting on the project, Dr. Breyer, an assistant professor of educational psychology, said two graduate students served as consultants in a fifth grade classroom in which a first-year teacher was having trouble controlling her class of 18. Both teacher performance and pupil behavior improved with suggestions from the consultant-observers were followed.

$75,000 Given In Death Case

PROVIDENCE, R.I. (UPI) — The family of a Hollywood movie set designer killed by a car driven by tobacco heiress Doris Duke was awarded $75,000 in damages Friday in a $1.2 million negligence suit against her.

A jury of seven women and five men made the award on its second day of deliberations in Rhode Island Superior Court.

The suit was filed by the brothers and sisters of Eduardo Tirella who was killed Oct. 7, 1966, as he was opening the gates of Miss Duke's Newport, R.I., estate.

The plaintiffs said the $1.2 million reflected the deceased's earning potential over a normal life span. Tirella was 42 at the time of the accident.

MANILA (UPI)—The Asian Development Bank (ADB) has brought $17.1 million (US) into the Philippines to meet part of its local administrative expenses since it started operations here four years ago, says ADB director Cornelio Balmaceda of the Philippines.

Wilderness Road Shuns Contracts

CHICAGO (UPI)—The noisy, smokey little bars dotting the neighborhoods of Chicago traditionally have been the scene of some of America's most creative and intensely personal music. Most of it has come from the South Side, where the muscians are black and the music they play is blue.

But the magic of Chicago, like that of only a few other cities—New Orleans, for example, or San Francisco—is powerful stuff; powerful enough to produce music that reaches beyond the invisible ghetto walls.

On Thursday nights at a particular bar on the city's mostly white North Side, you can hear a rock 'n' roll band called Wilderness Road. The four members of Wilderness Road didn't start out there—their first performances were mostly at outdoor rock concerts, including benefits for political organizations and various causes. They were among a score of bands that played for the thousands of young demonstrators who met in Washington during May.

Recently a scout from Vanguard Records visited that North Side bar to hear Wilderness Road; a little man from New York with wire rim glasses and a mop of curly hair. The band finished a set, the ring of the electric guitars faded into the clink of glasses, the four musicians waded through the crowd for a break—and the little man shook his head, glancing across the aisle with a grin.

"They're the best band I ever heard," he said.

And then he looked embarrassed and very nearly blushed. Talent scouts from big record companies aren't supposed to admit things like that—especially to reporters, especially when there are half a dozen other big record companies with their eyes on the same band.

But Wilderness Road is that good.

It's an unusual band, in a variety of ways. Four members: Nate Herman, guitar, lead vocal and the band's prime composer; Warren Lemming, lead guitar; Andy Haban, bass, and Tom Haban (Andy's brother), drums. All four sing.

One way Wilderness Road is unusual is that they have yet to record an album. There are a variety of reasons for this. One is that Wilderness Road plans—at least for what Warren Lemming calls the "foreseeable future"—to remain in Chicago, not departing for the West Coast at the first drop of a dollar sign. So far, they are not burning up with that notorious rock musician's disease, San Francisco Fever.

They also are holding back from recording or signing a binding contract until sure they are ready to cut an album that will be recognized as better than the week-to-week production of the American pop music mills.

"I think you could call it American music," Lemming said, "and American music is rock 'n' roll, as far as I'm concerned. But there's every kind of influence in the way we play. We have what you might call eclectic tastes."

Probably the strongest single influence on Wilderness Road's sound is country music, and particularly that purest branch of country called bluegrass; both Herman (on mandolin) and Lemming (on banjo) played in mountain music groups before discovering each other at a Chicago playhouse where Lemming worked as an actor and Herman was musical director.

Country music has, of course, always been a part of rock 'n' roll. The earliest white rock stars came directly from country ranks; much of Hank Williams' work belongs as much to the rock tradition as to the country.

In more recent years, some of the best (and therefore longest-surviving) rock bands, including the Byrds and the Grateful Dead, have turned to nearly pure country styles, while other country-oriented groups like The Band have made it entirely on that kind of a sound.

What makes all these bands alike, besides their country roots, is that they've added something more—made the sound original and personal. Such is the case, as well, with Wilderness Road. And they do it with a sense of humor, poking fun at just about everybody from the Woodstock Generation to radio evangelists, with satirical comedy routines throughout their stage performance.

"It's improvised, most of it," said Lemming, who serves as an informal spokesman for the band. "Then we hold the good stuff.

"A lot of our tunes are done in a particular context, so that a comedy bit is just something to enhance the tune. Like we do country-type tunes and one of the things we do is parody or satirize country music stations, which a lot of people have listened to and enjoyed for a long time."

Wilderness Road's humor is biting, irreverent, and might at times even be offensive to some. But such is the nature of satire.
